

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

A JOURNAL for FLORISTS. SEEDSMEN and NURSERYMEN

MOTHERS' DAY NUMBER

It certainly is a good looking job.
Of course we build it in 18 and 25-foot widths, and any lengths to suit.

More About the General Purpose Greenhouse for Private Places, Institutions and Cemeteries

You might say it was stripped for the running.

A house that has all the lastingness, all the lightness and all the growing advantages of our most expensive house, only that it is not so ornamental.

It lacks some of the grace and beauty of the curved eave, and the cornice effect that the moulded face gutter gives.

The construction of this General Purpose House makes it possible to cut down on the masonry cost without in any way affecting its staunchness and lastingness.

It's a clean cut practical purpose house, at a price most attractive.

We'll gladly write you fullest particulars, or why not get together and talk it over?

The same house in another location, just after a snow. The photo was taken from this end to show you the standard workroom, which is so made at the factory that it goes up in sections, making erection quick and satisfaction sure.

LILIUM SPECIOSUM RUBRUM

"Fritz Bahr Says"

(Extract from Florists' Exchange, Issue April 22, 1922)

RUBRUM LILIES

"Did you ever plant too many? For the average florist it means just this: He can get along without rubrum Lilies, even not miss them. On the other hand, those who once get into the habit of using them usually find them such a profitable and at the same time easily handled crop that they try each year to do all possible to prolong the flowering period, which with the help of cold storage bulbs is not hard to do. Every florist with a retail trade should grow rubrum Lilies. There is nothing finer for decorative work, for the corsage or the floral design. A plant grown in a pot makes a showy plant, and if not sold as such will frequently furnish you with flowers for three weeks from the time the first flower is ready to be cut until the last bud begins to open. The further away you are located from the larger cut flower markets, the more valuable are rubrum Lilies in your own establishment, the more necessary it is for you to try and have a few plants to cut from. To plant cold storage bulbs now into 5-in. or 6-in. pots is about all the work you will have with them, outside of watering. They will grow almost anywhere in or outdoors, and bloom in late Summer. Try this for a change: Plant in 6-in. pots now; let the plants come along in a cool house. About May 15 take them outdoors and plant pot and all in a bed or coldframe, deep enough to cover the top of the pot about 4 in. When in flower use the individual blossoms, or if you plant out leave them out all Winter. Every plant will flower again the next year and better than before."

Mr. Bahr is a "live" florist-grower in Highland Park, Ill., and a recognized authority on matters horticultural.

Prize for Roses Won by New Entry

Traendly & Schenck received $500.00 for what is called best exhibit yet seen. First in the big 1000 Rose competition. A dark horse as far as flower shows are concerned.

Traendly & Schenck, of New York, took the $500.00 prize for what was said to be the finest Rose exhibit ever shown at the Grand Central Palace.

However, the above prize was won three times at three shows.

For a good profitable business you should have the best the market affords.

By handling the First Prize Rose Stock, you cannot go wrong—you will also have the satisfaction of being able to inform your customers that you handle only

Don't Be Caught Short

Without our patented cardboard Wreath Forms

Experience has shown us that most of our trade has paid too much for their Wreath Forms because they held back their orders until shipment had to be made by express. This increased the cost of the merchandise from 25 to 35 per cent. Besides, our customers lost business because they did not have the goods on hand—their customers would not wait when delivery could not be made at once. The profit on such specialties comes through having the goods on hand when wanted. It does not pay to approach the Christmas holidays with little goods on hand.

Therefore we suggest to you that you place your orders now for fall requirements in Christmas Wreath Forms.

Send for our line of samples of cardboard Wreath Forms as illustrated in this advertisement. Do it now. Prices and samples will be sent gratis on request. We make the following sizes:

Wreath Forms—4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 16-inch.

Star Forms—4, 6, 7, 9 and 12-inch.

Heart Forms—6, 8 and 7-inch.

Cross Forms—14x21-inch and 18x30-inch.

Write us today about your requirements.

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

About three years ago I bought, for the first time, a bundle of your Tissue Paper from your traveling salesman. Whilst I did realize at the time that the price was quite low I did not, until afterwards find out that this paper was to save me quite a bit of money and labor. I found that your paper being glazed on one side was so moisture proof that it replaced Wax Paper entirely in the boxing of my flowers for retail delivery.

I believe that you are the only firm carrying this quality as I have repeatedly tried to get some when short, from several wholesale houses in the East. It seems to me that you have, in this paper, a wonderful opportunity to save the Florists real money and I know that there are hundreds of florists, especially in the smaller towns who will be tickled to find a substitute for wax paper at a cost lower than ordinary tissue paper. I fully realize that this will mean that your firm will sell less wax paper but the Florist will save money and that is what he has to do these days or the profits will dwindle.

I am, yours very truly,

Ivar Ringdahl

We are still selling this tissue paper. Another car just came in. It is the best in the country for florists' use. Put up 400 $11.75 24x36 sheets to the ream, 10 reams to a bundle---special at PER BUNDLE

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MOVING ON WITH MOTHERS' DAY

To those who put the most minutes in the hours, Mothers' day offers gilt-edged opportunities. Knowing how to angle for business is the special knowledge of those most successful. Here is told how the public may be brought into the florist's shop this Mothers' day.

UPON consideration, one will realize that there are few sentiments that appeal universally. A short while ago the world seethed in war and hot, bellicose blood moved millions to hate—but not everybody. Intermittently the fickle fire of politics flares in the desires of some and thereby offices are won with elation and lost with chagrin—but not by everybody. Some in the span of life find a second love, the kind of love upon which romantic novels are built—but not everybody. So one might go on, indefinitely, naming sentiments confined to different groups at different times.

There is one exception—one sentiment that is universal. The love for mother, whether she be in the present life or in memory, permeates to every corner of the earth. For this first sentiment, which takes its beginning with the advent of life, is the only affection and emotion that remains unaltered to the end of life. The centuries have proved the fact. It requires no further evidence.

Says a fragment of history, "In the age of Shakespeare and Queen Bess, England designated a day to be known as 'Mothering day,' and the first flowers of field and garden were picked to bring to mother. It was a day to decorate the home of the living and the resting place of the dear departed. It was left to America to revive this tribute of gratitude to mothers."

History Applied.

"Left to America!" These words recall more recent history. Recall when, in 1908, Miss Anna Jarvis conceived the idea of remembering mother with flowers on a given day. Recall how the florists awakened to the idea. Recall how The Review played its part by first showing the trade the opportunities of the day and the magic of coöperative advertising. Recall how the rhyme, "For mothers living, flowers bright; for mother's memory, flowers white," developed thousands of buyers.

But Mothers' day is

The Mother on the Cover

Of all the portrayals of mother on stage and screen, that of Mrs. Mary Carr in the motion picture production, "Over the Hill," produced by William Fox, has appealed most to popular and critical taste. Mrs. Carr won wide fame through this film, being repeatedly called the "wonderful mother." What more appropriate cover could appear on this Mothers' day number of The Review than the representation of Mrs. Carr as the "wonderful mother" with flowers recognized as symbolic of the day in her arms? Through the courtesy of the Fox Film Corporation, Mrs. Carr posed especially for this cover illustration for The Review.

with us in the present and the future. It is with others than those in the trade. Every year governors, legislatures, city councils, churches and other bodies ask publicly for the observance of the second Sunday in May. With the florists there is much chance for further development of this day and a greater-than-ever opportunity for real service and resultant profits. There is room for constructive development. How has it been done? How can it be done?

For Mothers' day, it is absolutely necessary for the grower to produce a large quantity of moderately priced stock and for the retailer to carry that stock, in order that the means of honoring that universal possession, a mother, may be available for everybody. When once this stock has been produced, the next step is to advertise. Advertise, then, but do not so much stress the stock that is offered as emphasize the sentiment of the day and the fact that these flowers are for mother. Get the idea of flowers for mother into the hearts of the public—and the butcher, the baker, the candlestick-maker will buy orchids or marigolds, if nothing else is available.

Those who have enjoyed the best business assert consistently that advertising is the "open sesame" of the day, and these persons are practical florists who practice what they preach, to the tune of success. They, if anybody, ought to know. Their example is good to follow.

Upon examination of specimens from various sections of the country, the advertising done is found to fall naturally into two groups—that done by an individual firm for its own benefit and that form known as coöperative advertising, which makes for the benefit of the many.

Advertise Early.

There are a number of ways for the individual concern to make its facilities known to the public, and there is an unlimited field for the conception of fresh ideas to get attention in the columns of the local newspaper. In a majority of cases those who use these most successfully insert advertisements from three to five days before Mothers' day and run them right up until the day itself. Last year the Pershing Flower Shop, at Logansport, Ind., did this. E. H. Pershing, the proprietor, described the results later, as follows:

"Our advertising was based on the percentage we could afford to spare out of the entire proceeds, should we sell out at prices fixed on the entire stock we bought. We sold out completely before 8 p. m. the Saturday preceding Mothers' day. We ordered more flowers for Sunday morning and sold out before 11 a. m. We turned away many customers and had to stop selling for two hours Saturday afternoon until we caught up with orders. One of the last customers Sunday took all our roses without stems. Dozens of men went away wearing a spray of valley. A mechanic in his working clothes bought two orchids, the last flowers on the premises."

In addition to several large advertisements, the above firm arranged with the local newspaper to insert some half-dozen notes, one at the head or at the end of a column here and there. "Mothers' day is Sunday. Order flowers Saturday—telegraph service for all whose mothers reside out of town," was the message.

There are many cases where distinctiveness counts and, certainly, there is a premium on a good idea. Various kinds of circulars can be distributed to those on the mailing list. Last year Faneher's Greenhouses, of Binghamton, N. Y., circulated small blotters, on which was the picture of a little boy waving a rose aloft and shouting, "Flowers for Mother!" McKellar's Flower Shop, of Columbus, O., sent out still smaller blotters, 2x3 inches in size. On each blotter was a dainty scene, to the left of which appeared the admonition, "Don't forget mother." Max Sehling last year distributed artistic cards, 4½x7 inches in size, on which were hand-lettered, in the style of his newspaper advertisements, the words, "Your mother thought of you every day. Think of her on Mothers' day. Order flowers for her now, to be delivered wherever she may be, in New York or a thousand miles away." To this was added, "You and your friends are invited to call and receive a boutonniere with our compliments."

The ordinary envelope can be put to good advertising use, as shown last year by Howard E. Gates, of Anaheim, Cal., who had printed on each envelope a reminder of Mothers' day under an appropriate cut. These letters go far and wide and create much publicity.

Working Together.

Coöperative advertising is more comprehensive and more constructive to the trade as a whole than any other form. For instance, a number of retailers and growers advertising on a full page of a daily paper exert an influence for all florists. And this pays. The advertisement used last year by Knoxville florists came at a high figure, but it brought results that made the original cost of the advertisement seem diminutive. The same was done in many other places with equal results. St. Louis has been setting a leading pace in coöperative achievement this year, as was witnessed at Easter, when more than $4,000 was spent by growers and twenty-five retailers on double-page advertisements in the local press, with big results. St. Louis already has her Mothers' day plans laid. Such advertising is paying everywhere.

Organizations throughout the country have also done much to build up the day. Last year at a meeting of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association it was decided to conduct a small advertising campaign to promote the use of flowers for Mothers' day and, according to the secretary, within a few minutes subscriptions were made among the men present amounting to more than $600. This is exemplary of what is taking place in many places. Are you alive to the situation?

This last Easter was a record-breaker. And there is no reason why Mothers' day should not be just as great a success. Advertising flowers for the second Sunday in May tells in dollars. For a number of years The Review has urged florists to make the most of the day, to add to its sales and to its profits. Those who have put strong efforts into advertising the day have made money. This year make your advertisements business-pullers. Make "Mother" preëminent. Introduce a good picture of a mother, perhaps like that on the cover of this issue; word your advertisement well, and look for results.

WHY EARLY ACTION COUNTS.

Capitalizing Time.

"I must take time, for I am in a hurry," said Alexander the Great. "Haste makes waste" admonishes an old and proved proverb. Says another, "The early bird catches the worm." All these wise bits of advice strike like triphammers in the ears of the florists who have seen hundreds of would-be buyers turned away because of a shortage of stock, and the thinking tradesman who learns lessons from the trend of business is planning to "take time by the forelock" this coming Mothers' day.

And with good reason. The florists' trade has reached a point where, to care for the demand, generalship is required. And the future florist, from all indications, will be he who thinks out the campaign—and gets started early. Your flower-loving citizen who used to dash into a store at the last moment and get his order filled satisfactorily, is alive to the fact that in the future he will have to order early. Some buyers are already ordering two or three days in advance. Since "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," the wise florist will campaign for these early orders. If he does this, the last-minute demand will be decreased and the sum total of profits will be greater and more sensibly achieved.

Practice Proves.

Examples of the lesson learned are without number. This Easter, Mrs. T. A. Moseley, of Kansas City, Kan., made what the firm calls a "clean sweep," and more stock could have been sold, had it been obtainable. In contemplation of the big success, the firm writes: "There is one important matter to be learned from this last Easter's business. The tardy customers of former years showed they had learned the lesson of experience, by placing their orders early. One lady, especially, ordered thirty days ahead of time, since she was disappointed last year and 'got left' in her selections. The advantage florists gain by placing their orders in advance is greater assurance in quantity buying. This Easter demand was greater in most cases than the supply at the greenhouses."

Getting ready early, in its deepest sense, implies preparation at all times. Accurate notations of what conditions are this Mothers' day—the demand, the supply, the public's attitude, etc.—will go a long way in laying a firm foundation on which to base judgment at future holidays. And for these occasions do that advertising early.

The McCarron Flower Shop knows. This year the firm began Easter advertising early and, as a result of the plan, the company can state enthusiastically: "Now we do know the cause of the tremendous business that we had at Easter, especially in corsage work, where we averaged eight corsages to any of the other orders. Our early advertisements in the local newspapers began about a month before Easter and we kept this campaign up until April 15. By advertising early we gave people the oppor-

FOR DISTANT MOTHERS.

Developing Telegraph Business.

Mothers' day is approaching. This is a day when the mind of the public will be highly receptive to the arguments in favor of the use of the telegraph service. This is a day when the telegraph service for flowers should be pushed to its utmost. The ties that bind play is more easily grasped than any other method of explanation.

How Max L. Cohen Coöperates.

An Easter window display, designed and arranged by Max L. Cohen, of the Jackson Floral Shop, Chicago, is depicted below. One glance at the Easter cut reveals a complete cycle of thought created in the mind of the observer, or the prospective customer, which terminates by directing the footsteps of the person into the store to place an order. The small boy fishing, placed so prominently in the foreground, recalls memories to the observer of his or her childhood; memories of childhood days never fail to produce thoughts of mother and all the worry and care she suffered to bring one up. The flower pots, vases of flowers and baskets filled with choice over $100, but Mr. Cohen said that he had received more than ten times the amount of this expenditure in telegraph orders. The manager of each store kept the windows lighted all night. One order was received by Mr. Cohen for flowers to be sent to Liverpool, England, and one went to Edinburgh, Scotland. This indicates what can be accomplished by coöperation. In order to sell a thing, you must be able either to render a service to your customer or you must be able to show him where he can profit by doing the thing which will be to your own interest. By coöperating with the telegraph company you can make a more extensive campaign and reach a larger proportion of the people. It is simply a matter of educating the public to the use of telegraph wires for a purpose which most people have heretofore not known about.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Randall Received Certificate.

Charles Russell, who acted as secretary to the judges, is full of apologies for an accidental omission in the list of awards in the trade section of a certificate of merit awarded to the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for a magnificent display demonstrating an up-to-date furnishing of a retail flower shop and accessories in connection with the same. The omission is occasion for regret, as the exhibit was most notable in the trade section.

Vouchers are being drawn for the premiums awarded at the show and, with the vouchers for the subscribers to the guarantee fund, are being started through the regular channel for verification, first to the chairman of the committee, thence to the president, and later to the treasurer, which course may account for a little delay in the ultimate receipt of checks.

AMERICAN LEGION EMBLEMS.

In the wake of the opportunity offered by the American Legion's coöperating with the S. A. F. to promote Mothers' day, as explained in last week's issue of The Review, comes what might be called a complementary chance. Undoubtedly, a good many florists throughout the country will be asked to make up the Legion insignia, composed of a star enclosed in a circle, with a sort of fringed border. In the December 1, 1921, issue of The Review there is an explanation of how an American Legion emblem was made for a certain occasion. An illustration of the emblem also appears in that issue. Reference to the description there given will show how the American Legion emblem is done.

There is also the American Legion Auxiliary, composed of women, which has its own emblem. This is the same as the American Legion emblem, with the exception that where the latter mentioned has in the center a star surrounded by a wreath and bearing the initials, "U. S.," the former has only the plain star. In the case referred to an 18-inch wreath was used and the star inside it was made of yellow immortelles, the other flowers used being red, white and blue.

young folks to their parents are not broken when young people strike out into the world for themselves; if anything, these ties become stronger. A co-operative effort to get telegraph orders, directed in that section of the city where the population is the most dense and where the people have not become accustomed to the use of the telegraph service, will produce results beyond the expectations of the coöperators.

Rendering a Service.

In advertising the telegraph service you really have something to sell. People will use this means of remembering their mothers because it is convenient and economical. In order to produce these results, however, the public must be told how to do it; the fact that flowers can be telegraphed to all parts of the world in a short time must be explained to them. You will need to sell this service to the public in much the same manner as any other merchant sells his wares. "You've got to tell them what you've got and how to use it," said one man. One of the quickest and most effective ways of "telling them what you've got and how to use it" is to make a display. The meaning of a dis-plants and flowers surrounding the central figure are suggestive and appropriate gifts for mother and the thought that Mothers' day is approaching occurs to the spectator. He, or she, would like to send mother some of these beautiful flowers, but the inconvenience and uncertainty connected with sending them are so great that he thinks of sending something else instead. Then the eye catches the sign which tells how flowers can be sent by telegraph to any part of the country; the passer goes into the store to learn more about it, with the result that he places an order and leaves the store with a satisfaction that mother will be remembered.

The district commercial superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Co. saw the window display and stepped into the store to compliment Mr. Cohen on his striking and beautiful window. Mr. Cohen then asked him if he would object to having the window display duplicated in the windows of the south side offices of the Western Union Telegraph Co. The superintendent was delighted with the idea and told Mr. Cohen to go ahead with the work. Three of the windows of the company were trimmed in this manner, and the expense amounted to

NEW ART IN DECORATION.

Turns Loss into Profit.

Floristry, because of its variation, makes work a pleasure and is inspiring. This is one reason why florists who love their profession are continually on their mettle to produce new and better work, may it be for funeral or for wedding, table decoration or gift basket. No matter how much there is of it, it is easily accomplished when it can be done within our own four walls, but the moment there is outside work to be done—for instance, house or church decorations—it becomes strenuous. Should such work happen on a day when business is generally going strong, then any organization is liable to be in peril of disruption. One has to rush through work and one doesn't take care of stock as one should. Flowers are often used under these conditions with less discrimination than usual. The impression one has at the moment makes him overestimate the work on hand and stock is bought in unnecessary quantities and it is not handled right. This is especially the case where decorations are made in the old style and of the old type—where extra work, with packing of palms, sending them out and carrying them into the church or into the house, possibly a few stories high, takes much time of the employees. When there is a rush of business, all that time is taken away from other just as important work. We all have undergone this kind of disruption. Only the florist who has greenhouses in connection with his shop and from them can draw several extra men to handle palms and other material, has comparatively easy work. But every florist, with greenhouses or without greenhouses, knows after he has finished such a decoration that it is by no means all profit, and often, through careless and overanxious estimating, the expenses so exceed the return that the game is a losing one.

Small Florist Hardest Hit.

What effort has ever been made to offset the disadvantages of these cases? Extremely little. In an ordinary flower shop these cases are few and far between, and when one such hard day, with much work and little profit, is past, it is often forgotten and not remembered until another happens. It is always the little florist who is hardest hit. When he learns of the larger florists making big decorations, he wonders how much money there is in it. He does not know that a palm or any other kind of plant will stand only a certain strain and can be used only a few times for decorative purposes and that the loan of larger plants, in proportion to their price, does not give the right return for their cost. Irrespective of expense, he tries to arrange so that he can rent palms in case of need. Persons who give an order for a decoration prefer to place it with a florist who has greenhouses, irrespective of whether they are his customers at other times. The florist who has no greenhouses, anxious to show his ability to make the decoration even though he has to borrow the plants, often secures the order by underestimating, not because he wants to beat the other fellow so much as because he overlooks the difficulties which arise. In securing the order he counts transportation, extra labor, etc., but in most cases he forgets an important item, the dismantling after the affair is over, and most florists forget that the plants are damaged most in this process.

Experience is the best teacher, and no one knows better and no one has had more experience than the one who has made mistakes. I am one of them. Luckily, I am one of the few who make a mistake only once and immediately try to find a way to prevent such mistakes occurring again. In early years I found that I was at a disadvantage as against the fellow who had his own greenhouses and plants. I found that low charges hardly paid for delivery and calling for plants, including the wrapping paper and labor. If the charges are based on a fair profit, the customer believes himself to be overcharged, because he does not understand that the change of atmosphere and the packing and repacking damages the palms to such an extent that the price charged is not compensation for the depreciation of the palms or other plants.

Experience's Lesson.

This is one reason why I tried to introduce a different type of decoration. It was a selfish reason, but I had to have

Experience's Lesson.

This is one reason why I tried to introduce a different type of decoration. It was a selfish reason, but I had to have an unselfish reason to induce customers to let me decorate for them differently than they were accustomed to. So I expressed myself accordingly. I stated: "At a wedding or reception in a house you clear out of the rooms all unnecessary furniture. Why? To have space. Then the florist brings a lot of plants for decorating and takes up more room than you saved." Another reason I put forth: "You and your friends feel as strangers in a house in which you lived and which, possibly, they knew, for many years, because the decorator did not try to preserve the home atmosphere." These arguments helped me to introduce my kind of decorations. The cost of the old type of decoration did not show favorably in comparison with the cost and results of my modern work.

Satisfies Florist and Customer.

I gained both ways with my introductions. I gave the customer more satisfaction and made a profitable transaction. With churches or hotels it was not any different. With the palm decoration, as in former times, or the banking of flowers—which is possible in a church only in one space, at the front, where the ceremony takes place—decorations look more or less all alike, and if a guest went to several weddings at the same place he got the impression of having been at the same wedding several times over.

Formerly we made large, showy groups of plants, disregarding architecture of building and disregarding coloring. When we gave an estimate we didn't pay any attention to the time of the wedding, whether it was to be in daylight or at evening by artificial light. We didn't pay attention to many other details. At the present time the florist has to be certain of all details of surroundings selected for a wedding ceremony, and the wedding decoration has to be made accordingly. In one place flowering plants or cut flowers arranged in the proper way will give a harmonious effect and will make a cheerful decoration. In some places a decoration of green appears gloomy and unnatural, and vice-versa. Where the building is beautiful and in good proportion, we can follow the architecture. Where we have to contend with walls which are dilapidated or discolored, as is sometimes the case in old country churches where the proper care has not been taken of the building, we have to have a green background. We florists should have the ability to brighten gloomy buildings and to tone down too bright ones. Our instinct should teach us to create an atmosphere where there is none.

For Illustration.

We can accomplish wonders with any kind of material. Assuming that we have a plain wooden country church, where architectural beauty was disregarded and where there are many windows, we can treat the walls as if they were the walls of the outside of a house, covering them with vines or any sort of green, something similar to a wall overgrown with ampelopsis. We can intertwine, with the green, climbing roses or any other flowers to give color where the building is dull, using only green where the space is bright and sunny. Place window boxes covered with natural bark in the windows, filling them with flowers or with branches of flowering shrubs or flowering bedding plants. Use for flanking the front similar boxes on stands the height of the window sill, giving it also a background of softer green.

A decoration of this kind is much more impressive than groups of palms. This type of decoration will impress the customer more and give a better background for the bridal party, and because the material is all sold and not loaned, it is easier for the florist to estimate and is more profitable to him. It also gives less work and takes little effort to dismantle. It is the best chance for a florist to advertise, and this is one reason why he should put every effort into it. A decoration for a wedding should never be severe or cold. It is important for us florists to consider the guests, not alone the bridal party or the person who placed the order. Stepping into a decorated space, everyone should feel the sacredness of the ceremony for which this space is prepared. One should not need to hear a good musician playing Lohengrin to feel touched. Our work should impress the holiness of the space on the minds of those present without any tones. A florist can make and unmake with his decoration. He can uplift and he can depress, and those of the poets who wrote about the "might of song" might have written about the might of flowers. There is no other profession which comes so near to human nature. There is no other profession so closely connected with life, and because of that, floral art is above every other art. To sculptors and artists, to poets and laymen, flowers are and always will be an inspiration.

Hitch to a Star.

In closing, I remember a little incident from my childhood. I was only a little tot, when late one afternoon I wandered away. An old man, who was my first teacher, found me a mile distant from the house, in the fields. He asked me, "Where did you think of going?" And I showed him a big red ball, the descending sun, on the horizon. He said, "That's right. Always try to catch up with the sun, and never give up." I cannot help comparing that admonition with our object. The farther we go in our work, the higher our aims in our art, the greater our accomplishments. The more effort we florists make, the more art, the more knowledge we put in our work, that much more beauty, more harmony and more love it will mean to the world.

COAL FREIGHT MAY GO DOWN.

The freight on the florist's coal next season will be lower than it was this year if an expected decision is handed down by the interstate commerce commission. The rate reductions are expected to include a ten per cent cut in the freight rate on coal, the continuation as a permanent feature of the ten per cent cut made in the rate of agricultural products and a similar reduction in rates on certain building materials.

The cut in coal rates will save consumers approximately $110,000,000, according to estimates made by operating officials figuring up on an annual movement of about 450,000,000 tons of coal in the United States. The saving will average about 25 cents per ton. The voluntary reduction in rates on agricultural products made by the railroads last December is expected to be continued despite possible objections from carriers in the northwest. This cut was estimated to save the farmers about $55,000,000 a year. In addition, it is believed that the commission will declare for a ten per cent cut on certain building materials, such as brick, structural steel and stone. It is conceded that this item may run as high as $90,000,000.

It is explained that the reductions, if announced immediately by the commission, will not become effective with the necessary thirty days' notice until June 1 at the earliest. Any further delays on the part of the rate-making body may result in the postponement of the effective date until July 1, when it is thought that the labor board may be ready with its decision in the appeals of the managers for reductions in the going rates of pay for all classes of railroad labor. It is thought the saving afforded the railroads by the reductions in wages will about approximate the loss of revenue in these rate cuts, which total in amount $250,000,000 a year, it is estimated.

That there will be no horizontal reduction in freight rates by the commission is a foregone conclusion, it is said.

A COMPETITOR FOR LADDIE?

A most delightful young lady is touring America, calling on leading concerns from coast to coast, and soon is to be followed by a carnation bearing her name, the variety to be offered as a competitor and probable successor of Laddie. The young lady is Miss Eileen Low. She is the daughter of the head of the internationally known firm of Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Middlesex, England. Stuart Low & Co. have grown American varieties of carnations for many years and have raised numerous novelties which have become standard sorts in England. In the seedling they have named for Miss Low they believe they have a successor to Laddie. The flower is of maximum size, resembles Laddie in color and, as grown in England, possesses a freedom of bloom much greater than the American variety grown under similar conditions. American carnations occupy a leading position in England, but no English carnation ever has come to America and an unselfish reason to induce customers to let me decorate for them differently than they were accustomed to. So I expressed myself accordingly. I stated: "At a wedding or reception in a house you clear out of the rooms all unnecessary furniture. Why? To have space. Then the florist brings a lot of plants for decorating and takes up more room than you saved." Another reason I put forth: "You and your friends feel as strangers in a house in which you lived and which, possibly, they knew, for many years, because the decorator did not try to preserve the home atmosphere." These arguments helped me to introduce my kind of decorations. The cost of the old type of decoration did not show favorably in comparison with the cost and results of my modern work.

Satisfies Florist and Customer.

I gained both ways with my introductions. I gave the customer more satisfaction and made a profitable transaction. With churches or hotels it was not any different. With the palm decoration, as in former times, or the banking of flowers which is possible in a church only in one space, at the front, where the ceremony takes place, decorations look more or less all alike, and if a guest went to several weddings at the same place he got the impression of having been at the same wedding several times over.

Formerly we made large, showy groups of plants, disregarding architecture of building and disregarding coloring. When we gave an estimate we didn't pay any attention to the time of the wedding, whether it was to be in daylight or at evening by artificial light. We didn't pay attention to many other details. At the present time the florist has to be certain of all details of surroundings selected for a wedding ceremony, and the wedding decoration has to be made accordingly. In one place flowering plants or cut flowers arranged in the proper way will give a harmonious effect and will make a cheerful decoration. In some places a decoration of green appears gloomy and unnatural, and vice-versa. Where the building is beautiful and in good proportion, we can follow the architecture. Where we have to contend with walls which are dilapidated or discolored, as is sometimes the case in old country churches where the proper care has not been taken of the building, we have to have a green background. We florists should have the ability to brighten gloomy buildings and to tone down too bright ones. Our instinct should teach us to create an atmosphere where there is none.

For Illustration.

We can accomplish wonders with any kind of material. Assuming that we have a plain wooden country church, where architectural beauty was disregarded and where there are many windows, we can treat the walls as if they were the walls of the outside of a house, covering them with vines or any sort of green, something similar to a wall overgrown with ampelopsis. We can intertwine, with the green, climbing roses or any other flowers to give color where the building is dull, using only green where the space is bright and sunny. Place window boxes covered with natural bark in the windows, filling them with flowers or with branches of flowering shrubs or flowering bedding plants. Use for flanking the front similar boxes on stands the height of the window sill, giving it also a background of softer green.

A decoration of this kind is much more impressive than groups of palms. This type of decoration will impress the customer more and give a better background for the bridal party, and because the material is all sold and not loaned, it is easier for the florist to estimate and is more profitable to him. It also gives less work and takes little effort to dismantle. It is the best chance for a florist to advertise, and this is one reason why he should put every effort into it. A decoration for a wedding should never be severe or cold. It is important for us florists to consider the guests, not alone the bridal party or the person who placed the order. Stepping into a decorated space, everyone should feel the sacredness of the ceremony for which this space is prepared. One should not need to hear a good musician playing Lohengrin to feel touched. Our work should impress the holiness of the space on the minds of those present without any tones. A florist can make and unmake with his decoration. He can uplift and he can depress, and those of the poets who wrote about the "might of song" might have written about the might of flowers. There is no other profession which comes so near to human nature. There is no other profession so closely connected with life, and because of that, floral art is above every other art. To sculptors and artists, to poets and laymen, flowers are and always will be an inspiration.

Hitch to a Star.

In closing, I remember a little incident from my childhood. I was only a little tot, when late one afternoon I wandered away. An old man, who was my first teacher, found me a mile distant from the house, in the fields. He asked me, "Where did you think of going?" And I showed him a big red ball, the descending sun, on the horizon. He said, "That's right. Always try to catch up with the sun, and never give up." I cannot help comparing that admonition with our object. The farther we go in our work, the higher our aims in our art, the greater our accomplishments. The more effort we florists make, the more art, the more knowledge we put in our work, that much more beauty, more harmony and more love it will mean to the world.

COAL FREIGHT MAY GO DOWN.

The freight on the florist's coal next season will be lower than it was this year if an expected decision is handed down by the interstate commerce commission. The rate reductions are expected to include a ten per cent cut in the freight rate on coal, the continuation as a permanent feature of the ten per cent cut made in the rate of agricultural products and a similar reduction in rates on certain building materials.

The cut in coal rates will save consumers approximately $110,000,000, according to estimates made by operating officials figuring up on an annual movement of about 450,000,000 tons of coal in the United States. The saving will average about 25 cents per ton. The voluntary reduction in rates on agricultural products made by the railroads last December is expected to be continued despite possible objections from carriers in the northwest. This cut was estimated to save the farmers about $55,000,000 a year. In addition, it is believed that the commission will declare for a ten per cent cut on certain building materials, such as brick, structural steel and stone. It is conceded that this item may run as high as $90,000,000.

It is explained that the reductions, if announced immediately by the commission, will not become effective with the necessary thirty days' notice until June 1 at the earliest. Any further delays on the part of the rate-making body may result in the postponement of the effective date until July 1, when it is thought that the labor board may be ready with its decision in the appeals of the managers for reductions in the going rates of pay for all classes of railroad labor. ## OPEN LETTERS from READERS

HOSPITAL DAY.

All florists' organizations should make it a point to get behind Hospital day, May 12. Remember the mothers in the hospitals. Adopt some plan of coöperation that will encourage this day.

While the day at present comes at an inopportune time, being so near Mothers' day, plans are now under way, and progressing favorably, to induce the hospital association to postpone Hospital day to some time in June. I believe that with the right kind of aggressive work along this line, this can be brought about next year.

Hospital day lends itself to sentiment to an unusual degree. It has the same qualities that Mothers' day has and, if promoted by the florists, can be made another big holiday.

For this reason, it is urged that all florists and florists' organizations do what they can to coöperate this year, in order to hold the interest of the public, so that we can make something out of the day, if it is postponed until June next year. George Asmus.

GROW BETTER STOCK.

After reading the advertisement written by John Davey, in The Review of April 20, on the theme, "Do It Right or Not at All," I am convinced that it is a good motto. If all florists would try to do it right, they would soon see that it would pay to grow less and better stock.

I have been a grower and foreman for eighteen years and have found that a great many florists try to produce too much stock, with as little help as possible, with the result that the stock is neglected and the quality is resultantly inferior. For more than a year I have been chief gardener at the National Military Home, at Danville, Ill., and I have had a greater chance to do things right, to my way of thinking, than ever before. And I am proud of my success in growing, both in quantity and quality.

Surprising have been the quality and quantity of roses from 1-year-old plants. And for sweet peas—I feel reluctant to state the number of blooms obtained from so small a space as I have, for fear that I should not be believed. Carnations have been away ahead of my expectations. I have nine varieties; many of the blooms measured four and one-fourth inches across and Laddie, four and one-half inches. All the carnations were grown in four and one-half inches of soil. They began to bloom early; they are good, healthy and clean; they have not been off crop all winter.

Equally surprising success have I had with blooming plants and bedding plants. And the secret of it all is doing it right from the start; first, in the making and mixture of the soil; then in the proper feeding and watering, etc. When all these details are carefully attended to, good stock will be the result.

My success in producing better stock has caused me to love flowers more than ever before. The increase of love for the flowers and nature makes one desire to grow better stock. L. B. Hensley.

KEEP THE PRICES DOWN.

Mothers' day is close upon us, and all florists look toward that day with a smile. It is, indeed, a great day in sentiment, as well as for the florists. But the candy men are going out after the business in a strong way. They are advertising, "Make Mothers' Day a Candy Day."

It seems to me that these men will succeed to some extent, and, in a few years, the day will be lost to the flower growers. The prices for cut flowers and plants, in my opinion, have been too high for Mothers' day in previous years. The flower buyers are kicking, and I do not blame them. They can buy carnations for 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen from now until a few days before Mothers' day, and then suddenly they find that the prices have been increased to $2 and $2.50, while the day following Mothers' day buyers are again able to procure flowers at the first rate mentioned.

I am confident that the candy men will not run the price of candy up for Mothers' day. It is true that candy and flowers are different. Florists cannot speed up production on flowers for one day, as the candy makers do. I also agree that the supply and demand for flowers governs the price, but it is wrong to double or triple the price on anything just for one certain day.

I hope that the growers, wholesalers and retailers of our trade will view this matter in the same light as I do and stabilize prices before it is too late; before Mothers' day has slipped away from the florists' business, after we have all worked so hard to make this day a national day for flowers.

J. Ewart.

Summerville, S. C.—Though J. W. Heisenbuttel has been in the florists' trade but a short time, he is doing a fine business.

Waynesville, N. C.—F. M. Lindfors anticipates opening a small florists' shop here. He was formerly manager of the Eau Claire Greenhouses, of Columbia, N. C.

Summit, Miss.—Karl Fach, Jr., is planning to erect another greenhouse in the fall. His calla lilies are in the height of their blooming season and his Easter lilies are looking well.

WATCH THE CLOCK

DAYLIGHT SAVING BEGINS.

Note Differences in Time!

Daylight saving began Sunday, April 30, in more than 500 of the nation's largest cities, in about 200 smaller cities or rural communities and in every nook or corner of several states, notably on the Atlantic seaboard. Florists who telegraph to the wholesale markets in large cities should remember that the time in most of them is an hour ahead of standard time. Those who send retail telegraph orders, particularly for funerals, should be mindful of the difference of an hour made by the adoption of daylight saving in many communities.

Railroads will operate on standard time unless a bill now before Congress, which would give them permission to use daylight saving timetables, is passed.

New York state, after an active year of organized farm opposition, is not following in the footsteps of its large cities. New York, Albany and Buffalo will be on daylight time, but such places as Syracuse and Rochester, agricultural as well as industrial centers, have repealed local ordinances and will continue to live by the old clock during the summer.

Clocks Ahead in Cities.

In New York city, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Washington and Chicago the clocks have gone ahead an hour. And in all these cities action by the local councils was unanimous, except where state laws took care of the change.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland and New Jersey, however, will be on daylight time on a practically statewide basis.

Connecticut last year passed a law providing for daylight saving only by local ordinance. New London and New Haven alone adopted such ordinances, but this year Hartford has joined their ranks and daylight saving will become almost statewide by action in cities and rural districts all over the state.

The principal seaboard summer resorts will be on the new time. Atlantic City, Newport, Narragansett and Bar Harbor will save daylight.

Chicago is the center of a middle west belt which will have daylight time. The city decided last year to change its clocks by a vote of the people and the ordinance has not been attacked since. To keep pace with the largest city on the lakes, such places as Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, Racine and Milwaukee have adopted time saving ordinances. Lansing, last year on regular central time, will change this year.

Most of the leading business centers of Europe have adopted daylight saving permanently. Paris will continue it this year, but discard it in 1923 under a new law. London took to saving daylight on March 26, while all the cities of Belgium and France have done so. Germany, by a national law, holds aloof and will conduct all its business and trade on its usual time standard.

PASADENA'S PROUD OF THIS

PASADENA SPRING SHOW.

Crowns Seventeen Years' Work.

In 1905 a group of prominent gardeners of Pasadena, having at heart the interest of their profession, organized the Pasadena Gardeners' Association. Their objective was to interest gardeners and the public in general in all that pertains to horticulture, to create among the residents of Pasadena a current of competitive interest in the care of their home grounds and their flowers. In 1906, to further horticulture, the society held its first flower show, which was a decided success. This gave encouragement to the organizers, and since that time the society has held twenty-two successful flower shows in Pasadena. In 1912, to give a more appropriate name to their society, the members decided on the title of the Pasadena Horticultural Society.

The seventeenth annual spring show of this organization opened April 20, when a new attendance record was set. The show this year was held in the Palm room of the beautiful Hotel Maryland, and the largest number of people that ever witnessed a local flower exhibition in three days came to see the beauties of nature arranged for their benefit.

Competition Keen.

Pasadena exhibitors came in for honors when judges awarded local florists silver and bronze medals for displays of brides' bouquets and table decorations. Siebrecht's House of Flowers took first in both classes; Whitford's, Florists, second, and Wright's Flower Shop, of Los Angeles, third. Los Angeles rivalry in the commercial classes was keen, and the Crown City victory is regarded to be of importance. With the Palm room jammed with admiring spectators, the winning brides' bouquets created a sensation. They were carried by Mrs. Floyd C. Pond, who appeared each evening, so that the different patrons of the show would have the benefit of viewing them as they were carried before the judges.

Friday night, April 21, the judges wound up their task of awarding prizes, totaling in value above the $1,300 mark. They included many ribbons and certificates of merit.

The best cut flower display was that of W. G. Mather, whose flowers were grown by W. F. Asher, with that of H. Paepcke second, grown by Julius Thelin.

Commercial Displays.

The commercial displays were of an exceptionally high grade. The display of roses staged by Walter Armacost & Co., of Los Angeles, excited the greatest admiration. Roy F. Wilcox & Co., of Montebello, also put on a magnificent display of roses. As usual, Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles, had a wonderful display of their improved cinerarias, which formed a mass of solid blue with their wonderful shades of purple, lavender and blue. Siebrecht's House of Flowers made a magnificent showing of potted plants, which occupied one end of the Palm room. The Santa Barbara Seed Co. made a fine showing of flowers grown from its seed, as did also the F. C. Nash Co. and the Campbell Seed Store, both of Pasadena.

Gold, silver and bronze medals were struck for this show for the first time. Winners of gold medals were Herbert Bateman, Inc., and Walter Armacost & Co., for the best commercial showing covering 200 square feet or less.

The judges of everything in this show, with the exception of commercial florists' displays, table decorations and brides' bouquets, were Alois Frey, A. Martini, J. J. Reeves, Roy F. Wilcox, Robert MacMillan and M. Paige. The lady judges of the tables and brides' bouquets were selected by the women's clubs of the vicinity from among their membership.

Bateman's Bridal Bower.

One of the most interesting features of the show was the beautiful bridal bower prepared by Herbert Bateman, Inc., of Los Angeles, which was awarded the first gold medal that has been presented at a Pasadena flower show in seventeen years. In this display, which was arranged for a garden wedding, a combination of tamarix and Japanese flowering peach was used, and on the bench and table was a striking combination of baskets of pink tulips and delphiniums, with deep blue candles and metal cloth. The background was banked heavily with white watonias and huckleberry foliage.

Miss Bessie Eyton, leading lady at the Morosco theater, in Los Angeles, was so impressed with the beauty of this setting that she consented to be photographed in it, wearing the wedding gown in which she appears in her present production, "Abie's Irish Rose." This exhibit undoubtedly created more interest than anything else shown.

Table Decorations.

The table decorations shown in the private dining room attracted a great deal of interest, on account of this being the first time anything has been shown in the commercial class. The one exhibited by Siebrecht's House of Bridal Bower at Pasadena Show, Staged by Herbert Bateman, Inc., with Actress Posing as Bride.

Flowers received first prize; Whitford's, Florists, received the second prize, while Wright's Flower Shop was third. The table decorated by Siebrecht had for its center orchids of purple and deep lavender, with corsage bouquets of orchids for feminine guests, with gardenias for the men.

Running this table a close second was the one decorated by Whitford's, Florists. This was a French combination of exquisite roses in pale yellow, with Spanish iris and Adiantum Farleyense. Corsage bouquets of like loveliness marked the covers for the feminine guests at this table, with appropriate boutonnieres for the men.

The first prize bride's bouquet, furnished by Siebrecht's House of Flowers, and the second prize bouquet, furnished by Whitford's, Florists, were carried by Mrs. Floyd Pond and might have served at the nuptials of Titania herself. Mrs. Pond, in taking the bride's role, represented all the beauty of the characterization. She was assisted by Roy Walker, who is the financial secretary of the Pasadena Horticultural Society. L. A. W.

MAY REGULATE TRADE BODIES.

Bills Before Congress.

Trade organizations will be subject to government regulation if the Edge and McArthur bills, now before Congress, are passed. Within the course of the next week or ten days, a subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee will begin hearings in connection with Senator Edge's bill, which provides for the regulation of trade associations by the federal trade commission. The Senate judiciary committee recently reported a resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate trade conditions with a view, among other things, to establishing the status of coöperative organizations as distinguished from illicit combinations in restraint of trade.

The great educational, economic and social value of trade association work is at present somewhat underrated and grave doubts have crept into the minds of the public concerning the real purposes of legitimate associations, because of the activities of a certain group or class of associations engaged in questionable practices. There is no doubt that out of the Hardwood Lumber decision, the Hoover-Daugherty correspondence, Mr. Hoover's recent trade association conference, and the Edge bill, there will come some solution of the question as to the real functions and powers of trade organizations which, Mr. Hoover says, "have been well proven to be in public interest."

Provisions of Bills.

The Edge bill, Senate 3385, and its companion by Mr. McArthur, H. H. 11156, are lengthy measures. Provisions of particular interest may be briefly described as follows:

Every trade association would be required to file with the commission:

1. Statement of its general character and activities;
2. List of members, officers, directors, committees and managing agents;
3. Copy of constitution and by-laws, minutes of meetings, resolutions, agreements and any modifications thereof.
4. Statistics collected by, or for the benefit of members, concerning production, shipments, stocks on hand, contracts, prices, credit information, or any other statistics respecting the trade.

Unless prohibited by order of the federal trade commission, associations may distribute any statistics so filed among their members.

The commission would be given authority to prescribe the method of filing such information, and failure to comply with the order of the commission would be made a misdemeanor punishable by fine or by fine and imprisonment.

Trade associations would be required to give the commission notice of time and place of every association meeting, and the commission, if it saw fit, might have a representative present at any such meeting.

Commission May Approve.

On application of any trade association the commission may pass on the legality of the association's plans and objects, and if such objects or purposes are not violative of anti-trust statutes, the commission may issue a certificate of its approval of such objects and purposes. If the association's activities seem to conflict with provisions of anti-trust laws, the commission may suggest alterations in such plans.

Any association holding a certificate issued by the commission may request it to rule with respect to proposed plans of operation which the association deems in the best interests of the industry. The commission may, on its own initiative, or on request of an association, issue its ruling in relation to proposed plans, or may call into conference members of the association and others engaged in the same line of industry, for the purpose of agreeing upon proposed activities or plans of operation. If the commission, after agreement among the trade, finds that the proposed practices are not in violation of the law, it may approve such plans, but such approval shall not extend to consequences or results due to the abuse of such practices or customs.

If the commission shall have reason to believe that the conduct of any association or practice of such association is in violation of the anti-trust laws, it may summon the association's officers, members or agents to appear at a hearing, and should it be found that the conduct or practices of such association are in violation of law, the commission may order such association, its members, officers or agents to cease and desist from such conduct or practices.

These are the salient features of the Edge and McArthur bills. It is likely that after hearings by the committee the measures, if acted upon during this session, will be amended in certain particulars.

FLORICULTURE STUDENTS' TRIP.

Commercial Ranges Inspected.

The floricultural class and several visitors at the Connecticut Agricultural College made a trip to a number of the commercial greenhouses in the state, April 8. Those making the trip were Prof. R. H. Patch, instructor; Mrs. Boyers, Mrs. Dixon, Miss Wilson, E. S. Patterson, C. J. Grant, N. P. Dickens, T. R. Gardner, W. Lelash, R. Seymour, Mr. King and Mr. Butler.

At Cromwell.

The party made the trip by automobile from the college to Hartford and from there to A. N. Pierson, Inc., at Cromwell. All the houses of this firm were inspected under the direction of Mr. Mason. The plants at this range were in exceedingly good condition, and everybody was busy getting flowers out for the Easter trade. While the party was there, several large trucks left with Easter plants for the markets.

One large house is devoted to the propagation and grafting of roses. It was estimated that 1,000,000 Manetti stocks had been grafted during the fall, winter and spring.

Some large cibotiums were inspected and found to be in wonderful condition. Another large house was devoted to Easter lilies, and thousands of lilies were seen in bloom. The spiræas were large and attractive.

The east range, across the road, was in full swing, growing and propagating carnations and chrysanthemums. Some of the varieties of carnations noticed here were Aviator, Hope Henshaw, Harvester, Enchantress Supreme and Crystal White. Some lilies grown from government seed were noticed and they seemed to be in good condition.

With John Coombs.

This part of the trip took up all the forenoon. The party returned to Hartford, where the members had dinner and then visited the greenhouses of John Coombs, outside the city. This range was inspected under the direction of N. C. Osborn. The houses are devoted almost wholly to roses and carnations. The houses were in good condition and the flowers appeared to be healthy and strong. Some of the varieties of roses grown in this range are Ophelia, Butterfly, Crusader, Columbia, Crimson Queen, Aaron Ward and White Ophelia. Some of the carnations grown are Maine Sunshine, Matchless, Harvester and Enchantress Supreme.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

ROBERT PYLE.

K NOWN widely as president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., the claim of Robert Pyle to a place in "Who's Who" rests on more than being the head of a famous business house. As an authority on roses, as the author of one of the most valuable books on rose culture and as the president of the American Rose Society, Mr. Pyle has done much towards the advancement of the rose in many ways. Those who know what Mr. Pyle has accomplished, but do not know his age, will be surprised to hear he is no more than 45, having been born at London Grove, Pa., March 7, 1877. After graduating from Swarthmore College in 1897 and acting as superintendent there for a year, Mr. Pyle entered the greenhouses of the Conard & Jones Co. in 1898. Next year, therefore, he will celebrate the silver anniversary of his connection with the company.

At W. W. Thompson's.

The party next proceeded to the establishment of W. W. Thompson, at West Hartford, a specialist in violets and sweet peas. Everyone was busy at this range, due to the Easter rush. The sweet peas were in excellent condition. The Aurora variety is considered by this grower as one of the best sweet peas. The violets were in good condition. Double Imperial is the variety grown.

One house at this range was used for growing vegetables, such as tomatoes and radishes, and the owner considered this quite profitable combined with flower growing.

Spear & McManus.

After leaving the Thompson range the party visited the retail store of Spear & McManus, on Asylum street, at Hartford. This store is considered one of the best retail flower stores in the United States. It has an advantage over many stores in having a small greenhouse attached at the rear, in which flowers can be stored and kept over. There is an entrance at the rear through which all deliveries are made, thus not interfering with pedestrian trade from the street. The temperature of the store and greenhouse is regulated by a boiler in the basement. In the basement at the front and partly under the sidewalk a room has been artistic-

Flowers received first prize; Whitford's, Florists, received the second prize, while Wright's Flower Shop was third. The table decorated by Siebrecht had for its center orchids of purple and deep lavender, with corsage bouquets of orchids for feminine guests, with gardenias for the men.

Trade associations would be required to give the commission notice of time and place of every association meeting, and the commission, if it saw fit, might have a representative present at any such meeting.

Commission May Approve.

On application of any trade association the commission may pass on the legality of the association's plans and objects, and if such objects or purposes are not violative of anti-trust statutes, the commission may issue a certificate of its approval of such objects and purposes. If the association's activities seem to conflict with provisions of anti-trust laws, the commission may suggest alterations in such plans.

Any association holding a certificate issued by the commission may request it to rule with respect to proposed plans of operation which the association deems in the best interests of the industry. The commission may, on its own initiative, or on request of an association, issue its ruling in relation to proposed plans, or may call into conference members of the association and others engaged in the same line of industry, for the purpose of agreeing upon proposed activities or plans of operation. If the commission, after agreement among the trade, finds that the proposed practices are not in violation of the law, it may approve such plans, but such approval shall not extend to consequences or results due to the abuse of such practices or customs.

If the commission shall have reason to believe that the conduct of any association or practice of such association is in violation of the anti-trust laws, it may summon the association's officers, members or agents to appear at a hearing, and should it be found that the conduct or practices of such association are in violation of law, the commission may order such association, its members, officers or agents to cease and desist from such conduct or practices.

These are the salient features of the Edge and McArthur bills. It is likely that after hearings by the committee the measures, if acted upon during this session, will be amended in certain particulars.

FLORICULTURE STUDENTS' TRIP.

Commercial Ranges Inspected.

The floricultural class and several visitors at the Connecticut Agricultural College made a trip to a number of the commercial greenhouses in the state, April 8. Those making the trip were Prof. R. H. Patch, instructor; Mrs. Boyers, Mrs. Dixon, Miss Wilson, E. S. Patterson, C. J. Grant, N. P. Dickens, T. R. Gardner, W. Lelash, R. Seymour, Mr. King and Mr. Butler.

At Cromwell.

The party made the trip by automobile from the college to Hartford and from there to A. N. Pierson, Inc., at Cromwell. All the houses of this firm were inspected under the direction of Mr. Mason. The plants at this range were in exceedingly good condition, and everybody was busy getting flowers out for the Easter trade. While the party was there, several large trucks left with Easter plants for the markets.

One large house is devoted to the propagation and grafting of roses. It was estimated that 1,000,000 Manetti stocks had been grafted during the fall, winter and spring.

Some large cibotiums were inspected and found to be in wonderful condition. Another large house was devoted to Easter lilies, and thousands of lilies were seen in bloom. The spiraeas were large and attractive.

The east range, across the road, was in full swing, growing and propagating carnations and chrysanthemums. Some of the varieties of carnations noticed here were Aviator, Hope Henshaw, Harvester, Enchantress Supreme and Crystal White. Some lilies grown from government seed were noticed and they seemed to be in good condition.

With John Coombs.

This part of the trip took up all the forenoon. The party returned to Hartford, where the members had dinner and then visited the greenhouses of John Coombs, outside the city. This range was inspected under the direction of N. C. Osborn. The houses are devoted almost wholly to roses and carnations. The houses were in good condition and the flowers appeared to be healthy and strong. Some of the varieties of roses grown in this range are Ophelia, Butterly, Crusader, Columbia, Crimson Queen, Aaron Ward and White Ophelia. Some of the carnations grown are Maine Sunshine, Matchless, Harvester and Enchantress Supreme.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

ROBERT PYLE.

KNOWN widely as president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., the claim of Robert Pyle to a place in "Who's Who" rests on more than being the head of a famous business house. As an authority on roses, as the author of one of the most valuable books on rose culture and as the president of the American Rose Society, Mr. Pyle has done much towards the advancement of the rose in many ways. Those who know what Mr. Pyle has accomplished, but do not know his age, will be surprised to hear he is no more than 45, having been born at London Grove, Pa., March 7, 1877. After graduating from Swarthmore College in 1897 and acting as superintendent there for a year, Mr. Pyle entered the greenhouses of the Conard & Jones Co. in 1898. Next year, therefore, he will celebrate the silver anniversary of his connection with the company.

At W. W. Thompson's.

The party next proceeded to the establishment of W. W. Thompson, at West Hartford, a specialist in violets and sweet peas. Everyone was busy at this range, due to the Easter rush. The sweet peas were in excellent condition. The Aurora variety is considered by this grower as one of the best sweet peas. The violets were in good condition. Double Imperial is the variety grown.

One house at this range was used for growing vegetables, such as tomatoes and radishes, and the owner considered this quite profitable combined with flower growing.

Spear & McManus.

After leaving the Thompson range the party visited the retail store of Spear & McManus, on Asylum street, at Hartford. This store is considered one of the best retail flower stores in the United States. It has an advantage over many stores in having a small greenhouse attached at the rear, in which flowers can be stored and kept over. There is an entrance at the rear through which all deliveries are made, thus not interfering with pedestrian trade from the street. The temperature of the store and greenhouse is regulated by a boiler in the basement. In the basement at the front and partly under the sidewalk a room has been artistic ally constructed for show room purposes.

This ended the trip for the day and members of the party felt as though they had learned some valuable lessons in floriculture from the growers' and from the retailers' end of the business.

THE HONEYMOON FLAT.

The accompanying illustration shows the honeymoon flat of Arnold Preuss, a member of the firm of Rudolph Preuss & Sons, Milwaukee. It also shows the firm's new retail store. Young Mr. Preuss took unto himself a bride a few weeks ago, also a Chevrolet touring car. The three, Mr. Preuss, the bride and the car, made a trip to Chicago and other points south. On their return to Milwaukee Mr. Preuss and Mrs. Preuss took up their quarters over the store and, though deponent sayeth not, probably the Chevrolet is not far away.

Rudolph Preuss started in the florists' business in 1892 at the corner of Vine and West Twenty-fourth streets, where his operations at first were with hotbed sashes. A little later two greenhouses were built, from which a considerable range has developed, now in charge of Oswald Preuss. The store at Twenty-sixth street and Lisbon avenue was opened in January. It was outfitted in French gray by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. A third son, Erwin, also is a member of the firm.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—Sam Seligman, lately dealing in florists' supplies and novelties, was adjudicated bankrupt, February 27. The first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of John J. Townsend, referee in bankruptcy, 299 Broadway, at 11 a. m., May 10. At that time creditors may prove claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact any other business.

New York, N. Y.—George J. Polyrkras, wholesale florist at 43 Fifth avenue, has signed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities of $5,282 are shown, with assets of $6,483. The first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of the referee, Peter B. Olney, 68 William street, May 9, at 11:30 a. m.

Chicago, Ill.—Bids are being solicited for the tangible assets of the Everette R. Peacock Co., by the receiver, Edwin D. Buell, 105 West Monroe street. The property is that at 160 North Halsted street, 4013 Milwaukee avenue and Norwood Park, and consists of "farm and garden seeds, shrubs, bulbs, fruit and shade trees, insecticides, farm and garden implements, furniture, fixtures, trucks, machinery and equipment," all described in the receiver's inventory filed in court. Bids will be received until 9:30 a. m., May 11, and will be reported for approval at 10 a. m. that day to Judge Carpenter. Bids must be accompanied by a certified check for not less than twenty-five per cent of the amount of the bid. In case no satisfactory bid is received, the assets will be sold at public auction, states the receiver, without further notice.

established itself in a conspicuous position here. It may be that Eileen can do more than the others have done.

Miss Low is on her third trip to America. Harry Barnard, whose death was recorded in The Review a few weeks ago, came here annually for many years as the firm's representative. When Mr. Barnard became too old longer to make the arduous journey, Miss Low took up the task. This time she made the trip by way of France, Italy, the Suez canal, India and Japan, arriving at Vancouver. She will sail from New York the latter part of June.

BOARD HAS TWO HARD DAYS

SOCIETY AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Board Meeting.

The annual meeting of the executive board of the Society of American Florists was held in the Woman's Art building, Indianapolis, Ind., Monday and Tuesday, March 27 and 28. The meeting was presided over by President S. S. Pennock.

The first session was held Monday at 9:30 a. m. The president called the meeting to order, and directed that the roll be called, when the following were found to be present:

S. S. Pennock, president, Philadelphia; Samuel Murray, vice-president, Kansas City; John Young, secretary, New York; J. J. Hess, treasurer, Omaha; William F. Gude, Washington representative, Washington, D. C.; J. C. Vaughan, national councilor, Chicago; William L. Rock, Kansas City; Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland; Paul R. Klingsporn, Chicago; Thomas C. Joy, Nashville, Tenn.; Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Thomas Roland, ex-officio, Nahant, Mass.; J. F. Ammann, president Florists' Hail Association, Edwardsville, Ill.; Joseph Kohout, president Chicago Florists' Club, Libertyville, Ill.; Henry Penn, chairman publicity committee, Boston, Mass.; George Asmus, chairman national flower show committee, Chicago; Philip Breitmeyer, president F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; W. H. Culp, president Kansas State Florists' Association, Wichita, Kan.; S. W. Cogan, president Michigan State Florists' Association, Battle Creek, Mich.; W. D. Howard, president American Carnation Society, Milford, Mass.; Roman J. Irwin, president New York Florists' Club, New York; Robert Pyle, president American Rose Society, West Grove, Pa.; W. A. Rowe, president St. Louis Florists' Club, Kirkwood, Mo.; James McLaughlin, president Cleveland Florists' Club, Cleveland; H. M. Joy, president Tennessee State Florists' Association, Nashville, Tenn.; A. S. Gray, president Oklahoma State Florists' Association, Chickasha, Okla., and Richard Vincent, Jr., president American Dahlia Society, White Marsh, Md. The delegate members representing the affiliated organizations, all having presented credentials, were duly seated. James McLaughlin was appointed sergeant-at-arms.

Finances.

Secretary Young read his report of the Washington trade exhibition, which showed that a profit of $6,520.61 had been realized. The total receipts were $10,408.43, and disbursements $3,887.82. On motion of Mr. Roland, the report was accepted and ordered to be made part of the minutes.

The secretary then read the report of the auditing committee, first explaining that this was a new committee of lay members of the society appointed at the recommendation of Thomas Roland while president. The report, submitted by Percy B. Right, New York, chairman of the committee, endorsed the work of the official auditors, and the work of the secretary's office in the preparation of the various accounts, which was enormous. The expenditure for auditor's service was, in the opinion of the committee, quite necessary, and was both nominal and reasonable.

Considerable discussion ensued as to the advisability of continuing the service of the public auditors, and it was finally decided, on motion of Secretary Young, that the services of the public accountants be continued, with compensation not to exceed that now provided.

The secretary then presented his annual financial report, which was quite lengthy. The report was prefaced with the report of the official auditors, which certified that balances of the different funds as set out were a true and correct statement of receipts and disbursements since January 1, 1921, and conformed with the balance as shown on the books of the secretary as of December 31, 1921. It was shown that there was a balance in the permanent fund of $49,167.68, and in the general fund of $16,653.01. In addition, the secretary read a lengthy statement from the auditors, embodying comments on the system of accounting in force, and suggesting a few changes looking to its betterment.

Treasurer J. J. Hess presented his annual financial report, with official reports from the auditors, and bank certificates as to balances, all of which agreed with the secretary's report.

At Washington.

William F. Gude, as Washington representative, stated that while there had been no necessity for particularly active service, he might mention that last fall he had been privately informed that a bill had been introduced which threatened the parcel post service for florists, and he had at once, through the trade papers, called upon all members of the trade to make protests to their congressmen against the passage of such bill. The bill, he had since been informed, had been practically withdrawn. He had considered it advisable, he said, at the time of the disarmament conference in Washington, to follow the example set by the Rotary Club and other organizations, and send flowers to the opening of the conference. He had also sent a large basket of American Beauty roses in the name of the society, but at his own expense.

Vice-President Murray reported as to the renting of the auditorium in Kansas City for the August convention. Secretary Young reported that he and President Pennock had visited Kansas City and looked over the auditorium,

This ended the trip for the day and members of the party felt as though they had learned some valuable lessons in floriculture from the growers' and from the retailers' end of the business.

Miss Low is on her third trip to America. Harry Barnard, whose death was recorded in The Review a few weeks ago, came here annually for many years as the firm's representative. When Mr. Barnard became too old longer to make the arduous journey, Miss Low took up the task. This time she made the trip by way of France, Italy, the Suez canal, India and Japan, arriving at Vancouver. She will sail from New York the latter part of June.

BOARD HAS TWO HARD DAYS

Executive Board Meeting.

The annual meeting of the executive board of the Society of American Florists was held in the Woman's Art building, Indianapolis, Ind., Monday and Tuesday, March 27 and 28. The meeting was presided over by President S. S. Pennock.

The first session was held Monday at 9:30 a. m. The president called the meeting to order, and directed that the roll be called, when the following were found to be present:

S. S. Pennock, president, Philadelphia; Samuel Murray, vice-president, Kansas City; John Young, secretary, New York; J. J. Hess, treasurer, Omaha; William F. Gude, Washington representative, Washington, D. C.; J. C. Vaughan, national counselor, Chicago; William L. Rock, Kansas City; Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland; Paul R. Klingsporn, Chicago; Thomas C. Joy, Nashville, Tenn.; Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Thomas Roland, ex-officio, Nahant, Mass.; J. F. Ammann, president Florists' Hall Association, Edwardsville, Ill.; Joseph Kohout, president Chicago Florists' Club, Libertyville, Ill.; Henry Penn, chairman publicity committee, Boston, Mass.; George Asmus, chairman national flower show committee, Chicago; Philip Breitmeyer, president F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; W. H. Culp, president Kansas State Florists' Association, Wichita, Kan.; S. W. Cogan, president Michigan State Florists' Association, Battle Creek, Mich.; W. D. Howard, president American Carnation Society, Milford, Mass.; Roman J. Irwin, president New York Florists' Club, New York; Robert Pyle, president American Rose Society, West Grove, Pa.; W. A. Rowe, president St. Louis Florists' Club, Kirkwood, Mo.; James McLaughlin, president Cleveland Florists' Club, Cleveland; H. M. Joy, president Tennessee State Florists' Association, Nashville, Tenn.; A. S. Gray, president Oklahoma State Florists' Association, Chickasha, Okla., and Richard Vincent, Jr., president American Dahlia Society, White Marsh, Md. The delegate members representing the affiliated organizations, all having presented credentials, were duly seated. James McLaughlin was appointed sergeant-at-arms.

Finances.

Secretary Young read his report of the Washington trade exhibition, which showed that a profit of $6,520.61 had been realized. The total receipts were $10,498.43, and disbursements $3,887.82. On motion of Mr. Roland, the report was accepted and ordered to be made part of the minutes.

The secretary then read the report of the auditing committee, first explaining that this was a new committee of lay members of the society appointed at the recommendation of Thomas Roland while president. The report, submitted by Percy B. Right, New York, chairman of the committee, endorsed the work of the official auditors, and the work of the secretary's office in the preparation of the various accounts, which was enormous. The expenditure for auditor's service was, in the opinion of the committee, quite necessary, and was both nominal and reasonable.

Considerable discussion ensued as to the advisability of continuing the service of the public auditors, and it was finally decided, on motion of Secretary Young, that the services of the public accountants be continued, with compensation not to exceed that now provided.

The secretary then presented his annual financial report, which was quite lengthy. The report was prefaced with the report of the official auditors, which certified that balances of the different funds as set out were a true and correct statement of receipts and disbursements since January 1, 1921, and conformed with the balance as shown on the books of the secretary as of December 31, 1921. It was shown that there was a balance in the permanent fund of $49,167.68, and in the general fund of $16,653.01. In addition, the secretary read a lengthy statement from the auditors, embodying comments on the system of accounting in force, and suggesting a few changes looking to its betterment.

Treasurer J. J. Hess presented his annuual financial report, with official reports from the auditors, and bank certificates as to balances, all of which agreed with the secretary's report.

At Washington.

William F. Gude, as Washington representative, stated that while there had been no necessity for particularly active service, he might mention that last fall he had been privately informed that a bill had been introduced which threatened the parcel post service for florists, and he had at once, through the trade papers, called upon all members of the trade to make protests to their congressmen against the passage of such bill. The bill, he had since been informed, had been practically withdrawn. He had considered it advisable, he said, at the time of the disarmament conference in Washington, to follow the example set by the Rotary Club and other organizations, and send flowers to the opening of the conference. He had also sent a large basket of American Beauty roses in the name of the society, but at his own expense.

Vice-President Murray reported as to the renting of the auditorium in Kansas City for the August convention. Secretary Young reported that he and President Pennock had visited Kansas City and looked over the auditorium, and it was found suitable for the purposes of the society, and it was arranged to secure it. It was also arranged that the sessions of the convention be held in the same building. There was an area of 18,000 to 19,000 square feet available for the exhibits, and the rental terms were $1,000 if the public were not admitted, and $2,000 if the building was to be open to the public. President Pennoek spoke of the fine reception he and the secretary had in the convention city and of the enthusiasm existing among the trade over convention prospects. It was arranged that details as to trade space and other matters be discussed at a later session of the board.

Publicity Work.

Mr. Penn made a verbal report for the publicity committee. He stated that the work of the committee had been satisfactory so far this year, with more enthusiasm than had been shown in the last two years. The committee was convinced that the florists' business had prospered, and much of the prosperity was due to the publicity campaign. A meeting of the committee had been held that morning, at which it had been arranged to spend in national advertising at once a further sum of $10,000, making a total expenditure of $20,000 already for 1922.

George Asmus, chairman of the publicity finance committee, first referring to the fact that a flower stand had been opened at the national flower show then in progress in Indianapolis, for which flowers were donated, and from which it was expected at least $1,500 revenue might result, all of which was to be turned over to the publicity committee, said he believed it was possible to do the same thing at other shows throughout the country. There were now, he said, twenty-seven allied organizations doing district advertising, and a large number of them contributed to the national fund. The success of the national campaign was not entirely due to the magazine advertising; much of it was due to the interest it had aroused among florists, educating them to advertise. It was not only the money spent, but the kind of work the committee was back of, urging and fostering, that had much to do with success in keeping flowers before the public. A better coöperative spirit was now apparent.

The Come-Back.

J. F. Ammann reviewed some of the difficulties which had been presented to the publicity committee, particularly that one in regard to the deficiency reported some time back by the committee, created by the negligence of many subscribers in meeting their obligations, and removed by a loan from the society. That loan had all been returned to the general fund, so that today the society stood as having not contributed one dollar to the national publicity campaign, while the campaign had a good working capital.

Robert Pyle eulogized the publicity work done by the committee, especially in regard to an important outcome, the establishment of campaigns in local districts. He reviewed the career of the nurserymen's advertising campaign, which had finished rather badly, and expressed his belief that the nurserymen would have to come into contact with the society's publicity enthusiasts with the idea of profiting by experiences exchanged.

J. C. Vaughan regretted the partial failure of the nurserymen's campaign and stated that the seedsmen's efforts had been quite successful, magazine articles prepared on similar lines to paid matter being generally accepted.

J. C. Vaughan was called upon for information as to the working of the new office he filled, that of counselor of the society in the United States Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Vaughan made a lengthy address, in the course of which he touched upon a number of subjects pertinent to the relations of the society with the chamber. He was particularly concerned as to the dissemination of the reports forthcoming from the chamber to the society's members, such reports being voluminous. He was willing to make a synopsis of matters in these reports of interest to the trade. He would like, he said, to submit to the board in some way a résumé of the proceedings of the chamber, preferably to a committee to be appointed from the board, which could decide upon any necessary action and on advisability of publication.

On motion of Carl Hagenburger, seconded by J. J. Hess, the appointment of such a committee was directed, and President Pennoek named it as comprising J. C. Vaughan, chairman; W. F. Gude, Carl Hagenburger and Robert Pyle.

President Pennoek announced that it was necessary that J. C. Vaughan have the authorization of the board to act as the counselor of the society, and it was directed that credentials for presentation to the chamber be prepared, to be signed by the president and secretary.

Considerable discussion was projected in regard to the carrying out and extension of quarantine 37, but no action was taken, although it was arranged that at a later session J. C. Vaughan should introduce a resolution defining his line of action in his relations to the United States Chamber of Commerce in this and other matters of trade interest.

Second Session.

The board reconvened at 8:30 p. m., and President Pennoek gave the floor to J. F. Ammann, who introduced J. J. Davis, an entomologist at the Illinois experimental station. Mr. Davis said it was his desire to bring to the attention of the society the fact that he had prepared for publication a book covering descriptions of and data concerning insects and other pests of the greenhouse and garden. The book would contain over 300 pages, he said, and appeared to be too large for consideration as a publication by any college, experimental station, or even the Department of Agriculture. He did not seek remuneration for the work, but was of the opinion that the society might recognize its value and assist in some way in its production.

On motion of H. C. Culp, it was decided that the matter be placed in the hands of a committee for consideration, and to report at the August convention. The chair appointed as such committee J. F. Ammann, Prof. H. B. Dornier and the society's entomologist.

Kansas City Convention.

Matters concerning the Kansas City convention were then taken up, and a long discussion took place. W. L. Rock reported conditions as then existing in regard to preparations. Some fifteen or sixteen committees had been appointed, and details appeared to be well taken care of. The local florists and local and state organizations were working together for the success of the meeting, and everything pointed to a successful gathering as far as housing and care were concerned.

Mr. Robinson, of the convention bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, Kansas City, was present. He imparted much information in regard to the convention city and plans for the convention. The auditorium, he said, was just about two blocks from practically all of the principal hotels. The average August temperature in Kansas City was not as high as usually experienced in Buffalo—did anyone doubt this, there were government statistics in support of it. The banquet hall at the Muehlebach hotel was cooled by refrigeration, something new to many visitors. The rental of the hall, he said, was $2,000, but his bureau was paying half of it. The bureau was also ready to furnish all the clerical help, attend to the registration of delegates and send out quantities of printed matter. The bureau's publicity men would also be at the disposal of the society continually. Those traveling by motor, he said, would be pleased to find that the old trail from St. Louis to Kansas City was paved about halfway, and the drive was usually made in a night, or a day.

President Pennoek suggested that the official program for the convention should be discussed. Secretary Young explained that the program was generally left to the president and secretary, but the opinions of members of the board should be of material assistance in its compilation. Considerable time was spent discussing various suggestions made looking to an attractive program, and a resulting enthusiastic attendance. Many ideas were evolved, all of which Secretary Young said would have careful consideration.

The rental for space in the trade exhibition was, on motion, fixed at 60 cents per square foot.

Students Seek Union.

A communication from Robert C. Hodgkin and Fred J. Gammage, president and secretary respectively of the Floricultural Club at the University of Illinois, suggesting an affiliation with the S. A. F. in some form to be decided upon, so that, perhaps under the name of Junior S. A. F., the club could expand into a national organization, creating a benefit which should be mutual, was, after some discussion, referred to a committee for consideration, and instructions to bring in a recommendation. The chair appointed Carl Hagenburger, Joseph Kohout and W. H. Culp as such committee.

In accordance with the understanding arrived at toward the close of the first session, J. C. Vaughan introduced a resolution, to be forwarded to the Secretary of Agriculture, to the effect that the board of directors of the S. A. F., in session at the fifth national flower show, Indianapolis, requested that by authority of his office he direct the federal horticultural board to make no further restrictions in the present regulations of quarantine 37; and that he direct that said federal board take immediate measures for relief from present drastic restrictions complained of by state horticultural societies; and, finally, that he direct said federal board to proceed no further in the curtailment of private or commercial plant and bulb importations. The resolution further stated that the board of directors was giving this request no press publicity and awaited the secretary's views and action on the question so vital to the increase and progress of the florists' industry.

An earnest discussion followed the reading of the resolution. Many thought it was entirely out of the scope of the executive board and was a question for the convention, and this feeling seemed to prevail. Finally, on motion of Robert Pyle, seconded by W. R. Pierson, the resolution was laid on the table.

Third Session.

The first business of the third session, Tuesday morning, was the report of the committee in regard to the Floricultural Club of the University of Illinois. P. R. Klingsporn read the report, which was to the effect that the organization of a Junior S. A. F. as outlined did not promise benefits of real value to the society sufficient to justify such a proceeding, but the committee believed that if the student body had ultimate membership in the society in view, it would be of more benefit, mutually, for the students to join the society as soon as eligible. W. H. Culp moved the adoption of the report, and his motion was seconded. After a prolonged discussion, however, in which those taking part expressed sympathy with the plans of the students to connect with the society in some way, J. F. Ammann moved in amendment to Mr. Culp's motion that a committee of three be appointed to confer with the students' representatives before the meeting at Kansas City and report on recommendations at that meeting. The amendment, which was accepted as a substitute motion, was duly seconded and passed. The chair continued the previous committee to act on the matter, adding to it J. F. Ammann.

Standardization.

Henry Penn, as chairman of the committee appointed at the Washington convention to consider the question of standardization of cut flowers and plants, presented a report covering a plan prepared by L. F. Murphy, Cincinnati, chairman of the National Flower Growers' Association committee, and also a report signed by E. Allan Peirce, representing the New England district of the National Flower Growers' Association, outlining a plan evolved by the eastern growers. The chair explained that this question had been referred to the executive board at the convention. Thomas Roland explained that the reports presented were to be taken as the report of the committee he, as president, appointed in Washington at the request of the convention, and it was before the board for action. The individual reports differed in many respects. George Asmus moved, and his motion was seconded and carried, that inasmuch as the matter was being taken care of by individual organizations, it should be referred back to them to work out a solution, and that the committee be discharged with the thanks of the society.

bulbs, expected at this session, not being ready, on motion of George Asmus, the committee was directed to present it at the August convention.

A project looking to an establishment and observance of Armistice day referred to the board by the Washington convention was, on motion of George Asmus, referred to the publicity committee.

The advisability of promoting field work for membership, also referred to the board, was by motion referred to the meeting of vice-presidents to be held at the Kansas City convention.

Secretary Young referred to the fact that Past-President Patrick Weleh, Boston, was quite ill, and moved that Henry Penn be authorized to send him a message and flowers from the board, conveying sympathy and best wishes for a speedy recovery. The chair suggested that the message take the form of a letter bearing the signatures of the members of the board, and it was so ordered.

Resolution on Quarantine.

W. H. Culp referred to the matter of the resolution in regard to quarantine No. 37 tabled by the board the previous day, and read a substitute resolution which he moved be accepted and passed. The resolution was as follows:

To the Honorable Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The executive board of the Society of American Florists would respectfully urge that you direct the federal horticultural board that no further extensions or changes in rulings for application of quarantine 37 be made without due notice, and opportunity for a hearing be given to those whose interests will be affected by such contemplated ruling or change in application.

A sufficient time having elapsed since the establishing of said quarantine to show its working efficiency and also where modifications or adjustments are needed for its harmonious action, we would also urge that the board also be directed to take up, by conference or otherwise, with those whose interests are affected and who are qualified to act, the various items and figures which up to this time have been brought to the attention of the F. H. B. as being unjust, unnecessary or showing discrepancy in the application of said quarantine. This request being made not in criticism, but with a view to harmonious adjustment and a maximum of benefit and efficiency in the working of quarantine 37 for the good of those whose interests it is designed to protect.

After a short discussion, the resolution, duly seconded, was passed.

On motion of Secretary Young, it was directed that a committee on final resolutions be appointed, and the chair appointed the following as such committee: Roman J. Irwin, J. C. Vaughan and S. W. Cogan.

The balance of the session was taken up by an informal talk, during which the members of the board representing affiliated organizations spoke of the activities of their various bodies, especially insofar as they related to the S. A. F.

Fourth Session.

Tuesday, March 28, at 1 p. m., the board reconvened, and President Pennock called for the report of the committee on amendments to by-laws, of which Thomas Roland was chairman.

and it was found suitable for the purposes of the society, and it was arranged to secure it. It was also arranged that the sessions of the convention be held in the same building. There was an area of 18,000 to 19,000 square feet available for the exhibits, and the rental terms were $1,000 if the public were not admitted, and $2,000 if the building was to be open to the public. ### Resolution on Quarantine.

W. H. Culp referred to the matter of the resolution in regard to quarantine No. 37 tabled by the board the previous day, and read a substitute resolution which he moved be accepted and passed. The resolution was as follows:

To the Honorable Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The executive board of the Society of American Florists would respectfully urge that you direct the federal horticultural board that no further extensions or changes in rulings for application of quarantine 37 be made without due notice, and opportunity for a hearing be given to those whose interests will be affected by such contemplated ruling or change in application.

A sufficient time having elapsed since the establishing of said quarantine to show its working efficiency and also where modifications or adjustments are needed for its harmonious action, we would also urge that the board also be directed to take up, by conference or otherwise, with those whose interests are affected and who are qualified to act, the various items and figures which up to this time have been brought to the attention of the F. H. B. as being unjust, unnecessary or showing discrepancy in the application of said quarantine. This request being made not in criticism, but with a view to harmonious adjustment and a maximum of benefit and efficiency in the working of quarantine 37 for the good of those whose interests it is designed to protect.

After a short discussion, the resolution, duly seconded, was passed.

On motion of Secretary Young, it was directed that a committee on final resolutions be appointed, and the chair appointed the following as such committee: Roman J. Irwin, J. C. Vaughan and S. W. Coggan.

The balance of the session was taken up by an informal talk, during which the members of the board representing affiliated organizations spoke of the activities of their various bodies, especially insofar as they related to the S. A. F.

Fourth Session.

Tuesday, March 28, at 1 p. m., the board reconvened, and President Pennock called for the report of the committee on amendments to by-laws, of which Thomas Roland was chairman.

Mr. Roland presented a well thought out report, the dealing with which took up considerable time, especially as each amendment offered was carefully explained, both as to purport and effect. The amendments offered were as follows:

1. An amendment providing for the appointment of an executive committee, to consist of the president, vice-president, junior ex-president and two directors to be appointed by the president, to serve one year, on taking office January 1. In the intervals between the meetings of the directors, this committee to have charge of the affairs of the society, subject to the general and specific directions of the society and directors.
2. An amendment providing for the appointment of reserve fund trustees, the same to consist of the treasurer and three past-presidents to be appointed by the president, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, members to elect their own chairman. This committee, in the intervals between the meetings of the directors and subject to the general and specific direction of the society and directors, to have the care and management of the society's reserve funds, and the power to sell, exchange, invest, reinvest and transfer the same. If adopted by the society, this amendment would eliminate the finance committee, insofar as it functions along similar lines.
3. Amendment governing the permanent fund, to be in future known as "reserve fund." Money accruing from life membership payments to form a reserve fund, the interest of which can be used annually for general or specific purposes. The permanent fund or any part of it not to be used for any purpose whatever without the approval of a two-thirds vote of the entire board of directors, and to receive a majority of all votes cast at the annual election for officers; to be placed on the ballot and voted on as are elected officers of the society.
4. An amendment defining the treasurer's duties and powers. He shall deposit funds in bank or trust company as the board of directors shall approve, where his account as treasurer shall be kept and all payments shall be made by check. He shall have in his safekeeping the bonds, deeds, notes and other evidences of property. He shall give bonds equal in amount to the funds in his charge. In the absence or disability of the treasurer, the directors may appoint a temporary treasurer, who shall have all the powers and duties of the treasurer.
5. An amendment instituting a budget committee and defining its duties, the duties to be the preparation of an annual budget, to be passed at the midwinter meeting of the executive board.
6. An amendment defining the status of the president in regard to committees. He shall be an ex-officio member of all committees, and he shall have the right to attend and be heard at all meetings of such committees, but, at all such meetings, except in the case of the executive and budget committees, he shall not vote except in the case of a tie.

All these amendments were, by motions, accepted by the board.

Other Amendments.

J. F. Ammann moved, and the motion was carried, that an amendment be recommended, directing that the secretary be elected by the executive board instead of by the convention.

Secretary Young moved, and his motion was carried, an amendment be recommended to make the councilor of the United States Chamber of Commerce a member of the executive board.

George Asmus moved that an amendment be recommended making the committee on tariff and legislation a constitutional committee and its chairman a member of the executive board, and the motion was carried.

Joseph Kohout, at the request of the State Florists' Association of Illinois, suggested that affiliated bodies be allowed to elect their directors for more than one year, it being believed that a greater interest in the society's affairs would thus result. In a discussion of the matter, George Asmus, John Young, W. R. Pierson and J. F. Ammann reviewed the proceedings which led to the adoption of the present regulation in affiliation procedures, and action on the question was not deemed necessary.

Gold Medal Awarded Again.

An interesting part of the proceedings now took place. The matter of the medal of honor recommended by Ex-President Roland at the Washington convention came up in the regular way, being on the business agenda for discussion. Secretary Young read the recommendation as it appeared in the presidential address, as follows:

Many years ago this society established a gold medal, which, I understand, has been awarded but twice in all these years. Now, I believe we should not bestow it except after the most careful consideration, but I cannot but think that the progress of many branches of our profession during twenty years might have been rewarded wisely through the medal we have had so long established. This would tend to encourage and to spur, especially those whose work is so valuable and so often not rewarded by financial returns. Much of the scientific progress needed in our profession is by work for love and for knowledge and this sort of work needs our help in any way we can give it.

I therefore suggest that the society reestablish this medal as a medal of honor, to be awarded by the board of directors annually, to the man or woman, firm or institution, in the United States, or elsewhere, who has done the most in recent years to promote horticulture, using the phrase in its broadest meaning, members of our society to be eligible for this medal, for meritorious service of the same kind. It may be awarded once in five years to the members of the S. A. F. who, during the preceding five years, shall have rendered services best calculated to advance the largest interest in this society. I do not believe, however, that the medal should ever come to be considered an internal operation, but that the thought of the directors ever should be to encourage others. I would suggest that the board of directors decide the award by ballot at the annual meeting held about mid-Lent.

Mr. Pierson in a short address spoke of the significance of an award of this kind, and referred particularly to the fact that in his opinion no society had received more unselfish devotion than the devotion of George Asmus to the S. A. F. He spoke of the manner in which Mr. Asmus had faced the national flower show situation in Cleveland, and of how he had the key to it in the change to Indianapolis. In recognition of this, and his past work of years, he wished, he said, to nominate Mr. Asmus for the medal of honor, to be awarded this year. Mr. Hagenburger seconded the nomination, as also did H. P. Knoble, Secretary Young, J. F. Ammann, Paul Klingsporn, President Pennoek, Treasurer Hess and Thomas Roland, and a rising vote was called for, awarding the medal to one who had proved himself an unselfish worker for everybody selling plants and flowers. Mr. Asmus was not in the room at the time. Mr. Pierson was directed to locate him and present him at the platform. In the meantime, on motion of Mr. Roland, it was decided to make formal presentation of the medal at the Kansas City convention. Mr. Asmus now appearing, amid applause and cheers, he was addressed by President Pennoek as follows:

Mr. Asmus, there is a medal of honor which is awarded every five years to the person who has done the most, and made the most sacrifices for the S. A. F., and the gentlemen in this room have gone over the field carefully and they have selected you to be the recipient of that medal. It gives us great pleasure today to hand you one of the biggest honors that the society has ever handed any member. We believe that that honor is more than fully merited by the work that you have done in the last five or ten years, which has been prodigious in every way, your time unstintingly given, your business sacrificed; not only your business, but your family as well. In the case of the flower show, you have given every minute, night and day; as some men said, you slept on the job and never flinched. Even when you had the whole board against you, you carried them through with your enthusiasm, your push and your energy.

It gives us a great deal of pleasure to be able to award this medal to you, as a small recompense for the work which you have done in the last five or ten years. The medal is not ready to give to you at this time. We are sorry it is not ready, but it will be presented to you in August, at the convention in Kansas City.

Mr. Asmus made a feeling response. The feeling which prompted the award, he said, was quite sufficient reward for anything he might have done, without anything more material. He was greatly pleased to accept the confidence and thought of the society, and would always cherish the token.

Some further discussion was had as to future bestowal of the medal of honor, and finally, on motion of Mr. Roland, it was decided that the chair appoint a committee of three to consider names and institutions for the award.

Budget.

A long discussion then ensued on the budget. Mr. Knoble, for the budget committee, presented a report embodying a budget for the year amounting to $14,230, and an income estimated at $16,900. The income estimate, he said, was placed at the lowest possible figures.

On motion of Mr. Knoble, it was decided that the board recommend that the society, at the Kansas City convention, contribute $2,500 to the publicity campaign.

H. P. Knoble, for the finance committee, presented a report. The report showed that the permanent fund balance of $13,000 had been reinvested in government certificates of indebtedness of six months' period, and the committee had given authority to the treasurer to reinvest for an additional period of six months following the expiration of the original period. The treasurer had been instructed to rent a safety deposit box for the needs of the society.

A report from the committee on annual report embodied a proposal from the A. T. De La Mare Co., New York, to print the report as a business proposition, adding matter to the volume which should make it a valuable yearbook. Advertising would be accepted for the book, and the publishers would divide with the society any profit which might result over actual cost of publication and distribution. The society, however, was to appropriate $1,000 toward the expense, for a term not to exceed five years.

On motion of Thomas Roland, the report was accepted, as well as the offer of the De La Mare Co., with the provision that the annual be sold for a price not less than the annual membership dues.

On motion of George Asmus, the appropriation for the annual was ordered to be made part of the budget.

Flower Show.

The national flower show was the final topic for discussion. George Asmus, as chairman of the national flower show committee, presented a lengthy report, which included a financial statement of expectations, based on returns up to the fourth day of the show. He reviewed the preparations for the fifth national flower show from the start until the Cleveland fiasco, and then detailed the measures that were taken to save the show dates by going to Indianapolis.

George Asmus bespoke praise for Irwin Bertermann, whose work Mr. Asmus eulogized, and whom he described as really his partner in the show. Mr. Bertermann, entering the room at the time, was called upon for a few remarks, in the course of which he said his relations with those in charge of the show had all along been most pleasant.

The committee on final resolutions presented testimonials of thanks to those who had so whole-heartedly supported the national flower show. The resolutions were unanimously passed.

John Young, Sec'y.

FLOOD AT BEARDSTOWN.

The flood waters of the Illinois river at Beardstown, Ill., are receding slowly, according to late advices from Arvid Anderson, a member of the firm of Ede & Anderson, which operates the Rose View Greenhouses in that town. The damage at these greenhouses was large. A 50-foot side wall of one greenhouse was completely destroyed and carried away, but the remaining structures appear to be holding up well under the strain. The stock of the firm was completely ruined by the inundation, and business had to be entirely suspended. A glance at the illustration on page 44 will give a vivid impression of the plight in which this firm finds itself.

The Rose View Greenhouses have opened a temporary store at 118 East Main street, from which it will handle what business it can until the greenhouses can be cleaned up and are again available. As far as it is now known, this firm is the only one in the trade in this section which suffered from the flood.

OBITUARY

Max Paul Haendler.

Max Paul Haendler, owner of the Old Town Nurseries, South Natick, Mass., died at his home April 28, after a few days' illness. The deceased was born in Saxony, Germany, and came to America when quite young. He was always keenly interested in horticulture and followed it all his life. He secured employment and worked for a number of years on the Walter Hunnewell estate, Wellesley, Mass., later starting in the nursery business at South Natick, a few miles away. He had developed a fine business there and had but recently erected new propagating houses and was working up large stocks of azaleas, rhododendrons, taxus and other hardy material. He was only 43 years of age and in excellent health until near the end. He leaves a wife, but no children.

Mr. Haendler had been for many years a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. He was also a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, New England Nurserymen's Association, Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association and the A. F. and A. M., belonging to Natick lodge and the Royal Arch chapter of that town. He was a most industrious, intelligent and likable man, and his many friends sincerely regret his early demise. Funeral services were held at his late residence at South Natick April 30 and were largely attended. Delegates from the nurserymen's associations, Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and Masonic fraternities were present and there were numerous beautiful floral tokens. W. N. C.

Mrs. Rebecca Federle.

Mrs. Rebecca Federle, widow of the late Charles Federle, of Hamilton, O., died after a four months' illness at her home, on Mount Pleasant avenue, Hamilton, April 13.

Mrs. Federle had been engaged in the florists' business since the death of her husband, six years ago. Besides a son, Carl, and a daughter, Catherine, both of whom were associated in business with her, she is survived by another son, Joseph C. Federle, of Dayton, and another daughter, Mrs. Paul Saurber.

Funeral services took place from the residence Monday, April 17.

Mrs. Elizabeth Krug.

Mrs. Elizabeth Krug, of the Krug Floral Co., Alton, Ill., passed away Sunday afternoon, April 23, after a long-continued illness. Members of the family had been expecting the end, since Mrs. Krug's illness had been especially serious during the last few days of her life.

The deceased was the widow of the late Joseph Krug, who passed away six years ago. She was 85 years of age and was born in Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1836. When she was quite young, her family moved to Dayton, O., where she was reared, and where she was united in marriage to Joseph Krug sixty-five years ago.

Ten children survive. They are: Misses Barbara, Kate, Elizabeth, Anna and Clara Krug; Mrs. William Walter and Mrs. George Landre; and Joseph, John and Aloysius Krug. Also surviving are: One sister, Mrs. Kathryn Brumer, of Columbia City, Ind., and a number of grandchildren.

William Mathews.

In the death of William Mathews, which occurred Sunday morning, April 30, at his home, 947 York street, Utica, N. Y., after an illness which had confined him to his bed for a year and a half, there passed away one of Utica's leading florists and an influential business man. This was the first illness of his eighty years of life, most of those years spent in active work.

Born near Taunton, Somersetshire, England, Mr. Mathews followed the trade of florist and when he came to this country, in 1869, he was already skilled in that line of business.

In 1873 Mr. Mathews went into business for himself on York street, where he established the West View Greenhouses, since that time conducted by him continuously. At one time Mr. Mathews added the extensive cultivation of grapes, but after a time he gave that up and resumed the growing of flowers exclusively.

For many years Mr. Mathews made a special study of orchids and gained considerable fame as an expert in that line.

Mr. Mathews was one of the oldest members of Faxon Lodge, No. 697, F. & A. M. He was also a member of Yahnundasis Lodge of Perfection and served it as master for two years. He was also master of Yahnundasis Chapter of Rose Croix, and a trustee of Ziyara Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He attended St. Luke's church and in politics was Republican. He was one of the earliest members of the Utica Florists' Club and of the Society of American Florists.

Mr. Mathews was married in 1864 to Miss Emily Gridley. She survives, with the following children: Fred, who lives in Rochester; Edward G., architect; Harry S. and Charles M., who are in their father's florists' business; Mrs. Byron Rogers, of Utica, and Mrs. R. L. Crane, of Buffalo. He leaves six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

FEEDING ROSES.

We have mailed you two rose plants, Double White Killarney and Premier. The White Killarney died off gradually, but the Premier just keeps getting yellow. We have watered a marked space, both heavily and lightly and the temperatures have been kept at the regulation rose temperature. Can you tell us the cause of this trouble and a remedy for it? C. R. C.—Pa.

It is difficult to say what is the trouble with these roses, but judging from the plants, especially the Killarney, which have made little growth, and from the soil left on the roots of the plants, I am inclined to think that the plants are suffering from a lack of fertilizer. The soil, being a light, sandy clay, requires a large amount of manure and other fertilizer to grow roses successfully. I suggest that the plants be given a good top-dressing of fresh or partly rotted manure, cattle manure preferred. Give the roses a heavy watering before and after applying the manure, to prevent burning.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THIS month of May should be a record month with nearly all in the florists' business.

SOFT-PEDAL the carnations for Mothers' day. Push other flowers. The day is properly observed by the wearing of any sort of flower.

Do you print on your invoices and statements the terms on which credit is granted? If customers know when you expect payment, they are more apt to pay by that date.

It was a Virginia florist who said he felt lost any week The Review failed to arrive on time. "I like to read it on my Sunday afternoons, and before I go to bed I usually send off ten or a dozen telegrams," he said.

MOTHERS' day will be what the trade makes it. In communities in which florists sit down to wait there will be little extra demand, but where florists individually or in coöperation advertise Mothers' day and flowers the business can be made at least as large as at Easter. Think of it! Another Easter! Wake up! Get busy! Don't let the opportunity slip.

A JOINT resolution lately passed by Congress allots $200,000 for the reimbursement of states which have compensated farmers for losses due to their being compelled to abandon the production of cotton through efforts to exterminate the pink bollworm. If the federal horticultural board is going to pay the farmers of the south because they must grow something else besides cotton, why shouldn't it reimburse florists and nurserymen for stock destroyed in the enforcement of quarantine regulations?

PLANS are being discussed for a Horticultural Society of America, which shall promote all branches of horticulture, with the especial view of interesting the public more largely and more deeply in flowers, trees and shrubs. A vast amount of good might be done by such an organization, and in time it might be made one of the most powerful agencies of benefit to the horticultural trades and to the country at large. J. A. Young, of Aurora, Ill., is a prime mover in the undertaking. His "Plan to Plant Another Tree" campaign has been so successful in Illinois that it might be made national in scope, with tremendous benefit, under the auspices of a national horticultural society.

SEVERAL cities are not represented in the news columns of The Review as regularly as they should be. If you are located in one of them and believe you could furnish an interesting weekly newsletter, you are requested to write the Editor.

THE 1922 bulletin and schedule of the American Sweet Pea Society has been just issued, in the same neat and attractive form as it has appeared in previous years. It contains the schedule of premiums for the fourteenth annual exhibition, to be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 24 and 25. Instructive articles on sweet peas under glass, by William Sim; growing sweet peas in tubs, by A. E. Thatcher, and growing sweet peas outdoors, by Edwin Jenkins, are reprinted from previous bulletins of the society.

At a recent meeting the executive council of the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain urged the ministry of agriculture of that country to send an accredited representative to the conference on quarantine 37 to be held at Washington, D. C., May 15. The council also drew up a list of the more important plants on which it was considered especially important that the quarantine be lifted. Mr. Lobjoit, controller of horticulture, will represent the British government at the conference. Representatives of the French, Belgian and Dutch governments are expected also to attend the conference.

ACT NOW.

Last week the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois ran in the Chicago newspapers advertisements urging the public to take advantage of the abundance of flowers to buy at low prices. The text read:

"Warm weather and sunshine have greatly increased the supply of flowers. The cold, dark days of the past few months have held flowers in the greenhouses from coming into bloom. Now, favorable weather is literally forcing millions of flowers into bloom. They are plentiful and prices are down. Enjoy flowers now—in your home—your office. Remember your friends. Just 'Say It with Flowers.'"

If florists in smaller communities as well as in large ones would make a little extra effort at this time, the public would be able to enjoy flowers without paying high prices for them, and the glut which threatens the markets at this season would be avoided.

PLAN TO PLANT ANOTHER TREE.

The campaign inaugurated by the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association to promote tree planting has been markedly successful in the short time it has been conducted. Part of this success is due to the energy and resourcefulness which the secretary, J. A. Young, of Aurora, has shown in arousing interest throughout the state. Through chambers of commerce, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and other organizations, interest in the movement was nourished in each community. The slogan, "Plan to Plant Another Tree," is the catchiest originated in the nursery trade. In a department bearing this slogan at its head, over 200 newspapers in the state of Illinois are printing material from the clip sheet sent out by Secretary Young. Even the metropolitan dailies of Chicago, which seldom use items from clip sheets, are running this material in their columns.

How completely editorial interest has been aroused is evident from the fact that Mr. Young has received a number of suggestions from newspapers throughout the state which have been mutually helpful. The questions and answers corner of this department is keeping Mr. Young busy; some of the answers are printed on the clip sheets, though most of them are answered direct. Showing real altruism, the clip sheet bears articles not only about trees and shrubs, but also about vegetables and flowers for the home garden.

The campaign as conducted by Mr. Young has so far shown, by its success, two things; first, that a national campaign by nurserymen along this line would be as helpful and as profitable a piece of publicity as the trade has ever done and, second, that the florists in their national publicity campaign might make use of the clip sheet idea to acquaint the public, through the newspapers, with the culture and care of flowers, and might give the public a more intimate knowledge of our highly interesting occupation. A "Say It with Flowers" column in daily newspapers might be made one of the most appealing features of the home page.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Writing in the bulletin of the British Florists' Federation, J. Wilson, one of its members, deplors the absence of a trade journal in England catering to the retailer's as well as the grower's needs. He says the reason no trade publication in his country has a circulation among flower shop owners is because none makes itself interesting and useful to them. He then remarks:

I have before me while writing this article several copies of an American publication, The Florists' Review, and a very wonderful production it is, with a very large circulation. It is issued weekly; contains about 150 pages, of which about two-thirds are advertisements; is brightly edited, nicely illustrated, well printed, and on good paper, and costs $2 per year.

I am not suggesting for a moment that a publication of that size would be necessary in this country—I am fully aware of the tremendous difference there is between England and America in point of size and population; but I am suggesting, and very strongly, that if a journal of this description, of course proportionately modified to suit the requirements, were to be inaugurated, it would be of incalculable value to the whole trade collectively and could hardly fail to be a commercial success.

MOTHERS' DAY CAMPAIGN.

Florists who read in The Review last week of the splendid opportunity afforded by the publicity committee of the Society of American Florists to take advantage of the American Legion's statement in behalf of Mothers' day have responded in large numbers, requesting matrices of the newspaper advertisement reproduced in The Review and posters to put in their windows. The florists in a number of cities have got in touch with the local posts of the American Legion, in order to further the local observance of the day, and some florists are getting merchants in other lines of business to display the posters described in last week's Review. With such coöperation, the campaign for Mothers' day cannot fail of success. But everyone must keep pushing. If any florist has not received posters, send for them at once. They will be sent special delivery upon application to H. V. Swenson, 225 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, who is sending out material free for the publicity committee of the Society of American Florists.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market is not in a prosperous condition just now. The week just ended was one which merged on the disastrous. It could not be said that the supply was particularly heavy, but the bottom fell out of the demand, and several lines in particularly good crop went to pieces. Sweet peas suffered worse than anything else, thousands going to waste; flowers with long stems and approaching the exhibition quality were and are moving at as low as 50 cents per hundred. Lilies, too, were caught in the downward movement, and sales are reported at as low as 5 cents per flower. There seems to be no reason ascribed to the downfall. Some say, "Oh, we always expect a little turn like this in spring." But, all the same, present conditions were totally unexpected, and there is no explanation for it, other than that the public is not buying.

Roses are plentiful, but they do not clear well. A great deal of stock was carried over Saturday, April 29, in spite of low prices and concessions beyond them.

American Beauty was selling Monday, May 1, at anything from 10 cents to 30 cents for specials, and clearances are being made at figures even below the minimum. A quotable range for hybrid teas might be $2 to $15 from No. 2 upward, but concessions even from these prices are far from difficult to obtain, especially with a large left-over holding available at the opening of market May 1.

Cattleyas are in fair supply, with prices running 35 cents to 75 cents per flower and hybrids and the finer gigas bringing occasionally $1 per hundred.

Carnations are also caught in the slump, and the best only move within a range of $3 to $5 per hundred.

White lilies are not in great demand, and the supply is, therefore, too great for assimilation. About 5 cents to 10 cents per flower is the range, with a few selected stalks commanding 12 cents per flower. Valley is plentiful, but the wedding season is commencing, and sales have not fallen below the $6 mark for top grade.

Violets are finished and lilae is now holding sway, quantities arriving from the south. There is no let-up in the supply of miscellaneous flowers, and arrivals fare rather badly with the slump in staple lines. Feverfew has made an appearance and the supply of gladioli, many coming from the south, is increasing. Other items available are daisies, in quantity; snapdragons, some of splendid quality; Delphinium Belladonna, cornflowers, pansies galore, alysum, stocks, bouvardia, narcissi, both Trumpet and poeticus; a few Darwin tulips, centaureas, myosotis, mignonette, arbutus, lupines, columbines, peonies and fruit blossoms.

Various Notes.

Gus. Ladiges, the uptown retail florist, is leaving for a prolonged European trip May 6. He will travel with a Plattdeutscher party, which has engaged the whole of the S. S. Hansa, and he will not return until near September.

The project for installing a formal flower garden in Central park, in connection with an exhibition of statuary, has been abandoned, owing to pressure of public opinion that such a display would be a dangerous precedent, in so far as the freedom of the park system is concerned.

Dr. N. L. Britton, former botanist of the S. A. F., has just returned from Porto Rico, where he has, with a party, been studying the flora of the island.

Visitors last week were S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, and Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.

Eugene Dailedouze, of Flatbush, N. Y., who has been under the weather for some time, was able to make a trip into the market section last week.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Dahlia Society is called for Tuesday, May 8, at the Hotel Grand, Broadway and Thirty-first street.

Hildenbrand & Bartels, of the Eighteenth street flower market, have been receiving cut blooms of erlangea. This member of the compositae has never been seen before as a cut flower and has excited curiosity. Its scented foliage and lilae, tubular flowers did not seem to find the appreciation expected and it is, therefore, doubtful whether this native of tropical Africa will figure as a regular thing on the market.

A statement of the bankruptcy proceedings in the case of George J. Polkranas will be found on another page of this issue under the heading, "Business Embarrassments." J. H. P.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, have opened a store at 144 West Eighteenth street, where a member of the firm will be in charge.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held in the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, Saturday, May 13, at 3:30 p. m. An exhibition of plants and flowers will be held in the Museum building in connection with the meeting. Schedules for this exhibition, which will have classes for orchids, herbaceous plants, shrubs, trees and various spring flowers and potted plants, may be had on application to Mrs. George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

There is always a calm after the storm. And how true it is in our own business! The storm of the Easter rush was a terrific one and the present calm is welcomed by everyone.

The market supply at the present time is good, but the demand is poor, due to the fact that there is a good supply of outdoor stock, such as lilae, Darwin tulips and outdoor valley. Roses are plentiful and the quality of the stock is fine. Carnations are also plentiful. Sweet peas are still holding their own. The supply of gardenias is fine and the supply of orchids is fair. Gladioli are just beginning to appear locally. Snapdragons are plentiful and the quality of the stock is good.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Johnston and daughter are enjoying a vacation in the sunny south.

J. J. Perry, of the S. S. Pennock Co., is in Philadelphia on business.

The Women's Civic League is making elaborate preparations for the annual flower mart, to be held the second week in May. A committee has been appointed from the local club to cooperate with the league in this annual venture. The florists will be given their usual space to display their stock.

It is reported that the recent cold spell played havoc with the peony crop.

Charles F. Feast and Robert T. Paterson left Sunday, April 30, for Detroit to attend the F. T. D. directors' meeting. R. W. J.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Notorious for the suddenness with which it can change front, the Chicago market turned another corner April 28. There had been nearly a week of fairly active demand, but it had not been strong enough to clean up the accumulation of stock which had weighted the market down since Easter. Then came a most welcome gentleman from Omaha seeking material for a tag day. He must have thought our wholesalers an exceptionally warm-hearted and hospitable group. The fact is, he was the man they had been looking for. Although he was limited as to price, he needed a large quantity of flowers. They helped him out. His shipments were made April 27, and the market opened April 28 with nothing but fine, fresh flowers, and none too many of them. There was a good shipping business April 28, and April 29 the city trade bought more liberally than at any time since Easter. There was hardly anything in the wholesalers' iceboxes over Sunday.

With the market once more on a solid footing, interest has turned to Mothers' day. There being no more flowers than are needed now, the belief is general that there can not be too many at the end of next week. Orders already are coming in strongly and from many unusual sources. Numerous stores which do not ordinarily handle flowers, sensing the fact that nothing but flowers convey the message of Mothers' day, are inquiring about the supply and indicate a desire to break into the game. It would interest the florists in the communities whence these inquiries come if they could know the unanimity with which the Chicago wholesalers are replying that they will have flowers only for florists next week.

It seems certain the demand will be the largest ever known, but what of the supply? It is a foregone conclusion that there will not be so many carnations as at Mothers' day last year. The supply all along has been smaller this year. Nor will roses be in unusual supply. Easter was so late that rose houses then in crop can not be again giving a heavy cut for Mothers' day. There will be a lot of roses, to be sure, but the demand will be so strong there could not be too many.

The one flower which probably will be in larger supply than ever before is the peony. Not only are the many new southern fields now coming into full yield, but Mothers' day this year falls on the latest possible date and many shippers not usually classed as southern will have at least a part of their crops ready. The supply, therefore, probably will be much heavier than last year. "Probably" is used advisedly, because the peony is a proverbially undependable crop. Looking fine now, it might be ruined over night. It has happened before. A frost might do it, or hail, or even a high wind might cut the supply in half. On the other hand, fine, warm, bright weather continued for several days might add considerably to the expected cut.

As to prices, it is felt that almost any price might be obtained for good carnations, which will be first choice, but that 12 cents to 15 cents is as far as it is best to go, except for specialties.

But if carnations are short of the supply at those prices, good short-stemmed roses should be worth as much. And fine, big, showy peonies should be worth as much as carnations or short roses. So you pay your money and take your choice, with the probability that there will be a better chance of getting the order filled in full if it is heaviest on peonies.

There are likely to be enough long roses, at from 25 cents up, but another good way will be to push the sale of baskets and boxes of miscellaneous flowers. There will be large supplies of sweet peas, valley, daisies, Darwin tulips, snapdragons, lilies, lupines, even jonquils, and the prices will not be so stiff as on the three leaders.

This week there are indications that reluctant spring has arrived at last. With the warmer weather locally, there are increased shipments from the south. Gladioli are arriving in considerable quantity, from Florida, Mississippi,

Wholesalers Have Busy Session.

The Wholesale Cut Flower Association had a busy evening at Hotel Sherman April 27. The first subject up for consideration was making effective the new plan of coöperative advertising, the sole responsibility for which shall rest with the growers and wholesalers, letting the retailers out. It was decided to make the new plan effective May 1 and on that day the wholesalers each sent the following notice to their consignors:

Following thorough consideration over a period of several months, it was unanimously decided at the joint meeting of the Allied Florists' Association and the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, on April 20th, 1922, to increase the advertising assessments of Growers to 1% of their net sales and the assessment of Commission Dealers to 1% on an amount equivalent to 15% of their gross business. This plan to take effect May 1st, 1922.

We seek your full coöperation in this matter, which is destined to give the Flower Business a fresh impetus in the right direction for the mutual benefit of all engaged therein.

ALLIED FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.
COMMERCIAL FLOWER GROWERS OF CHICAGO.

The matter of handling credits and collections on the line that is followed in the New York market was discussed and on motion, President Klingsporn appointed a committee, consisting of C. J. Michelsen, Eric Johnson and P. C.

Schupp, to prepare a definite proposition to be considered at the next meeting.

For president—C. J. Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co.

For vice-president—Aaron T. Pyfer, of A. T. Pyfer & Co.

For secretary—A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co., who nominated Fred Price, of Peter Reinberg, Inc.

For treasurer—P. C. Schupp, of J. A. Budlong.

New Officers of A. F. A.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Allied Florists' Association April 28, held at the Randolph hotel, the following new officers were elected: President, Peter Pearson; vice-president, August Poehlmann; treasurer, Fred Stielow. Hilmer V. Swenson was appointed secretary.

Upon the election of the new officers, a rising vote of thanks was given by the entire new board for the splendid service rendered the association by the retiring officers and directors; namely, George Asmus, W. J. Smyth and A. Lange. With the vote was given a sincere expression by those who had been associated with these gentlemen, for the untiring work they had done for the association, and the sincerity they had shown as representatives of the retailers.

It was unanimously voted by the board to coöperate with the American Legion in connection with the Society of American Florists' campaign for Mothers' day.

The sum of $1,200 was appropriated, to be used for newspaper space, in which the American Legion advertisement reproduced in The Review last week will be run.

Sunday at Evanston.

We once knew a florist who was located adjoining a ball park—every home run cost him at least one pane of glass. The following was on the front page of the Tribune May 1:

FLORIST HAS GOLFERS NABBED FOR WILD SHOTS.

R. F. Gloede, florist, who regards golfing in the vicinity of his garden and hothouse as an overt act, had seven men who were playing on the community links at Evanston arrested yesterday afternoon. His establishment is at 1419 Central street, Evanston, and the place is partly surrounded by the golf course.

Charges of disorderly conduct were made by Gloede against the seven defendants.

Mr. Gloede may have to erect a hail screen around his place.

Jacob Bieher, until recently grower for the Batavia Greenhouse Co., has taken charge of growing operations for the Lombard Floral Co., D. J. Abrams, proprietor. Mr. Abrams states that this year, contrary to their usual custom, they will run part of the place through the summer without resting the plants.

J. H. Holden, who formerly was in the florists' business on Forty-seventh street and who lately has been a partner in the establishment of Holden & Robinson, at Rensselaer, Ind., has bought out Mr. Robinson's interest and will continue the business on his own account.

H. E. Humiston has joined the staff of the Pulverized Poultry Manure Co., in the capacity of general sales manager, a position for which he is well fitted by experience in both the florists' and the fertilizer trade.

Victor has been dropped at the establishment of Wendland & Keimel Co., which acquired all the stock of the variety from the E. G. Hill Co. The bench plants were sent to the E. C. Amling place near Los Angeles. Victor is a beautiful rose, but too single for this market. In the better climate of California it is thought it may come more double.

Hinsdale, April 29, was largely attended. Thirty automobiles followed the hearse to the cemetery and there were many flowers. Mr. Benson had been in charge of the greenhouses of Bassett & Washburn for thirty-four years. His place will be taken by Charles Swanson, who has been there twelve years and who for some time has had charge of all work under glass.

The Briggs Floral Co., with headquarters on Sheridan road at Broadway, closed the old store in the Briggs House April 30 and has removed the fixtures to a new location, on Fifty-third street near Harper avenue, a store once used by W. H. Hilton.

Will the trade take an active part in the second Pageant of Progress? It will open July 29.

Charles Cowdery, for several years in charge of the greenhouses of Wietor Bros., will go to Roanoke, Va., to become foreman for F. Fallon.

Marshall N. Tyler is building a new home in North Evanston.

E. F. Kurowski, president of the John C. Moninger Co., has been appointed manager by the creditors' committee now in charge of operations. The committee's first act was to reduce overhead and to speed up deliveries.

W. J. Smyth and Hilmer V. Swenson were at Detroit this week to attend a meeting of the directors of the F. T. D. Mr. Smyth was one of the charter members of the association and is one of the conservative old wheelhorses whose sound judgment may always be counted on in the selection of the right path.

John Mangel is one of the most regular buyers on the market. He knows what he wants for his three hotel stores and where to get it so it does not take him long, though his purchases are heavy. May 2 he received many congratulations on the fifty-eighth anniversary of his birthday.

C. J. Michelsen is confident that Mothers' day records will be broken this year. He says the advance orders reaching the E. C. Amling Co. are considerably more numerous and larger than last year.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is nicely settled in the temporary quarters of the cut flower department in the basement at 66 and 68 East Randolph street. There is a good stairway and excellent elevator service and for summer use the base-

Cape Jessamine Buds for Memorial Day

The largest Jessamine Farm in the U. S.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS AND THE TRADE:

The unusually warm and humid atmospheric conditions of the past 10 days have developed an abnormal growth in the buds, and from present indications shipments will start moving from the 12th to 15th, several days earlier than we had previously predicted. However, not more than 60% of the crop will be ready by May 30th.

Our Buds are fine; we believe in cultivation and fertilization, which costs money, but the extra quality more than repays it. "Squirrel ear" leaves and knobby buds do not go with us. If you have never bought of us, all we ask is a trial shipment.

We ship anywhere in the U. S.; time arrivals and guarantee A-1 stock. No order too large for us. Place your order where the supply is large, but to avoid the rush, order early. We are booking orders daily. Special attention given regular orders.

ment has unquestionable advantages. It was quite a chore to move the ice machine and the big coolers, but this was done by specialists and the ice machine was out of service only a few days.

H. B. Kennicott says that advices received from peony growers in the southern part of the state indicate that most of them will begin shipping before Mothers' day. Mr. Kennicott thinks many peony growers who never before have contributed to the Mothers' day supplies on this market will be able to do so this year.

Edward Mallinson, manager of the Fleischman Floral Co., says business for 1922 has been, steadily, a good increase over the same part of 1921. He expects a large demand for Mothers' day, but does not look forward to it with pleasure, saying that the public questions prices more at Mothers' day than at any other special flower day of the year.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received shipments of poet's narcissus last week all the way from Tacoma, Wash. The flowers arrived in good condition in spite of the length of the journey.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business was poor all through the last week in April. The weather was delightfully cool—real flower weather—yet there was no activity. The weddings, the mainstay of the week before, were a disappointment. The rose crop was so heavy that many roses had to be sacrificed and even then it was hard to sell them all. The long season for outdoor lilac was a disadvantage to the market. This season outdoor lilac has lasted two weeks, an unusually long time. It has been good and has proved exceedingly popular. Hardly any of this lilac goes through the wholesale houses, but it reaches the buyers and satisfies much demand. Sweet peas appear to be recovering; they are more plentiful, of fair quality, and they sell pretty well. There are decidedly fewer nice carnations. Those that are of high quality sell. The oversupply of Easter lilies continues. Beauties and orchids have declined in price. Valley suffers from the competition of outdoor-grown stock. There are plenty of callas and an abundance of snapdragons. Darwin tulips are coming in from outdoors. Greens sell pretty well.

Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance of members and their friends at the Florists' Club meeting in the Adelphia Tuesday evening, May 2, to hear Sydney H. Bayersdorfer review his trip abroad. Mr. Bayersdorfer sailed from New York February 7 on the Aquitania and arrived home April 23 on the maiden voyage of the Resolute. He had a wonderful trip, saw and heard many interesting things and returned convinced that our florists in America are the peers of any florists in the world.

The Joseph G. Neidinger Co. exhibited an American Legion shield, a likeness of the button enlarged, which was admired.

Old Soil.

There was an important point brought out in these columns a few weeks ago; to wit, the successful use of old soil. The case cited was of four benches of Laddie in fine shape, but growing in old soil. The soil has been on the benches three years. The carnations have been growing in that soil two years. They look well. I do not advocate using old soil on the benches; it might mean failure, but I do advocate giving this matter some thought, because, if it can be successfully done, it means a big saving in the cost of production.

Roses.

The present heavy overproduction of roses in our market is surprising to those who are informed on what is going on in the rose houses. A large part of the replanting that was formerly done in summer is being done now. There is a demand for 2 and 3-year-old greenhouse-grown roses for planting in the garden. Variety is not at first important; just so the plants are hybrid tea roses, strong and healthy, they will do. One enterprising chap took orders for these rose plants in a booth at the New York flower show and sold a fabulous number. The retail price is said to have been 75 cents each; $50 per hundred.

The Market.

Last week was one of the duller ever experienced here and the market was flooded with all kinds of stock. Roses arrived in large quantities, as did also bulbous stock. Carnations the first part of last week were a drug on the market. Saturday, April 29, however, saw a decided change, for stock tightened up and business took a sudden spurt, with the result that the market cleaned up nicely.

Easter lilies moved slowly all last week, it being almost impossible to sell them. Calendulas have been clearing fairly well, as have snapdragons. Some exceptionally good ten weeks' stocks have been arriving in double and single varieties.

Bulbous stock is about over. A few tulips, mostly Darwin, are still coming in, while daffodils are just about done for. There was a great call for valley last week. Some good daisies, both yellow and white, are putting in an appearance. Sweet peas of good quality are still arriving.

Various Notes.

The latest reports are that there is to be another florists' dance, Tuesday, May 9, but the date, as yet, is not official. The correct time and place will be announced later. Everybody should come and, make this dance a huge success.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a slight increase in business last week, due largely to a number of small social functions and an increase in the demand for funeral work. The storekeepers and growers are now focusing their energies on Mothers' day and Memorial day, although the June graduations will give them some activity.

Serious complaints come from all parts of the state that the winter just passed has been severe and unusually destructive to many kinds of shrubs, bushes, vines, hedges and nursery stock. This is especially true of

The Market.

Business at the wholesale markets continues a bit flat and values are comparatively low. We have had continuously clear skies now for over a fortnight and production, as a result, has been large. There has been good retail buying, but too many flowers are arriving to be used in the regular channels of trade. Now is the time to give flowers publicity and move the large supplies which have to be carried over daily. Roses have had a rather hard week and prices have crumpled badly. Buyers can secure flowers at much their own prices after the early morning rush is over. The Killarney and Ophelia roses now coming in are of rather poor quality, but Columbia, Scott Key, Premier, Ward, Butterfly and the reds, like Crusader and Hadley, remain good.

Carnations are overdone and prices are weaker than in the last report. Good quality flowers move well, but a great many second-grade blooms are now seen. Winkler's Morning Glow is now strongly asserting itself, while Ward is in excellent demand. Pink Delight is somewhat on the wane. Callas and lilies are selling at low prices and snapdragons, although of grand quality, are a veritable drug. It is too bad this useful flower comes in with such a rush at this season; it is one of the most satisfactory of all flowers for keeping.

Heavier arrivals of marguerites are hard to assimilate. Sweet peas are overdone, and there are a good many of inferior quality. Daffodils are nearing the end and there are few tulips left. Only small shipments of gladioli are coming in, as well as some nice Spanish irises. Gypsophila is popular and sells out quickly, as does hardy larkspur.

There are fair supplies of cattleyas and gardenias, and more valley is needed. Small supplies of orange blossoms are noted. Pot plant trade continues good.

Various Notes.

The chief horticultural event of local interest this week is the great show of native ferns and flowers naturally arranged, which opened May 3 and which will continue for at least a week. Although great expense has been entailed in preparing this unique and notable exhibition, it was decided to make it absolutely free to the public, and record attendances are looked for. There was a private view of the show May 3, when admission was by ticket only. In connection with the show, a program of lectures on New England wild flowers, their protection and cultivation, was arranged for. At 3 p. m. May 4 there will be an illustrated lecture on "Why Our Wild Flowers Are Rare," by Prof. M. L. Fernald, of Harvard. May 5 H. W. Faulkner, of Washington, Conn., will give an illustrated talk on "The Conservation of Our Wild Flowers." May 6 "The Cultivation of Nature Plants" will be handled by Dr. Robert T. Jackson, of Peterborough, N. H., and May 8 Norman Taylor, of the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, will give an illus-

Harold A. Ryan had the decorations for the wedding of Miss Eleanor Brewer, at the Unitarian church, Jamaica Plain, April 22. Palms, blue hydrangeas and pink rambler roses were used. Mr. Ryan says he had this year by far the best Easter trade since he started in business.

Prof. Charles S. Sargent, the venerable and esteemed head of the Arnold Arboretum, passed his eightieth milestone April 24 and received many congratulatory messages and gifts of flowers. The professor still takes an active daily part in the administration of the arboretum, which he has made his great life's work. He is taking an active part in the coming show of native ferns and flowers in Horticultural hall.

At the Woodland Golf Club, Newton, April 20, there was a demonstration of power lawn mowers from Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., the J. Breck & Sons Corporation and other local firms. This demonstration attracted numerous gardeners, florists, golf course managers and estate owners.

Such early shrubs as magnolias, prunus, pyrus and forsythias are now in beautiful flower locally and in Brookline we need only the addition of a few pepper trees, eucalypti and palms to make anyone imagine that he is in the suburbs of Los Angeles or Pasadena.

Mothers' day prospects are excellent. There will be a large crop of white carnations, Matchless now being loaded with flowers. Of colored varieties there will not be an overabundance, but all retailers are endeavoring to get the general public away from the purchasing of earnations only, and white and colored flowers are being advertised in lieu of white and colored carnations, Miss Anna Jarvis to the contrary.

Bulletin No. 1 has just been issued by the American Orchid Society to its members. It contains a charming, colored picture on the frontispiece of Cypripedium acule growing in its native habitat. "A Thought," by Albert C. Burrage, on the first page expresses the hope that succeeding bulletins will similarly portray other of our beautiful native orchids. The bulletin contains the list of officers, by-laws and a membership list; the latter contains twenty-five life and seventy-six annual members. Of the whole number, forty-four are resident in Massachusetts; New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and California come next in numbers of members. W. N. C.

MAKING FRIENDS.

Advertising in The Review has many interesting features—in addition to making money for the advertiser it also makes him friends, provided that he sends out good stock. Like this:

Will say we have made many friends through your medium for reaching the trade. In many instances orders were duplicated for delivery next season. We shall be using your columns again early this fall.—Willis & Etherington, Thomasville, Ga., April 22, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Moravia, N. Y.—Frank H. Barnes has just purchased the W. C. Tutthill greenhouses.

Ocean Springs, Miss.—The Riviera Gardens have announced that, owing to the great increase in business, the firm will open a branch office at Gulfport, Miss.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

While there was a good deal of funeral work last week, it was by no means a good one in other ways. Stock cleans up fairly well and there is little left over at the market at the end of each day. Some magnificent tulips have been arriving from the north and, with this particular flower, the northern growers do far better than those in the south. The stems and flowers of the Darwin tulips are good. Local Dutch and Spanish iris and I. tingitana are good and meet a ready market. Local daffodils are about over. Flowers for baskets, such as delphiniums, aquilegias and long-stemmed stock generally, are much in demand. Orchids, valley, sweet peas and gardenias are taken regularly, with few left-over at any time. Shippers say that business fell off sharply after Easter, but this, of course, was expected. At the time of writing, after a few warm days, the temperature is down again, giving dull, cold and cloudy weather, which is never good for business here.

Various Notes.

Peter Wilson, who has been for many years connected with the business here and is well known and universally liked, has gone into business with his brother, T. D. Wilson, at 2009 East First street, under the name of Wilson's Flower Shop. This is what is known as the Boyle Heights section, and there are few good flower stores there, so that these young men should be able to work up a good business.

Albert Beverley, of Santa Barbara, has been in the city and vicinity on one of his periodical buying trips.

R. Laemell, salesman for Roy F. Wilcox & Co., and Frank Lichtenberg were to leave last week for Murrietta Springs, Cal. Mr. Laemell is much better, but a good rest at the springs will set him up. Mr. Lichtenberg has also been under the weather for some time.

On the eve of his departure for the executive meeting of the F. T. D., at Detroit, A. F. Borden invited all local F. T. D. members to his home to talk over matters of interest connected with the association. A good attendance was on hand and an instructive discussion was held. Mrs. Borden served coffee and cake. All of those present wished Mr. Borden a pleasant and profitable trip.

At the store of Walter Armaeost & Co. another large consignment of baskets is due. This consignment will be ready for the summer trade, which is always large. Mr. Williamson says that the demand for their collections of baskets, in which the retailer leaves the choice to Armaeost & Co., and the regular collections that are sent out, lead to an enormous business in this stock. A consignment of chiffon imported direct from the European manufacturers has also arrived.

D. Barron, proprietor of the Alexandria Florist, has purchased a 30-foot power yacht, which he will keep near his cottage at Balboa beach. This is a beautiful boat, well fitted with every convenience for cruising and, doubtless, Mr. Barron will have a great deal of pleasure out of it. Business is reported as extra good at the store.

Albert Goldenson reports fine business and everyone is kept on the jump at the store.
H. R. R.

William T. Miller has founded a retail mail order business in seeds, bulbs and plants at 1209 South Crenshaw boulevard. Mr. Miller, who came to California some time ago because of Mrs. Miller's health, may be better known to the trade under the name of Wilhelm Miller. He was associated with L. H. Bailey in the preparation of Bailey's Cyclopedic of American Horticulture and other standard works. He also has been a prolific writer on horticultural topics for a considerable list of publications and his knowledge of plants probably is as extensive as that of any man in America. He adopted the American form of his name during the war, as he is a thoroughgoing American citizen.

PASADENA SHOW HIGH LIGHTS.

With only a limited time to look over the excellent show put on at the Hotel Maryland, at Pasadena, Cal., by the Pasadena Horticultural Society, April 21 and 22, the writer has surely missed some fine exhibits, but a few that stood out prominently are here mentioned.

Fuller report appears on a forward page.

Siebrecht's House of Flowers had the first place for a table decoration, which was a splendid conception of orchids, beautifully carried out. Mr. Siebrecht also had a magnificent group of cut flowers and plants.

The new tulip, Marechal Foch, shown

Who Wants to be a "Dead One" Anyhow?

The little daughter of the Methodist minister, and the young son of the Presbyterian minister got into an argument while playing together. This grew into a violent quarrel in which the religion of their respective fathers was soon interjected. The little girl poked out her tongue and quoted,

"I am Methodist born, and Methodist bred,
When I die I'll be Methodist dead."

The boy countered with,

"I'm Presbyterian born, and Presbyterian bred,
When I die I'll be Presbyterian dead."

They then tried to see who could say this the fastest. Now Methodist is a shorter word than Presbyterian, and a woman always has the advantage of a man when it comes to talking. The boy was quickly beaten, but as he picked up his things and started towards home, he left this parting shot: "Well, who wants to be a 'dead one' anyhow?"

Now that's a mighty good question. Who does want to be a "dead one?" In the florists' business we have a fine bunch of live ones among both growers and retailers. We also have a few dead ones. It is pretty easy to pick out the live ones from the dead ones. Anything that is alive grows. Just as soon as Easter was over the live ones cleaned up their places, adjusted their complaints, sent their unsalable plants or flowers to the hospital or scrap heap, put in fresh stock and began right away to plan for Mothers' Day, Decoration Day, and to map out a plan to get the graduation and wedding business in June. The Growers got good and busy figuring out what they would have for next Christmas, and even as far ahead as next Easter. The live ones always find time to interest themselves in the affairs of their own town. Are working members of the Chamber of Commerce and Commercial clubs. You will find them at the head of every "City Beautiful," "Village Improvement," or "Clean Up Week," that comes along. They always contribute to the National Publicity Campaign, and, of course, the retailers are members of the F. T. D. It is like an electric shock just to rub up against that live bunch. There are lots of other ways to pick out the "live ones." We have just mentioned a few of the most marked symptoms.

As wholesalers we have tried to belong to the "live" class. If, during the past Easter season, we have done anything that would seem to put us in the other class, please stick a pin into us in the form of a letter of complaint. We will take it kindly and thank you for it. "Who wants to be a 'dead one' anyhow?"

We wish to deserve fully the title of—

by J. H. Teekamp, is a beauty; the color is a radiant, glowing rosy pink, hard to describe but most beautiful. It attracted a good deal of attention.

Herbert Bateman, Inc., Los Angeles, won the gold medal for a display, with a charming wedding and altar decoration.

Wright's Flower Shop had a splendid table decoration of mauve tulips and ribbons to match. This was greatly admired.

The Winsell-Gibbs Seed Co. had an interesting exhibit carrying out the firm's ideas in landscaping—in miniature, of course. The magnificent cinerarias and hippeastrums shown by Howard & Smith were the center of much attraction. They have been so often described that it is only necessary to say that they are absolutely unrivaled in the trade.

Walter Armacost & Co. put up a fine exhibit of roses in their usual inimitable style. The flowers were magnificent and the arrangement all that could be desired to show off the characteristics of the varieties. Immense bunches of Columbia, Crusader, Beauty and all the popular commercial varieties were shown, a perfect exhibit. This was awarded the gold medal in the wholesalers' class.

Theodore Payne made a nice display of California native shrubs and flowers, including a new berberis and some healthy, well grown plants of the California bleeding heart, which are seldom seen.

The Morris & Snow Seed Co. and Campbell's Seed Store both showed their best.

Taken all together, it was an attractive show. It is a pity the society cannot secure larger quarters and more conveniently arranged, as now only an average crowd makes it difficult to see the exhibits.

The Market.

Quantities of stock flooded the market last week. Roses are as plentiful and fine as they were the previous week. Carnations are being cut in large numbers; much of this crop is coming in too early for the Mothers' day trade, for which it was intended. A newcomer in the market is the gladiolus, though this flower is only to be found in two or three places. There are also a few peonies. There are choice snapdragons, gillyflowers, many varieties of marigolds, good sweet peas and any amount of early summer stock. Dutch and Spanish irises are becoming fairly plentiful. Tulips are even more plentiful than they were the previous week; in fact, they are almost a drug in the market. Violets are practically gone, and there are few narcissi or daffodils. Pansies are good and reasonable in price. Ranunculi and anemones are somewhat scarce. Easter lilies are still in season, and there are some calla lilies. Lilies of the valley and gardenias are plentiful and good, while there are enough orchids to take care of the demand. Quantities of wild flowers are adding to the market surplus. Statice and other strawflowers are now being cut.

Various Notes.

A. Twitchett, a director of the Dahlia Society of California and one of the leaders in promoting the interests of the dahlia in this state, said: "There has been a big demand for California dahlia bulbs from the east this year. Some of the growers could have sold many more of their choice bulbs, if they had had them to offer." Mr. Twitchett

OAKLAND, CAL.

The Market.

The demand last week was largely for roses, carnations and tulips. Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are a little soft and do not stand up well, but there is an abundant stock in sight. Tulips are the most popular flowers this month and large quantities of superior stock are being brought to the market. The end of next month will probably see the last of the tulips. Baby roses are on the market in large quantities now. A slight decrease is noted in the prices of all of this stock. Many new varieties of spring flowers are on the market. Sweet peas are arriving abundantly. Purple lilacs, ranunculi and irises are fairly abundant now. The Spanish iris is especially fine this spring. Snapdragons are also abundant. A few bachelor's buttons and pansies have appeared on the market. Violets have entirely disappeared. Tamarix shrubs are becoming popular for decorations. The first gladioli appeared on the market last week.

Various Notes.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. experienced a good Easter business and managed to clean up practically everything. W. S. Harmon thinks that the market for lilies is decreasing from year to year, as it is now possible to have lilies for an increased length of time. Most of the goods sold this year were reasonable in price. Much of the business was in cut flowers. Preparations are being made for a big Mothers' day. This firm received several orders from the east on the occasion of the opening of the new Reich & Lievre department store.

Cliff Wagenet is still laid up from his attack of blood poisoning. He is expected back on the job next week. The business of the Oakland Flower Shop has been increasing steadily, in spite of Mr. Wagenet's forced absence. The shipping business here was particularly brisk. The business transacted during the month of April is rather poor, as a rule, but this year the volume at this store surpassed that for the month of April of 1920 and 1921. A considerable number of new customers have been booked, while business with most of the old ones is steadily increasing.

Hogan & Evers have received plans for a new store. The present quarters of this firm are too small and the new store will provide the additional space needed, and will give a better location, with a larger window frontage. The new store will be adjacent to the First National bank, on Telegraph avenue, about half a block from the present location of the firm. The change will not be made before August 1, as the firm's present lease does not expire for some time. The Easter business of this firm was fine. The volume of business is estimated to have been fully twice that of Easter in 1921.

The window of the Thorsted Floral Co. is always sure to have something interesting and unusual in it. This is especially true of orchid displays. People always look to Thorsted's window for all new orchid displays. A most unusual display last month was a basket of mountain orchids. The basket was made of bark and contained a quantity of moss and a number of ferns, making a most attractive setting for the orchids.

In witness of the power of the unusual to draw attention, Thomas & Harris placed a bunch of huge tulips in the window one day last month with no other flowers to speak of, except ferns, which were used to keep the window from looking barren. The tulips were so large that the window attracted more attention than if it had been simply filled with flowers.

J. Seulerger reports a fine Easter. Business since Easter has been a little quiet, in Mr. Seulerger's estimation, but a steady and profitable business is going on.

A new store under the name of the California Floral Co. has been opened at 1707 Broadway. The store is not a large establishment, but it is attempting to cut prices. At present the only Japanese florist in the downtown district is M. Mori, 1510 Clay street. This establishment has been run practically on an American basis. Several other attempts have been made in the past by the Japanese, but none of them has been successful, with the exception of the establishment mentioned.

The Varsity Gardens, formerly Norton the Florist, is now established in its new quarters at Berkeley. The new store is exceedingly attractive, having been entirely remodeled before its occupancy by the Varsity Gardens. The new store has a much better location than the old, as it is next to one of the more popular refreshment parlors, patronized by the university students. M. M.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

General business last week presented no outstanding features, either as to new offerings or the general trend of business. There has been a slight increase in the number of smaller social decorations giving work to the trade, but the larger functions have been few. The late spring is liable to reduce the returns from this class of business, since the entertaining season is shortened before the breaking up for the summer holidays.

There has been a good increase in the cut of roses and the demand has kept up with this in fine order. Premier is about the fanciest variety showing at present, but the quality and color of Ophelia have shown a decided improvement. The carnation supply is also increasing and the cut of sweet peas has increased materially. H. M.

SPOKANE, WASH.

Easter Business.

The Easter trade was good this year, and the majority of the stores cleaned up well. Lilies were not so good as they have been in previous years, while many of the growers were unable to get their stock into bloom in time for the trade. The bulbous stock was good and moved readily. Rose bushes in all sizes were in A-1 condition for the Easter market and sold well. Hydrangeas were not so good this year as they have been in years past, but by Sunday noon, April 16, few remained. Cut flowers in almost every line were of good quality.

The Market.

Roses are arriving in excess of the demand, but their quality is of the best. Carnations are scarce, and at Easter they were almost completely off crop. The quality of the sweet peas offered on the market is the best that has ever been seen, and these blooms sell readily. The spring flowers in daffodils, tulips and narcissi make up the current offering of cut flowers. Potted plants are somewhat scarce, but the greenhouses are well stocked with spring plants, and their quality is good. Indications are good for an active spring trade.

Various Notes.

Some attractive windows were shown at Easter, which did justice to the florists' trade. The City Floral Co. featured an Easter morning scene, which included the sun rising between two mountains.

Frank Spoerhase, of the Spokane Florist Co., tried to find a new use for a Ford. He drove it down a river bank.

Einar Sinclair supplied the trade with some good sweet peas and a good cut of roses. H. H.

For Mothers' Day

Business will be bigger than ever if we make it so. A decline in prices does not mean that we advise customers to buy less—it means that we give them more for the money they spend.

Again we advise our customers (as we did last year) that we do not guarantee the lasting quality of carnations, and we urge them to purchase other good flowers.

Our School for Florists will begin on June 26th and continue for five full days.
Further information will gladly be given on request.

¶ For the many courtesies extended to us during the Easter period, our sincere thanks are hereby tendered to our brother florists.

For Mothers' Day

Business will be bigger than ever if we make it so. A decline in prices does not mean that we advise customers to buy less—it means that we give them more for the money they spend.

Again we advise our customers (as we did last year) that we do not guarantee the lasting quality of carnations, and we urge them to purchase other good flowers.

Our School for Florists

will begin on June 26th and continue for five full days. Further information will gladly be given on request.

¶ For the many courtesies extended to us during the Easter period, our sincere thanks are hereby tendered to our brother florists.

AND NOW IT IS MOTHERS' DAY

Our Easter F. T. D. business was the best on record and we have again to thank our many friends all over the United States for their hearty co-operation.

Mothers' Day is one of the biggest flower giving occasions

This year there will be an ample supply of all classes of stock.

We ask our friends to look over the F. T. D. bulletin of prices before sending their orders, as this will prevent any misunderstanding as to the value of stock.

"Consider the lilies of the field." How bountifully they bloom, how freely and fully they give of their loveliness and sweetness.

Brother Florists, we give to you our kindly thoughts and best wishes. Let us make this Spring-time very beautiful. "He that soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully."

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Being taken somewhat severely to task when I made the assertion at a meeting of the Florists' Club that though our city is famous as a flower center it is less favored than many for the blooming of roses under glass," observed Colin Ogston, of the Kimball Conservatories, Rochester, N. Y., "I proved the correctness of the statement by obtaining and comparing reports from every chief point in America, assisted by the chart published in The Review." It was noted that almost every new variety of rose, carnation and chrysanthemum is grown here, though on a limited scale. It is interesting to test the merits and make comparisons, which the grower for profit cannot afford to do. A record is carefully kept and makes valuable reading. The originally large collection of orchids has simmered down to cattleyas, cypripediums and vandas, of which there are choice varieties and specimens. Hybridizing and propagating are slow work and will remain in the hands of the few enthusiasts who are willing and able to care for these aristocrats of the floral world.

J. B. Keller Sons, Rochester, N. Y., plan the rebuilding of several houses during the coming summer. The original block facing the entrance has been removed, affording a fine frontage and view of the entire range. A rockery, built and planted by the founder of this business, is greatly admired. Michael Koeller mentioned it as a valuable aid to their landscape branch.

F. G. Lewis, Lockport, N. Y., commenting upon the lateness of the season and the unavoidable crowding of stock, feels that once the weather becomes settled there will be a big upset among the gardeners in the haste to catch up.

At a meeting of the Rochester Rose Society, of Rochester, N. Y., held the evening of April 27, President John Dunbar announced the personnel of the committee to take charge of the rose show to be held sometime in June, depending on weather conditions. R. J. Dukelow, foreman of the park department greenhouses, a constant reader of The Review, entertained with a talk upon experiments made under glass during the winter as applied to roses. Among the list of contributors of prizes appears the name of Hart & Vick, the seedsmen, who will donate a silver vase for the most artistically arranged bowl of roses.

Charles White, of White Bros., Medina, N. Y., commenting upon the limited demand for a white rose, observed that Medina, being a distinct sport from Sunburst, possessed its one weakness in coming in during January with a crooked neck. Butterfly, growing with Medina, enjoys the same treatment, pinched back so as to produce every day in the year. None is cut back closely at any period. The favorable reports on Medina from various growers will be published in due time. Ophelia is just grand.

liberal patronage, the result of being able to hold the good will earned by the former owner and increase the volume.

Valentine Gatz, Albion, N. Y., commented upon the unfair method of a grower who opens a store and sells for retail at practically wholesale prices. It surely does not create larger business and it cuts legitimate profits. A fine line of bedding plants is ready for Mothers' day, which is expected to be a second Easter. Some superfine lilies were noted here.

"It might have been worse," observed Manuel Oppenheim, Olean, N. Y., referring to an accident in which the delivery car was smashed by a locomotive at a local crossing and in which the driver escaped with bruises. Mothers' day will find this company as fully prepared as at Easter, which was a success from every viewpoint.

The many florists in the trade will be sorry to know the veteran head of Hicks & Son, Auburn, N. Y., is seriously ill; speedy recovery is hoped for.

Dana R. Herron, Olean, N. Y., will cut heavy crops of roses and carnations for Mothers' day and he is announcing that fact to prospective customers.

William Scott, of the William Scott Co., Buffalo, N. Y., was potting Begonia Glory of Cincinnati into 3-inch pots and observed that it would not be long before next Christmas would roll around, in the minds of busy workers, who find the daily task all-absorbing. Mothers' day will find a lot of geraniums and petunias, in addition to cut flowers. A new house, 40x150 feet, replaces old ones that have served their purpose, but, as our confrere allowed,

Too Many of Us Stop Just Short of Starting

There's not an ounce of power in warm water.
Nor in hot water.
But when it's boiling, what a difference!
Then you have steam.
With steam up, what can't you do?

Which fact reminds you and me that there are a lot of us who have some corking good ideas that we start starting, and then because they don't start something right at the very start, we let them all cool down just when a little more heat, so to speak, would have turned them into steam.

Suppose, for example, the starters of the F. T. D. had got cold feet just because there were a lot of ice water throwers!
Right now, suppose we all throw up our hands and refuse to do our part in the S. A. F. Campaign, just because there have been some things about it which might have been different.
It got the steam up, that's sure!
It put over Say It With Flowers.
If we quit now, the steam will go down and all that money spent in getting steam up will be next to thrown away.
Let's lay aside personal feelings.
Let's be big enough to help make everybody's business bigger; then ours will be bigger in spite of ourselves.

time is too valuable to fritter away in antiquated greenhouses.

W. C. Ehmann, Corfu, N. Y., is building a fine family residence, in which is a pool room where the traveling salesman may indulge in a little relaxation, permissible, following booking a nice order. A select strain of snapdragons, Buddleia asiatica and chrysanthemums form successive crops and a source of large revenue.

Anderson's Flower Shop, Buffalo, N. Y., created a sensation by displaying a fine lot of tuberous-rooted begonias dressed and forming a sidewalk border to the window, which contained a won-

W. J. Palmer, of W. J. Palmer & Son, Lancaster, N. Y., was making a casket piece composed of Bon Silene and Sweetheart roses and he commented upon the pleasure of doing the work for a dear old lady who lived among flowers during her life. A wreath of White Killarney roses, white hyacinths and lavender sweet peas was another work of art. For Mothers' day there are fine crops of Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Butterfly roses, and Mrs. C. W. Ward and Matchless carnations.

Mothers' Day and every day as well

If I Knew You and You Knew Me

If I knew you and you knew me,
'Tis seldom we would disagree;
But, never having yet clasped hands,
We might, perhaps, not understand
That each intends to do what's right,
And treat each other "honor bright."
How little to complain there'd be
If I knew you and you knew me!

If e'er we ship you by mistake,
Or in your bill some error make,
From irritation you'd be free
If I knew you and you knew me.
Or when the checks don't come on time,
And customers send us nary a line,
We'd wait without anxiety
If I knew you and you knew me!

Or when some goods you "fire back,"
Or make a "kick" on this or that,
We'd take it in good part, you see,
If I knew you and you knew me.
With customers six thousand strong Occasionally things go wrong—
Sometimes our fault, sometimes theirs—
Forbearance would decrease all cares.
Kind friend, how pleasant things would be
If I knew you and you knew me!

So let us trust, rely, confide,
Have firm good faith on either side,
Confidence to each other give—
Living ourselves, let others live;
And any time you come this way,
That you will call, we hope and pray;
Then face to face we each shall be
And I'll know you and you'll know me.

The Wyckoff Floral Co., Oneonta, N. Y., is experiencing a busy season in which much funeral work takes, just now, a leading part. In this work Mrs. Wyckoff is an expert. Grower James De Vyver commented upon the disease in lilies and, like many others, received consolation when he learned that others were similarly unfortunate. Otherwise, stock in general, he explained, was all one could wish, and sold well.

a snug, model greenhouse range, the result of enthusiasm and plodding. Leaders in fine shape at Easter and for Mothers' day are: Carnation Matchless, Sweet Peas Yarrowa, Christmas Pink and Blue Bird, and snapdragons.

The Derrick Flower Store, Oneonta, N. Y., reports good business, with fine cuts from the greenhouses at Coopers-town. The store is being remodeled to meet increasing trade.

"The third generation of Frost," commented Adolph Frost, Cortland, N. Y., when his son, Dan, was admitted to the business recently. Time was when the original Frost found it hard to work single-handed. Now it is expansion and, with the infusion of younger blood, the possibilities are unlimited.

W. E. John, Schenectady, N. Y., said that the entire season is a revelation. He looks for Mothers' day to be another Easter. A nice stock of blooming plants was noted here. W. M.

Mass., are building another large, modern carnation house.
Lange Bros., Main street, had real, live alligators displayed in their window last week. Two policemen were on duty to keep the crowd moving, which was attracted by this unusual sight in a florist's shop.
At present strawberry plants are much in demand and few are in the local market. E. A.

EASTER AT PORT ALLEGANY, PA.
The Port Allegany Greenhouses, according to E. G. Ventres, the proprietor, had the largest Easter business ever. Easter week sales amounted to more than those in any one of ten previous months. There were many duplicate orders and stock to fill them at both wholesale and retail. The company is now getting ready for future business.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market was strong all last week, with plenty of seasonable stock in all grades. Despite the fact that part of the week was cloudy, the demands of the retailers were heavy on some days, since there were plenty of weddings and social functions.
In last week's consignments there was an abundance of roses in all varieties; these cleared fairly well, as usual. Premier, Columbia and White Killarney have been favorites in demand. Carnations continue of good quality, with the supply not so large as usual; prices remain stationary for choice Enchantress varieties. Betty Jane and Edna are the favorites in demand.
Sweet peas have been plentiful and are of fine quality, but toward the latter

Bowlers Meet.

The florist bowlers, who make up the "Say It with Flowers" bowling league, held a meeting April 21 at Henry Berning's wholesale house, to distribute the prizes and to elect officers. President Ruff called the meeting to order at 8:30 p. m. All officers and thirty other bowlers were present.

The secretary announced that $188.25 in cash prizes was ready for the winners. The Sweet Pea team was awarded the championship. This team won fifty-eight games out of ninety played.

Prizes were as follows: Sweet Peas, $29; Violets, second, $23; Carnations, $22.50; Orchids, $21.50; Roses, $21, and Daisies, $18. The Sweet Peas, Carnations and Roses divided $6 for three high season games. The Sweet Peas, Roses and Carnations divided $6 for the three high single games.

The ten high average men divided $13.75. They were E. Niebling, O. Ruff, J. J. Beneke, A. Hoffmann, Jr., F. Plotz, F. Alves, G. Kuehner, J. J. Bentzen, George Berner and George Schrieffer.

The ten high for single games divided $13.75. They were J. J. Beneke, E. Niebling, O. Ruff, F. Plotz, A. Hoffmann, Jr., F. Alves, Joseph Krayer, George Kuehner, J. J. Bentzen and A. J. Bentzen.

The ten high for the highest three games divided $13.75. They were E. Niebling, O. Ruff, George Kuehner, J. MeAna, J. J. Beneke, C. A. Kuehn, F. Alves, A. Hoffmann, Jr., Joseph Krayer and F. Plotz.

Then came the election of officers. As the rules read that no officer can hold the same office the second year, the old officers went out of office and the following were elected to serve the coming year: President, J. J. Bentzen; vice-president, Andrew Hoffmann, Sr.; secretary, George Kuehner, and treasurer, A. Hoffmann, Jr.

A motion prevailed that the tournament for the members take place May 1, at the Tower Grove Turner hall alleys. This was to be followed by a banquet. Thirty-five cash prizes were offered and the same number of special prizes offered by members in the trade. The donors of special prizes were the guests of the bowlers at the banquet, with Andrew Meyer, Jr., as toastmaster. The committee on arrangements was composed of O. Ruff, J. J. Windler and J. J. Beneke.

its monthly meeting May 11. The officers met May 4 at the home of President Rowe, at Kirkwood, to arrange a program of unusual interest that should attract a large attendance. Special notices are being prepared by the secretary for this meeting.

The Grimm-Lambach Flower Co., manufacturers and importers of artificial decorative flowers, have leased new quarters at the northwest corner of Ninth street and Washington avenue. The present quarters, at 1110 Washington, became too small. Eugene Grimm, head of the company, is a relative of Vincent and Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association, which has held no meeting for the last several months, owing to the bad roads leading to the Eleven Mile House, the club's regular meeting place, planned to hold a regular meeting May 3. At this meeting the election of officers was to take place.

Last week A. Hoffmann, Sr., of the Waldbart Floral Co., celebrated his twenty-sixth wedding anniversary; Edward Ciszkowski, of the Cass Avenue Florist, celebrated his fourth wedding anniversary, and Walter Young, of the firm of Young the Florist, celebrated his fifth wedding anniversary.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

There was much work accomplished last week among the nurserymen and landscape gardeners. The weather has been ideal and quantities of stock have been moved. Easter business is now comfortably out of the way, with Mothers' day near at hand. According to reports, stock for that day will be fairly plentiful. There is a good crop of carnations just now and some growers are a little bit doubtful as to whether this will continue. These at the present time move well.

Jonquils are reaching us and at this late season they are considered good.
Other bulbous stock includes tulips, poetieus narcissi, and outside-grown daffodils. These at present are not in big supply. Roses are in good supply and include Columbia, Premier, Ophelia, Butterfly, Ward, Killarney, Maryland,
Crusader and Scott Key. A fair supply of Cecile Brunner is seen and they move well. Orchids move well and there has been a fair demand for valley. Gar-denias do not move rapidly. Snapdragons are plentiful. Sweet peas are of good quality and sell well. Easter lilies are in good supply and are of splendid quality. They move well. There is a big quantity of forget-me-nots reaching us, the demand for which is not large.
Yellow and white daisies, mignonette, stocks, calendulas and pansies are included in the daily shipments. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful and of good quality.

Various Notes.

Max Pawlizek, of Lyell avenue, has just purchased a new Dodge delivery car, which has attractive lettering on the body. He had a splendid Easter business and is gratified with the way trade has been keeping up since.

a basket for $1. This also meant the sale of a good number of baskets.

Salvatore Bartollato, of Fairport, N. Y., practically cleared out everything he had for Easter, with the exception of bedding stock. He was busy and the demand was much heavier than that of last year.

Salter Bros., at the East Main street store, have been busy lately with much funeral work, which has been considerably heavier than usual. This year they have put in a considerable quantity of garden and flower seeds, of which they are selling a good amount.

Painters have been busy painting both the interior and exterior of George B. Hart's wholesale house; this also includes the front of the seed store of Hart &amp; Vick, Inc.

Louis Collatos says that business has kept up wonderfully well since the holiday. Funeral work has been quite heavy. He is making big preparations for Mothers' day business. H. J. H.

The Market.

Owing to unfavorable weather from Monday, April 24, till Friday, April 28, last week was not up to the rest of the month. It was not exactly dull, but somewhat slow. Cut flower stock did not move well until Saturday, April 29, which was a beautiful day. That day business took a sudden spurt and left the market fairly clean at the close.

Prospects are extremely bright for Mothers' day. Orders are piled up in the wholesale houses. There may be difficulty in getting enough stock to take care of them all. No trouble is an-

Various Notes.

Charles Heite, Jr., has returned from Columbia, Mo., where he took a course in floriculture and agriculture at the state university. He has charge of the salesyards of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., at the greenhouses, Meyer boulevard and Troost avenue. This department was recently opened. Plants, shrubs, urns, garden pottery and garden furniture are sold there.

The Chandler Landscape & Floral Co. is busy in both lines. One of the favorites in cut flowers is the lavender Darwin, which has been good this season.

August Luther had an unusually good supply of hyacinths for Easter. They were of fine quality.

John Furrow, of Oklahoma City and Guthrie, Okla.; Dr. B. W. Murphy, St. Joseph, Mo., and Clifford Pruner, Chicago, called upon a number of the Kansas City florists April 24.

tomers. This year 50,000 roses were given away. The delivery plan and routes were worked out in the office a month before Easter and the distribution was easily made in ten days. A woman whose husband is a good customer of the store, being the head of a large business that places many orders in the course of a year, called up to express her thanks for the roses. She said this was the only time she ever received any flowers and she enjoyed them so much that she was going to tell her husband to send her a box occasionally. Roy Millice, store manager, says his company has found this annual distribution of flowers a profitable investment.

Anthony Kusik and A. L. McKeown are planning a motor trip to Milwaukee a little later in the season.

Mr. Malone, of the Stilwell Greenhouses, Stilwell, Okla., was in the city April 26. He is building a greenhouse in Cushing, Okla., and wanted to see some of the new houses here. He visited a number of the local growers and was cordially received.

Mrs. E. H. Hedges is working up a splendid business in the Jones Store. Her flower shop is on a better basis than this department has ever been. She has made up some Legion orders for Mothers' day. One is a large American flag for outside shipment.

Henry Kuisk & Co. will have a big cut of roses from John Klaus for Mothers' day.

The Market.

Business has dropped off since Easter, with the exception of the usual daily demand for funeral and wedding work. The supply of cut flowers is limited, especially the carnations. Roses are arriving in fairly large quantities, and these move well, with the exception of White Killarney. There is no demand for Easter lilies and they are a drug on the market. In some instances they sold as low as $10 per hundred. The supply of calla lilies is small, but the demand just about takes care of the supply. Plenty of sweet peas are in the market, but are being moved at low prices. Some long-stemmed yellow daisies are arriving and are moving out rapidly. Gladioli are still in the mar-

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its regular monthly meeting in the lecture room of the Carnegie library May 2, at 8 p. m. Miss Bomhard was the lecturer of the evening. A special feature was ladies' night and all the ladies of the members were invited. The monthly meeting of the Retail Florists' Association was held in the Hotel Chatham at 6:30 p. m., Thursday evening, May 4.

L. J. Reuter, representing C. U. Liggit, of Philadelphia, Pa., was in town last week.

An attractive window display was made by the E. A. Williams Co., showing some fine varieties of azaleas.

There were a number of visitors in the city last week. Among them were: Mr. and Mrs. John Keil, of the John Keil Co., East Liverpool, Pa.; Paul Barber, of the Liberty Flower Store, Steubenville, O.; Mr. Sahle, of Sahle & Co., Butler, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Krut, of the Krut Floral Co., Butler, Pa.; Mrs. E. ### The Market.

Trade was quiet last week. The demand was small and the supply abundant. A good quantity of roses, carnations and sweet peas is coming into the market daily. Prices have declined in practically all lines. Roses were being sold from $4 to $15 per hundred, carnations at $4 to $6 per hundred and sweet peas at $1 per hundred. There was also a good stock of snapdragons, lilies, gladioli and pansies in the market.

There is a good supply of spring bedding stock in this market. With a large demand for blooming plants for Mothers' day and bedding stock for Memorial day, sales for the remainder

Various Notes.

A meeting of the publicity committee was held April 27 and appropriations for the Mothers' day advertising were made. This advertising campaign is being carried on in the local newspapers and in street cars.

From present indications and advance orders, the Mothers' day demand will be large. The trade is pushing plants and all lines of flowers, in order to keep the price of carnations at a reasonable figure. There are many fine geraniums in bloom, and, if used in boxes or pans, these make effective Mothers' day offerings at reasonable prices. Other boxes, such as yellow daisies, ageratum and pink geraniums, can be arranged effectively. There will also be a consider-nic at Fairfax park, June 25. Active preparations are already in progress to make the affair a success. Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., and Jack Kilroy, at Eighteenth and Castro streets, have been appointed a committee on arrangements.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

The Growers' Floral Co. has been growing carnations with an eye to having good crops Mothers' day.

Enomoto & Co. are almost flooded with eucalyptus pods and buds, for which there is a good demand.

Domoto Bros. are showing beautiful potted azaleas and rhododendrons, grown in lath houses.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is doing a large business in Boston ferns and in potted plants, which sell well locally, in spite of the glut of cut flowers.

"I do not think that there will be a shortage of carnations Mothers' day; I know it," stated J. A. Axell. "There are not enough carnations being grown to meet the abnormal demand," continued he. "So many of the growers gave up carnations and substituted roses, that now we are having quantities of roses on the market. If we could salt away all the stock we now have, we could do well on Mothers' day."

F. C. Jaeger has taken up golf on his weekly Monday off and is becoming an enthusiast for the game. F. C. Jaeger, Jr., says that the firm is doing well with baskets and is already booking orders for Mothers' day.

The Suzanne Floral Co. had all the decorations for the International Geneva Association, at California House.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

nic at Fairfax park, June 25. Active preparations are already in progress to make the affair a success. Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., and Jack Kilroy, at Eighteenth and Castro streets, have been appointed a committee on arrangements.

The Growers' Floral Co. has been growing carnations with an eye to having good crops Mothers' day.

Enomoto & Co. are almost flooded with eucalyptus pods and buds, for which there is a good demand.

Domoto Bros. are showing beautiful potted azaleas and rhododendrons, grown in lath houses.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is doing a large business in Boston ferns and in potted plants, which sell well locally, in spite of the glut of cut flowers.

"I do not think that there will be a shortage of carnations Mothers' day; I know it," stated J. A. Axell. "There are not enough carnations being grown to meet the abnormal demand," continued he. "So many of the growers gave up carnations and substituted roses, that now we are having quantities of roses on the market. If we could salt away all the stock we now have, we could do well on Mothers' day."

F. C. Jaeger has taken up golf on his weekly Monday off and is becoming an enthusiast for the game. F. C. Jaeger, Jr., says that the firm is doing well with baskets and is already booking orders for Mothers' day.

The Suzanne Floral Co. had all the decorations for the International Geneva Association, at California House.

Florists' Publishing Company,
508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

Making reference to your recent letter in which you suggest the possibility of our using a larger or page ad in your publication, listing prices similar to some of our competitors, we would state that as a general thing we do not believe in this kind of advertising.

Our plant has been operating to full capacity and over time during all the past months when most box shops have been running to about half capacity. "Quality" is the reason-- and on a Quality basis our prices are no higher than our competitors, and in a great many cases they are lower.

We have for years been catering to a very large majority of the largest and most desirable Florists in the country, and a great many of our old customers, as well as new ones, send in their orders without price question, knowing that Climax will give them the lowest prices and discounts possible and stand back of its product in every way-- Thus we have made "Quality" the thought of our endeavor and the results have been highly gratifying. We make six grades of Florist Boxes-- two more than our nearest competitor-- and carry in our warehouses at all times approximately a thousand tons of box board to take care of our good Florist Friends.

It may be that later on we will take up with you the matter of running a series of unsolicited testimonial letters, such as we have carried in the F. T. D. News. In the meantime, we desire to thank you for your favors.

Very truly yours,
Climax Mfg. Co.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

CONSIDERING the many millions of bulbs grown last season, it may be said gladioli are well cleaned up.

THE annual spring meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at Omaha, Neb., Saturday, April 29, at the Hotel Fontenelle. The meeting was given over entirely to a discussion of garden seeds.

THE Michigan Canners' Association held a two days' session at Grand Rapids last week, with eighty members in attendance. Prof. G. H. Koons, pathologist at the University of Michigan, advised that experiments to determine a standard tomato for the Michigan canneries be based upon existing varieties rather than upon an attempt to evolve a new strain.

MISS EILEEN LOW, representing Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Middlesex, England, is visiting the seed trade on her way from Vancouver to New York. She was at Chicago this week. This is Miss Low's third trip to America since the firm's old representative, the late Harry Barnard, stopped coming. This time she is on her way around the world, having first visited France, Italy, India and Japan.

A GIFT of 47,000 bulbs, including narcissi, jonquils, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips, was recently made to the city of New York by the National Association of Bulb Growers of Holland. The bulbs were planted in Central park, near Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street, and anyone who has enjoyed the privilege of visiting this delightful spot in the park can readily visualize the wonderful transforming effect these 80,000 blooms will have on the territory in the immediate vicinity of the Sherman statue.

THE severe winter in Holland is reported to have affected the bulb crops in some cases. J. J. Grullemans & Sons, of Lisse, say that hyacinths have suffered heavily and that in some parts of the district early tulips have been frozen. Darwin tulips have been lost by some growers in important quantities, especially in fields where planting took place after November. Crocuses are said to have suffered considerably in some places, while Dutch and Spanish irises, especially the white varieties, have been killed outright. Some other sorts of bulbs have been similarly damaged, it is said. As yet the effect of the severe winter is only estimated. Later reports will give more exact information.

CANNERS FACE BAD SEASON.

This is the one season when pea canners hoped that weather conditions would be favorable for an early pack so that the present shortage of stocks might be relieved, but so far the outlook in all packing sections has been unfavorable. In Wisconsin the cold, wet weather has delayed planting. There has been no seeding so far, and it is now about a week later than the average planting of other years. The outlook is discouraging, because the backward start will prove a handicap all season and is in itself a sufficient cause for concern on the part of the packer. Canners have been compelled to revise completely their plans for packing, as they will not have early offerings. If the weather in May and June is ideal, canners fear that they will be up against it at packing time, as there will be a rush of raw stock all at once, and the capacity of the factories will not be sufficient to absorb it. One canner fears that only a normal pack will occur, with the average quality lower than last year. Indiana growers have no seeds planted, and the crop up-state is equally late. It was thought that southern sections would profit at the expense of less favored competing points by producing an early pack which would relieve the shortage of old goods, but the weather in the south has been unfavorable also.

"POLITICAL PETTY LARCENY."

"Political petty larceny" is the way a headline in the Chicago Tribune described the action of Congress in voting for free seeds. The headline appeared over the following editorial:

The United States Senate's approval of an appropriation of $350,000 to buy free seeds for congressmen to send to their constituents recalls the fact that the measure has already been adopted by the house, where it originated. Such an appropriation obviously is for political purposes. We do not know who gets the seeds or what the recipient does with them. Certainly a farmer has little use for a small packet of garden seeds. Perhaps it is the human trait of acquisitiveness—especially of getting something or anything for nothing—to which the congressmen are catering. Perhaps the back-yard gardener gets most of the seeds, and the congressman who sends them gets most of the votes. No doubt it is a good thing to encourage gardening, but to encourage it with public funds for private profit is not good. Politically, it is petty larceny. It is a small item for each recipient of seeds, but it is $350,000 out of the federal treasury. Members of the United States Congress should be above such action.

TWO SEED BILLS IN CONGRESS.

Subjects Seeds to Police Powers.

Two important seed bills were introduced in Congress last week. One is designed "to promote the sale of pure seeds" and the other is "to prohibit the transportation and sale of field seeds in packages not properly branded."

The first of these provides that all seeds transported in interstate and foreign commerce shall be subject to the laws of the state, territory or the District of Columbia, wherein they may remain for seeding purposes. In other words, under the terms of this measure, such seeds become divested of their interstate commerce character and become subject to the police powers of the individual jurisdiction into which they may enter.

Any person, firm, corporation or dealer in seeds who knowingly violated the proposed law by carrying, transporting or mailing into any state, territory or the District of Columbia, seed for use therein for seeding purposes which was not in conformity with the seed laws of such state, territory or the District of Columbia, would be liable to a fine of not to exceed $500, to be recovered at the suit of the United States in any court of the United States having jurisdiction.

Regulates Branding of Field Seeds.

The other bill, requiring the branding of field seeds, does not cover garden seeds or grain not shipped or sold as seed, but otherwise covers all grass and field seeds. It is provided that a package or other container of such seeds shall be deemed to be misbranded (1) unless it be plainly and conspicuously

PEACOCK DESCRIBES RISE.

In his appearance before Referee in Bankruptcy Eastment, last week, Everette R. Peacock described the means by which the rapid growth of his seed company was promoted since its organization in October, 1917, with an initial capital stock of $100,000.

"I received $60,000 for merchandise received from me from another store in which I was interested," he testified. "In 1919 the capital stock was increased to $200,000 and a new issue of stock was made. In May, 1921, the capital stock was increased again, this time to $300,000, but at this time only $25,000 was sold, making the total capital of the company $215,000."

Peacock testified that he had an open credit with the Second Security bank of Chicago, 1951 Milwaukee avenue, for $20,000. The loan was secured by a mortgage on farm property owned by the corporation. In 1921 the indebtedness of the company was nearly $60,000, secured by warehouse receipts and discounted paper. "I went to the Milwaukee-Irving State bank and had them take a $100,000 first mortgage on the farm and property of the company, so that I could take up the indebtedness with the Second Security State bank."

"During that time I borrowed more than $5,000 from the Second Citizens' State bank, 4801 Lincoln avenue, and the First National bank of Oak Park had a note of mine for $11,500."

The call of the receiver for bids on the assets of the Everette R. Peacock Co. is reported under the heading, "Business Embarrassments," on another page of this issue.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of Max Paul Haendler, proprietor of the Old Town Nurseries, South Natick, Mass., is reported in the obituary column of this issue.

J. A. YOUNG, of Aurora, Ill., will represent the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association, of which he is secretary, at the conference on quarantine 37, at Washington, D. C., May 15.

THE Central Alabama Pecan Growers' Association has been incorporated at Selma, Ala., with Clifton Cabrara, of Kirkpatrick, president; G. R. Beers, of Tyler, as vice-president, and T. H. Miller, of Selma, as secretary and treasurer.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, the well known Chicago nurseryman, celebrated his fifty-fifth anniversary April 29. He was born at the nursery his father had established in 1856 and which the son has made known around the world for its peonies and irises.

MUCH damage was done to fruit in the upper Ohio valley and central and northern Appalachian mountain localities by the recent severe frost and freezing temperatures, according to last week's report of the weather bureau. Full and exact reports are not yet given, but it appears that damage was greatest in the mountain sections of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. The destruction, however, was not nearly so complete or so extensive as that caused by the freeze the latter part of April a year ago.

AN EFFORT, although it may or may not be an unconscious one, to interest people in reforestation is being made by Norman Taylor, of the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens, who is writing a book on "The Vegetation of Long Island." Mr. Taylor is offering prizes for the most complete list of names of the largest native trees on the island. The primary object of Mr. Taylor's quest is, of course, to obtain material for his book, but the fact that he is hereby creating an interest among children and grown-ups which will be of value to the nurseryman in a reforestation campaign cannot be denied.

HELP PLANTING CAMPAIGN.

The success of the "Plan to Plant Another Tree" campaign, inaugurated by the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association less than three months ago, has been so marked that it is believed many nurserymen, outside as well as in Illinois, will readily and heartily respond to the proposal to extend the work by means of subscriptions from nurserymen in all parts of the country. The details of the plan are given in the following letter sent to members of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association by A. H. Hill, of Dundee, who is chairman of the finance committee, under which the campaign is being operated:

"Plan to Plant Another Tree" was born February 10 at an executive committee meeting of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association; $200 was appropriated to finance the plan and to get editorial material ready for the newspapers, and $180 was appropriated to run slides in the motion picture theaters in Illinois, 1,300 of them.

This has started the movement in Illinois.

Clubs such as Lions, Rotary and Kiwanis, chambers of commerce, women's clubs, etc., as well as farm bureaus, have come forward and joined in an effort to drive home the slogan, "Plan to Plant Another Tree."

It has not stopped at the boundary line of Illinois. More than 100 nurseries and seed houses outside of Illinois have purchased the rubber stamp, "Plan to Plant Another Tree," and are using it on their mail. Newspapers and clubs in Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan have taken up our movement and want to push our plan in their states. Even Pennsylvania and South Carolina are heard from, wishing to push a program of such merit.

The executive committee realizes that "Plan to Plant Another Tree" is not for March and April, but for all the year. The newspapers and clubs are doing their part and, with the financial help of the nurserymen, "Plan to Plant Another Tree" will go forward in a nation-wide movement to make America a better place in which to live, and all nurserymen will benefit.

All of the material thus far has passed through the hands of your secretary, J. A. Young, of Aurora. He is giving his time free toward the best interests of all nurserymen. You, gentlemen, all realize that an undertaking of this character demands much time and careful thought. If Mr. Young will give his time, surely we nurserymen, who will benefit from his efforts, should be generous in our support of this campaign with the necessary money to carry on the work.

A careful estimate worked out by the executive committee indicates that it will require $2,000 to keep up the good work for the year. This means a small sum for each one of us, if every member of the association and other interested nurserymen will give either $10, $25, $50 or $100 to insure that there is plenty of money in the treasury to carry on this important piece of work for the nurserymen. The following nurserymen have given $100 each: Peterson Nursery, Chicago; Klehm's Nursery, Arlington Heights, Ill.; Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Chicago; D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., and Aurora Nursery, Aurora, Ill.

We ask that you sit down right now and make out a check to Miles Bryant, Princeton, Ill., for the amount you feel you can afford to appropriate as your share of the necessary expense.

The nursery interests have already received many thousands of dollars' worth of advertising space in the papers. This advertising has been of the very best of its kind for the nursery interests. Splendid editorials have been written commending the work of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association. We, as nurserymen, cannot afford at this time to discontinue our efforts or lessen the good work for lack of funds. Be as generous as possible, write a check at once, and send it to Miles Bryant, Princeton, Ill.

Give every dollar you feel you can afford.

CALIFORNIA NURSERY EXPANDS.

The California Nursery, at Niles, Cal., has spent many thousands of dollars in the last few months for new buildings, new equipment and new propagation, until the oldest nursery in the state maintains its position of the largest in size with the greatest variety of nursery products in the state. Those who knew the California Nursery of last season would hardly recognize the place today, with its increased equipment and new buildings, upon which probably $25,000 have been spent.

Probably the most visible and important improvement has been the construction of a new building for the display and sale of plants and trees. This is a lath house. An entirely new building of this character has been built at the entrance to the property of the company, just north of the underpass at Niles. This building is intended for a salesroom, where customers can see the plants that they are buying just as they will stand in the gardens when planted.

This system of selling is an innovation and follows closely the line of retailing any ordinary line of goods. The management of the California Nursery decided that purchasers of ornamental plants must be able to see what their purchases look like and be able to pick out just what they want. So the great display lath house was built as a salesroom, and customers now drive up to

Dreer's Pot Grown Hardy Perennials

The Stock here offered, all of the best planting size, is pot grown unless otherwise noted. It is superior at all times to field grown stock, and particularly so late in the season, there being no risk of loss even under unfavorable weather conditions. Extensive planters, among them the leading Landscape Architects, have for many years shown their appreciation of the Dreer Pot Grown Perennials.

the entrance and pick out what they want, with the aid of the catalogue and their own powers of observation.

This method of buying garden shrubs and trees has become so popular since it has been instituted that the grounds of the nursery company are thronged on Saturday and Sunday, and even during the week, by those who motor down to Niles.

The grounds of the company have been thoroughly cleared and laid out, and a new section devoted to fruit trees has been installed. Here is carried a quarter of a million fruit trees at all times, and selection of any quantity can be made right on the grounds. This is an entirely new feature, for in the past the California Nursery has not dealt in fruit trees in such large quantities. This nursery has always been noted for its ornamental plants, of which it is said to have the largest stock in the state, but it is now able to deal in fruit trees to any extent necessary.

The nursery grounds have been laid out anew, and many new sections have been laid off for the propagation of shrubs and plants. There have been large demands upon the stock of this company this season and it has been found necessary to go into the work of replenishing and keeping up this stock, which means more propagation. Extensive plans have been made for new propagation this season.

The California Nursery is becoming one of the great show places of Alameda county, and visitors from all over the world are now being shown just what can be done in the glorious climate of Alameda county.

SCALE ON FRUIT TREES.

I am sending you a sample branch of an infested fruit tree. Please let me know what the trouble is and what causes it. A. P.—Mich.

The branch forwarded was heavily crusted with San Jose scale. If all parts of your tree or trees are covered in proportion, I am afraid their tenure of life will be brief, unless you can treat them speedily. A lime-sulphur spray, applied while the trees are dormant, will kill this scale, as will any of the soluble oils dissolved in water at an average ratio of one part of oil to twenty parts of water. Use a spray nozzle which will make a fine, misty spray and be sure to wet every portion of bark. It is getting a little late now for a dormant spray, but, if your plants are badly affected, better spray now, even at the risk of scorching some advanced buds, rather than let the scale kill your trees entirely. Dormant sprays can be applied safely from November until April 1 in your latitude. December and March are good months to apply it. C. W.

length and leave only one eye showing above ground. Firm the soil thoroughly. A fair proportion of these will root and make nice plants before fall.

Cuttings can be taken of medium wood or half-ripened wood, as it is sometimes called, in early summer. These will root in a coldframe. It will, however, assist rooting materially if you can get some fresh stable manure and tamp it firmly to a depth of nine to twelve inches. Less will do, if it is difficult to procure. Some leaves mixed with the manure will help to retain the heat longer and prevent overheating. If you place your sand, which should be sharp, on this manure, you should get a good percentage of your cuttings to root.

As roots form, gradually admit more air and light, and when the plants are well rooted, remove the sashes and expose the plants to the weather. As severe weather comes along, pack dry leaves over the plants. When they are firmly frozen, put on sashes, lay match-board shutters over these and do not remove until the middle of March. The plants can be lined outside in nursery rows early in April, when the weather has become settled. Frequent cultivation will be necessary right through the flowering season.

While the various types of hardy roses can all be propagated from cuttings, it is well to remember that, although some of the ramblers, rugosas and hybrid perpetuals prove fairly satisfactory from cuttings in our colder northern states, budded or grafted roses have proved vastly superior, and hybrid teas from cuttings are absolutely valueless outdoors. In the warmer states roses from cuttings succeed better.

CLEVELAND CLUB DOINGS.

The meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club was held at the clubrooms, in the Hollenden hotel, May 1. The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Antonio Di Nardo, of the Cleveland School of Art. Her subject was "Art in Floral Arrangement."

Let us bear in mind that Cleveland is due for a real flower show this year. Everything is on the boom now and we must keep in time. One really good show would net a nice sum for the building fund.

We are having a building boom in Cleveland which is a "hummer." It would be really patriotic to start a Florists' Club home.

The following members were elected during the month of April: John Dudak, of the Brookline Floral Co.; Frank Vierek, 2611 Prospect avenue; F. H. Zieckman, 2950 Center road, Warrensville, O.; H. G. Frey, 8419 Decker avenue; F. E. Stover, 9322 Wade avenue, and Joseph Cannon, 1836 West Twenty-fifth street.

The club is on the boom and the membership mark of this year, for 100 members, will be passed at the next meeting. Do not let up, though, for, with an extra fifty, we can begin to think and do big things.

One of the pleasant surprises last week was the amount of business done at the building show, given as the opening attraction in Cleveland's new $6,000,000 hall. It really was a flower show, for each exhibitor tried to outdo his neighbor. The garden of Knoble Bros., in front of the model home, was tasteful. The Independence Nurseries had the real attraction of the show—more than seventy varieties of lilies, including water lilies. This was added to by a great collection of aquarium fish. Flowers and baskets were in every booth. Over 250,000 passed through the gates. Corsages were "the thing." This speaks well for Cleveland florists, who are always on hand for business.

The next "get together" dance of the club will be held Tuesday, May 9. The committee is all set to make it the best yet. Come and bring a friend.

EXPANSION AT DOVER, N. H.

Located on the southern slope of Garrison hill at Dover, N. H., a flourishing florist's business of approximately 60,000 square feet of glass is found. This establishment, now operating under the corporate name of the Garrison Hill Greenhouses, Inc., was formerly owned by C. L. Howe. Mr. Howe retired a few years ago, and the business was taken over by J. T. Massingham and later by James Whiting. The present proprietors of the company took control in April, 1921, and in July of the same year it was incorporated with the following men as its officers: President, Charles E. Cartland; vice-president and manager, James Whiting; treasurer, Elwell S. Shortridge. In Mr. Whiting the concern has a man of wide experience as a manager. He was the head of the department of horticulture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst for seven years; he was also a lecturer.

Recognizing the infinite possibilities for expansion, the new owners set themselves immediately about altering and improving the buildings, putting in new concrete walls and a new heating system. They are making arrangements for the erection of additional houses in the near future.

The land occupied by the firm consists of seven acres on Garrison hill. And in addition to this plot, upon which the greenhouses stand, the company purchased the Henderson field of ten acres back of the Wentworth hospital last spring. The soil in this plot is particularly well adapted to floriculture.

The present stock of the concern consists of 2,200 violet plants, 6,000 rose plants, between 5,000 and 6,000 chrysanthemum plants, 50,000 carnation cuttings, nearly 7,000 geraniums and many other well known plants.

To All Orchid-lovers, "Attention!"

On May 15th next the Federal Horticultural Board has called a Conference at Washington, D. C., to discuss Quarantine No. 37.

At a previous Conference in 1920, at which were present over twenty orchid men (besides, we had two hundred signed protests from prominent orchid growers against the embargo on orchids), two men only spoke in favor of the quarantine.

In spite of the prevailing sentiment that the quarantine should be modified, the Board decided that, inasmuch as Orchids could be raised from seed, no change in the regulations were necessary. Since that time, however, the effects of this embargo have been disastrous to the orchid interests, and if you are in favor of modified restrictions that will provide reasonable protection against pests without destroying our orchid industry by prohibiting importations, send protest and, if possible, reasons for same to

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

A LIFETIME DRY WEATHER INSURANCE

A lifetime insurance against dry weather crop losses, that's exactly what the Skinner System of watering is.

When your crop is cut short, because of dry weather, it costs you money.

Costs you real money. The Skinner System of watering not only insures crops like asters, carnations, cannas, gladioli and dahlias, but it greatly improves their quality and surprisingly multiplies the quantity.

Don't think you have to buy a big, expensive equipment. You can have a Portable sectional line 50 feet long, that waters 2500 square feet, for even so little as $19.75. Or a 200-foot Portable line that waters 10,000, for $79.75. Four moves of it waters a whole acre. Two men can set it up in 20 minutes, hook on the hose and the watering starts. Just as easy to take down and move.

Can ship at once.

Lower price equipment gladly quoted.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

USING OLD BOILER.

A few years ago we picked up a boiler, thinking that it might be serviceable in a greenhouse we were then thinking of erecting. We are now building that greenhouse, which is 30x100 feet. The boiler is eight feet in length and has a diameter of three feet. There are twenty-eight 3-inch flues, together with a 4-inch outlet and a 2½-inch return connection. Is it possible to heat the above-mentioned greenhouse with this boiler if hot water is used, or would it be more advisable to use steam?

T. H. G.—Colo.

No reference is made to the amount of glass in the side walls, or to the temperature desired in the greenhouse, but if there are not more than thirty inches of glass in each of the side walls of the greenhouse, and if the temperature desired does not exceed 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero, the boiler will meet the requirements. The boiler must have a grate thirty inches square, however.

For heating a house 30x100 feet, it is advisable to use hot water. The only objection to the boiler now on hand is, that the inlet and outlet on it are too small. An additional 3-inch outlet should be provided. You should either provide the boiler with two 3-inch inlets, or one 4-inch in addition to the 2½-inch inlet which the boiler now contains.

The piping arrangement in the greenhouse should include five 2½-inch flow pipes; one of these should be located on each side wall plate, one under the ridge and the fourth and fifth at the purlins. Fifteen 2-inch return pipes will be required, if there are two feet of glass in the side walls of the greenhouse. If there is no glass in the side walls, however, thirteen returns will suffice. Arrange the returns in five coils, and supply each coil from one of the flow pipes.

HOLDING TWO TEMPERATURES.

I have a greenhouse under construction, which is 20x40 feet, with forty-five inches of glass in the side walls. The ridge is twelve feet high. I intend to pipe this greenhouse with one 3½-inch flow and one 3½-inch return. The main flow is to be a 2½-inch pipe. I intended to use sixteen runs of 2-inch pipe under the benches, three runs under each side bench and five runs under each center bench. I intend eventually to use this house for growing plants at a higher temperature, and I also intend to add a second greenhouse for use at a lower temperature than the above house. Therefore there would be a 2½-inch flow in the greenhouse with the higher temperature and a 2½-inch flow in the

To the Man Who Needs a Boiler

THE CUSTOMERS' INTEREST FIRST—Is the basis of the Kroeschell standard, and this principle makes the Kroeschell policy the most liberal of all in the greenhouse boiler business.

The great variety of boilers we make places us in a commanding position. We make every type of boiler that is used, from the smallest house heater to the largest water tube steam boiler (600 horsepower). For the above reason we can furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

It is the Kroeschell policy to supply only that type of boiler which is best suited to the conditions, and under no circumstances do we take any other stand.

ORDER NOW

Orders may be placed now for delivery during summer or fall of 1922. You can save from 5 to 10 per cent if you purchase a boiler during this month. It will pay you to take advantage of this offer.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

house with the lower temperature. The returns will be of 2½-inch pipe also. Will this arrangement work out all right with a boiler of the proper size? Would you put the same size of pipe in the greenhouse with the lower temperature? The house with the lower temperature will be of the same width, but sixty feet longer than the other house. How close to the ridge pole should the 2½-inch main flow be placed? How high and how large should the stack be made? The greenhouses are situated on the side of a hill, about 200 feet below the summit. The hill protects the west and the south sides of the houses. The walls are made of cement and extend up to the sills of the glass in the sides. The outside temperature goes as low as 10 degrees below zero. The heater is a Hercules, made in Chicago, and I intend to add another when the second house is completed. Each of the heaters will have five sections. I should like to use 3½-inch pipe, because with the present arrangement I can disconnect either heater in mild weather or for repairs.

F. K.—O.

The principal objection to the proposed plan for piping the greenhouses is that only one 2½-inch supply pipe is to be used for sixteen 2-inch returns. It is true that there will be but about 430 square feet of radiation in the houses, which would not be much out of the way if there were only six 2-inch returns to be supplied in a house 100 feet long. With sixteen returns, the circulation will be sluggish in some of the returns, and far better results may be secured if three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve to fourteen 2-inch returns are used.

One of the flows should be on each of the side wall plates and the other three feet below the ridge. Four returns should be placed under the side benches and the others distributed under the middle benches. The number of the returns in the house with the lower temperature may be reduced at least one-third, varying with the temperature desired, but it will be advisable to use at least two flow pipes.

The stack should be about thirty feet high and from ten to twelve inches in diameter, depending on the size of the heater. The area of the cross section of the chimney should be about one-seventh of the grate area.

NEWARK, N. J.

Now that Easter is past, the growers are preparing for the next great event. They are forcing into shape geranium plants and other stock for release just before the occasion. In the meantime part of the earliest of the stock will be sold for early cemetery decorations. Large quantities of pansy plants are being sold now for cemetery use and these will be replaced later with plants that will last for the season.

Florists whose stores are near the cemeteries are busy now putting graves in condition.

McLaughlin & Murphy report that there has been a little lull in business since Easter. There is a considerable amount of funeral work, however, and some wedding work. R. B. M.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business in Washington was slow last week. Even the call for funeral work slackened materially, and outside of a few of the larger stores having fairly big decorations in hand, there was little doing in the cut flower line.

Prices on roses have dropped materially since Easter, and they now range from $4 to $20 per hundred. Columbia, Butterfly and Premier are the favorites in the day's sales. American Beauty roses are quite good and range in price from $6 to $9 per dozen at wholesale.

Carnations are beginning to show the effects of warm weather and are small in size. The top price has been $6, with inferior stock selling in large quantities at as low as $10 per thousand. Sweet peas are exceedingly plentiful, and there is a surplus each day except in the purple and lavender shades. The average price, regardless of color, is $10 per thousand.

Darwin tulips last week came into the market in heavy supply and moved at an average of $8 per hundred. Some few specials brought as high as $10 per hundred. A few single violets entered the market and they sold well, for there are always stores that find use for them. This is late for the appearance of violets. They were priced at $7.50 per thousand. Many delphiniums of extra fine quality were sold at from $2 and $2.50 per bunch up.

Potted plants have been selling well since Easter. Despite the fact that practically all of the available stock was used up for Easter, enough has since been found to meet this continued demand. The plants as a whole are quite good.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Gude, accompanied by their daughter, Wilhelmina, left Washington Saturday, April 29, for Detroit, Mich., where Mr. Gude attended the meeting of the executive committee of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

Gude Bros. Co. achieved a great deal of publicity recently when it furnished a huge basket containing 100 American Beauty roses, of the firm's prize-winning type, and orchids, as an Easter offering to President Harding by one of his admirers.

Local police regulations governing the sale of flowers and other merchandise on the streets have been materially changed. Now it will not be possible for the flower vendors to sell from baskets at given street corners. They will have to keep moving or suffer ar-try or place, or the state, territory, or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia, in which such field seed was grown, and (c) the year such field seed was grown; and also (2) if it is labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or if the contents of the package as originally put up have been removed in whole or in part and other contents inserted.

Fines and imprisonment are provided for violations of the proposed law and examinations to determine misbranding are to be made by the Department of Agriculture. In the event that an examination determines misbranding, the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to give notice thereof to the person from whom the package or other container was obtained. Such person would be given an opportunity to be heard, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary. In the event that it appears that there has been a violation of the proposed law, the facts would be certified to the proper district attorney, who would commence appropriate court proceedings.

It is provided that no person shall be prosecuted under the proposed law when he can establish a guaranty, signed by the wholesaler or jobber, or person residing in the United States from whom he purchased field seed in such package or other container, to the effect that the package or other container is not misbranded within the meaning of the law. Such guaranty, to afford protection, would have to contain the name and address of the wholesaler, jobber, or other person making the sale to such person, and in such case this seller, named in the guaranty, would be amenable to the prosecutions, fines and other penalties which would attach in due course to such persons.

If adopted, the law would become effective six months after its passage by Congress. An effort will be made to have the Senate agricultural committee consider this legislation at an early date. T. N. S.

The Market.

Stock is abundant. Everything in season is coming in freely. Business has been fair, considering the season.

Carnations are plentiful at from $4 to $6 per hundred. Laddie brings $10 to $12 per hundred. Roses range from $4 up to $25 per hundred. Various varieties of roses are available and the demand has been good. Lilies are in large supply. Easter varieties sell from $15 to $20 per hundred. Callas bring $1.50 per dozen.

Snapdragons are greatly in evidence at from $6 to $10 per hundred. Short-stemmed sweet peas are plentiful, although longer-stemmed stock is not so heavy. Calendulas are offered at $3 and $4 per hundred.

Outdoor stock is pouring in, including lilaes, valley, bulbous stock, pansies, etc.

Various Notes.

A new flower store, known as the Joseph E. Little Flower Shop, has been opened at South Meridian and Kelly streets. This shop advertises fancy cut flowers, floral designs and potted plants.

Edwin E. Morner, of Shelbyville, and Mr. Werner, of Smithland, Ind., were in the city last week.

The florists will miss the May meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association, which was suspended.

Baur & Steinkamp are cutting good snapdragons of their own origination. This firm has a good crop of carnations coming on for Mothers' day. E. E. T.

TORONTO, ONT.

Business last week was comparatively quiet. There has been an abundance of flowers, including roses, tulips, roses in pots, etc.

It is evident that the cut-rate drug stores, groceries, etc., are able to secure flowers at a low rate, judging by the retail prices that are being quoted. The regular florists are not at all pleased. They were willing to spend money on advertising, but found that the drug stores and butcher shops were able to buy flowers at such a price as to quote still lower retail prices. The result was not satisfactory.

Plans are being made for Mothers' day, May 14, and it is hoped that the growers will unite in maintaining the present prices. After Easter a great many letters appeared in the local papers, referring to the high price of flowers. It is hoped that the public will not be given an opportunity for writing such letters after Mothers' day. Another reason for maintaining the existing prices at Mothers' day is that the jewelers, book stores and post card houses are making a strong bid for Mothers' day trade. Boosting the prices of flowers in the face of such competition will be fatal to the florists' trade. The Toronto Retail Florists' Club held a social evening April 24.

J. J. H.

S. W. Parsons, 620 St. Clarens avenue, is planning to go into business in the near future. He was twelve years in the florists' trade in England.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

General business following Easter has been good. There are many Easter lilies coming in now that did not arrive in time for Easter. The price is reasonable. Callas are in good demand and are of good quality. Roses are in good supply, but a scarcity of carnations prevails. There is a good demand for orchids and the quality is fine. Snapdragons are a general favorite and are being used extensively. Plants are selling well for hospital orders. The prospects are good for a record business for Mothers' day. There will be a scarcity of carnations in the local market.

Various Notes.

Ralph Tinkham has a new Dodge delivery car. This firm furnished the decorations for several banquets. At the Rotary Club banquet the decorations were mounds of spring flowers and an individual miniature rose tree for each guest. Business, in general, is on the increase.

The Wenninghoff Florists have had a good week and report business as good.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey furnished several thousand roses for the anniversary and opening of the Indiana Furniture Co.

The ever-increasing demand for roses has been felt by the Flick Floral Co., and the firm has decided to convert several of the houses in which plants have been grown to the growing of roses. Some fine Easter lilies and snapdragons are seen here.

100,000 ASTER SEEDLINGS.

High priced quality seeds were germinated in flats that were previously sterilized with the soil under high pressure of steam. It's a lot of extra hard work and expense, but this is the only way to get healthy plants, and I want you to have plants, to start with, that have a healthy and clean root system. My flats are placed on raised beds of sterilized soil, no weeds or bacteria come in touch with them.

The seedlings are not leggy, sappy nor stunted, just in condition to stand the transplanting or potting and keep right on growing. My list of varieties is complete, if you fail in the early market you may win in the next one. I have no guarantee of success to offer you, but try and find out for yourself the best way to succeed under your own conditions.

Queen of Market, earliest of all, white, pink, lavender.

Carlson's and Invineible, next early, bearing Peony formed flowers, white, pink, lavender.

Lavender Gem, very early and best in existence, lavender.

Pink Enchantress, flowers very double of large size, making it a grand Aster.

Peerless, large flowers on long stems, pink and white.

Daybreak, excellent for cutting, flowers large and double, shell-pink and salmon.

Purity, similar to Daybreak, pure white color. Ball's White, originator's seeds, the sensation of Chicago market in 1921, very full and well centered, ideal for long distance shipping.

Crego's Giant, best late in existence, large flowers borne on good stems, white, pink and lavender.

All labeled and true to name.

75c per 100, not less than 25 of a kind or color; $5.00 per 1000, not less than 50 of a kind or color; 10,000 for $45.00, see Pansy, Salvia, Vegetable ads.

CYCLAMEN—Continued

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

In offering our block of 800,000 TRANSPLANTED CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS to the trade, we can emphatically recommend them as a superior grade of plants, in as much as we have specialized on CYCLAMEN for years, and are constantly improving our strain and methods of growing.

Through the use of a specially prepared compost, we have produced wonderful root action and a fine foliage, in fact we have never had a finer lot of seedlings of the very best known varieties. We established a new record with our CYCLAMEN plants last fall when we shipped them in full carload lots to the East.

Remember—Our plants have no trace or sign of the mite or any other diseases CYCLAMEN are subject to.

Orders booked in rotation. Satisfaction guaranteed.

$5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

VERY SPECIAL!

For $12.00 I will send 5000 selected bulbsets of the new pure white Gladiolus Lilywhite and include 10 blooming size gratis. Lilywhite is the long desired pure white Gladiolus of vigorous, healthy growth; great multiplying power; straight spikes opening six to eight blooms at a time; an ideal forcer, early as Halley and the best commercial pure white to date.

Awarded first prize by New York, Massachusetts and St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, Horticultural Societies and American Gladiolus Society. This variety will be grown eventually by the million and practical florists will get stock at once.

Send for our descriptive list of cut-flower varieties suitable for retail florists; also testimonials from leading growers.

Back of the Name "Hitchings" Is the Workmanship Of Hitchings' Workers

The iron that goes into Hitchings houses and boilers, is the cleanest, truest iron we can get.

The designs of those houses and boilers, are the most efficient our engineers have been able to produce, after years of experience.

But good material and good design alone could never have produced Hitchings' houses and boilers.

There had to be a third factor—good workmanship.

It's the workmanship on our products that we are most proud of.

It's the workers back of the workmanship, back of those products, that makes the name "Hitchings" stand for what it does stand for in the greenhouse and boiler field.

Blatchley of Meriden, Conn., Has A New Floral Bazaar

It was Pochelon, of Detroit, wasn't it, who first saw that it cost too much to spread out with his store space, so he pushed up and built a show house on top of his store? Then came Pfomm, of Bridgeport, and now Blatchley, of Meriden, Conn. From the way the newspapers came out with write-ups about it, looks like Blatchley and ourselves are not the only ones proud of it.

You, of course, have already noticed that the side hill location made it possible to enter the greenhouse on the level at the rear end, which is a decided advantage.

In his advertisements he doesn't call it a greenhouse, but his "Garden of Glass," which you'll admit has a very alluring sound, with a direct connection to the ringing of cash registers.

In his opening day announcements he did us an honor which we sincerely appreciate.

Here's what he said: "In the completion of this Glass Garden, it is fitting that we share with those to whom the honor is due and express among others, our appreciation of the exceptionally fine work of Lord & Burnham Co., the country's greatest builders of greenhouses and conservatories."

To which just allow us to add, that considering how a show house in connection with a store always increases sales, isn't it strange that more florists don't take advantage of having one?

If you happen to be one of the ones who haven't, let's have a talk together.

Mayhap we can suggest a happy solution of the problem.

Profit by the Experience of a “Man Who Knows”

of Highland Park, Ill.

RUBRUM LILIES

“Did you ever plant too many? For the average florist it means just this: He can get along without rubrum Lilies, even not miss them. On the other hand, those who once get into the habit of using them usually find them such a profitable and at the same time easily handled crop that they try each year to do all possible to prolong the flowering period, which with the help of cold storage bulbs is not hard to do. Every florist with a retail trade should grow rubrum Lilies. There is nothing finer for decorative work, for the corsage or the floral design. A plant grown in a pot makes a showy plant, and if not sold as such will frequently furnish you with flowers for three weeks from the time the first flower is ready to be cut until the last bud begins to open. The further away you are located from the larger cut flower markets, the more valuable are rubrum Lilies in your own establishment, the more necessary it is for you to try and have a few plants to cut from. To plant cold storage bulbs now into 5-in. or 6-in. pots is about all the work you will have with them, outside of watering. They will grow almost anywhere in or outdoors, and bloom in late Summer. Try this for a change: Plant in 6-in. pots now; let the plants come along in a cool house. About May 15 take them outdoors and plant pot and all in a bed or coldframe, deep enough to cover the top of the pot about 4 in. When in flower use the individual blossoms, or if you plant out leave them out all Winter. Every plant will flower again the next year and better than before.”

Mr. Bahr is a “live” florist-grower in Highland Park, Ill., and a recognized authority on matters horticultural.

Plant now and at intervals of ten days up to June 15th

Neidinger's Famous New Introductions

The Recognized Emblem of the American Legion

A floral duplicate of the American Legion Button. Used and approved by the leading Florists catering to the American Legion Posts.

An artistic and appropriate emblem, the center a gold star laid in a field of evergreens, and bordered with blue and gold. Finished with large, clear-cut gold letters. Each part sharp and clean-cut, stands out in bold relief.

TWO SIZES:

Large size, 16½-inch diameter, each ..... $2.00

Small size, 14½-inch diameter, each ..... 1.50

Packed one to a box, does not include Cylas or Easel. Used as above the low price makes it a sure seller.

Grave Basket

An artistic and practical basket designed for grave use. Filled with an assortment of appropriate flowers for the occasion.

20 inches long, 15 inches high.

This beautiful basket in assorted colors, designed low with heavy base to stand wind and rain, will not turn over.

Can be had filled with Daisies, Roses, Carnations, Daffodils and Pansies. State color and flower desired when ordering.

Roses at Pre-War Prices

During the warm season of the year, Colorado, as you all know, is much cooler than almost any other part of the country. For this reason, from now on, our roses are of better substance and last much longer than any grown elsewhere. Everybody knows this is true of carnations, but it is not such a well known fact regarding roses. Bear this in mind, especially as our roses are cut exclusively for the shipping trade.

"Our records show a saving of $2820.00 a year"

Almost three thousand dollars a year—that would otherwise have been wasted on ice—saved to the T. J. Noll Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo., by Lipman Automatic Refrigeration!

You can have automatic refrigeration for only a fraction of what you pay for ice. With the dependable, crisp cold of a Lipman, your flowers stay fresh much longer—no wilted, unsalable blossoms. Send a postcard for complete free information. On request our nearest Refrigerating Engineer will investigate your refrigerating needs and give you an unbiased report. No obligation to buy, at all.

One of the larger Lipman models used in many florists' shops.

SPRING DELIVERY 1922

Never before have we offered to our customers such a complete line of stock and of such high quality, including both Flowering and Foliage Plants. We are looking heavily on Spring orders and suggest to our many customers to either call at Norwood and make their selections, or mail order at once so that reservations can be made, to avoid disappointment. Prosperity is here and you should protect your best interests for bigger and better sales with Craig Quality Stock.

We cordially invite you to our new home at Norwood Station, Delaware County, Pa., easily reached by the Pennsylvania R. R. to Norwood Station, and Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Holmes Station, or by trolley.

CROTONS

The Croton, with its highly colored foliage, is indispensable during fall and winter. We have the largest and most complete collection of Crotons in the world, carrying at the present time for spring sales over 50,000, all of the very highest quality and brilliantly colored. Immediate delivery.

4-inch pots, strong plants, $12 per dozen, $75 per 100.

Every retail store and grower should feature Crotons this spring. We know our stock will please you and your customer.

CROTON LEAVES AND SPRAYS

Cut Croton Leaves and Sprays have been supplied by us in the past few years to some of the leading florists, who have featured them in mantel, table and funeral work. Cut Crotons will last in a cool place from three to four weeks. We can supply them every day in the year.

Very highly colored sprays at 50c each; cut leaves, $5 per 100.

DRACAENAS

There is no other variety of foliage plant so attractive as the highly colored Dracaena. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular spring baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in the country.

DAHLIAS MEET DIVERSE NEEDS

Not nearly the use is made of dahlias that their possibilities for florists merit. The diversities of the various types meet differing needs and tastes. They bloom when other flowers are not abundant. On this page is described how florists can profitably handle them.

THE DAHLIA has not been considered with much seriousness from a florist's standpoint up to the present time, but it is now beginning to come into its own. For about six weeks, say from September 1 to October 15, the dahlia, if properly handled, should be most profitable as a florists' flower, as the wide range of colors allows it to be used for almost any occasion, and the different types allow a wide diversity of uses and tastes.

Some of the collarette dahlias make up exceedingly well into shower bouquets for weddings. Attraction, of an exquisite lavender shade, makes up wonderfully well with oak leaves and other foliage for funeral sprays. The white "earnation" dahlia, Corona, is also useful for this purpose.

In view of the fact that many flowers can be cut from one medium-priced plant, there is plenty of leeway for profit.

Planting.

Generally it is a mistake to plant dahlia roots extremely early in the spring, unless you are determined that you want early flowers, for if the roots are planted in April or the first part of May, they will come into flower in July or August, during the hot weather, and while there may be a few good flowers, the plants will soon bloom themselves out, and by fall, or when the cool weather comes, the flowers produced are insignificant. So it is much better, as a rule, to plant dahlias around June 1. Then they will flower to perfection between September 1 and October 15, just the proper time to make the best use of dahlias.

All that is needed

By I. S. HENDRICKSON.

for producing a proper plant is one "tuber," or "potato," with one "eye," or "sprout," and this will give much better results than a clump with several "sprouts" or "potatoes." This should be laid in a trench or hole, lengthwise and not standing up, and covered about four to six inches deep, according to the nature of the soil.

Culture.

Bone meal and sheep manure are excellent fertilizers, but must be incorporated well with the soil. Keep the ground stirred about a plant. When it is about six to eight inches high, nip out the center shoot, so that your plant will grow stocky and throw out more branches. If you have only a few plants, you will find it will pay to stake them.

Dahlias, to do well, need a great deal of water. During the dry spell plenty of water should be given while they are making buds. The increase in the size of the flowers will well repay the trouble this occasions.

To obtain the largest flowers, remove all but one bud on each shoot. If you prefer quantity to size, you can remove half of the buds, or none at all, just as you prefer.

When a large number of dahlia roots are to be planted, the furrows should be made four feet apart. Then plant the roots about eighteen inches apart in the rows. If they are planted close together in a row, staking is not needed, as one plant helps support another.

Cut flowers may be kept in good condition a long time if a little care is given them at the time of cutting. The flowers should be cut early in the morning or late in the afternoon or evening. It is preferable to cut at a joint, as the hard part of the stem seems to hold the sap in the stalk.

Hardening.

Soon after cutting, put the ends of the stems in some vessel containing about one inch of boiling water. Allow the flowers to extend over the side of the vessel so that the steam will not affect them. # DAHLIAS MEET DIVERSE NEEDS

Not nearly the use is made of dahlias that their possibilities for florists merit. The diversities of the various types meet differing needs and tastes. They bloom when other flowers are not abundant. On this page is described how florists can profitably handle them.

THE DAHLIA has not been considered with much seriousness from a florist's standpoint up to the present time, but it is now beginning to come into its own. For about six weeks, say from September 1 to October 15, the dahlia, if properly handled, should be the most profitable as a florist's flower, as the wide range of colors allows it to be used for almost any occasion, and the different types allow a wide diversity of uses and tastes.

Some of the collarette dahlias make up exceedingly well into shower bouquets for weddings. Attraction, of an exquisite lavender shade, makes up wonderfully well with oak leaves and other foliage for funeral sprays. The white "carnation" dahlia, Corona, is also useful for this purpose.

In view of the fact that many flowers can be cut from one medium-priced plant, there is plenty of leeway for profit.

Planting.

Generally it is a mistake to plant dahlia roots extremely early in the spring, unless you are determined that you want early flowers, for if the roots are planted in April or the first part of May, they will come into flower in July or August, during the hot weather, and while there may be a few good flowers, the plants will soon bloom themselves out, and by fall, or when the cool weather comes, the flowers produced are insignificant. So it is much better, as a rule, to plant dahlias around June 1. Then they will flower to perfection between September 1 and October 15, just the proper time to make the best use of dahlias.

All that is needed

By I. S. HENDRICKSON.

for producing a proper plant is one "tuber," or "potato," with one "eye," or "sprout," and this will give much better results than a clump with several "sprouts" or "potatoes." This should be laid in a trench or hole, lengthwise and not standing up, and covered about four to six inches deep, according to the nature of the soil.

Culture.

Bone meal and sheep manure are excellent fertilizers, but must be incorporated well with the soil. Keep the ground stirred about a plant. When it is about six to eight inches high, nip out the center shoot, so that your plant will grow stocky and throw out more branches. If you have only a few plants, you will find it will pay to stake them.

Dahlias, to do well, need a great deal of water. During the dry spell plenty of water should be given while they are making buds. The increase in the size of the flowers will well repay the trouble this occasions.

To obtain the largest flowers, remove all but one bud on each shoot. If you prefer quantity to size, you can remove half of the buds, or none at all, just as you prefer.

When a large number of dahlia roots are to be planted, the furrows should be made four feet apart. Then plant the roots about eighteen inches apart in the rows. If they are planted close together in a row, staking is not needed, as one plant helps support another.

Cut flowers may be kept in good condition a long time if a little care is given them at the time of cutting. The flowers should be cut early in the morning or late in the afternoon or evening. It is preferable to cut at a joint, as the hard part of the stem seems to hold the sap in the stalk.

Hardening.

Soon after cutting, put the ends of the stems in some vessel containing about one inch of boiling water. Allow the flowers to extend over the side of the vessel so that the steam will not affect them. Let them remain in this water until it cools off; then transfer your flowers to receptacles of cold water. You will find that, as a result of this treatment, your flowers will last two or three times as long as they would without it. noon, as suggested above, and then put them in tubs or other receptacles of cold water overnight. This treatment will harden them up so that they are in good condition for shipping.

Within the last two or three years a new type of dahlia has come out, under the name of Peter Pan. This may be called "anemone-flowered" and is similar to a double cosmos. The flowers of this type come in various shades. The plants are dwarf, being only twelve to eighteen inches high, and are covered with quantities of flowers, which are exceedingly useful for table decorations and many other purposes. As the colors are improved, there ought to be a great place for flowers of this type in the future.

FLORICULTURE IN FLORIDA.

A Visit to Oneco.

If one is looking for what is distinctly out of the ordinary in floriculture, his search will surely lead him to Oneco, Fla., a little town some fifty miles below Tampa. Here is the home of the Royal Palm Nurseries, which for two score years have been conducted by Reasoner Bros. A large part of the plants grown here are tropical and semi-tropical in habit. Consequently, their use as outdoor plants is limited to Florida and the gulf coast, but many of the species and varieties are familiar specimens in the greenhouses and conservatories of the north.

In the early days of the business, so The Review representative was told by W. A. Cook, the sales manager, special stress was laid on the propagation of fruit trees. Naturally, oranges, grapefruit and similar citrus fruits made up the growing stock. Some strictly tropical fruits were carried, to supply a limited demand and to further certain experiments and demonstrations that were in process, for, as Mr. Cook says, both the Messrs. Reasoner were "enthusiastic tropical pomologists and horticulturists."

This probably accounts for their interest in importing seeds and plants from tropical countries in every quarter of the globe, which has resulted in one of the largest and most noteworthy collections of its kind in the United States. For more than a score of years Reasoner Bros. have been giving time, labor and a vast amount of energy to develop distinctive tropical landscape architecture and gardening for Florida.

Florida's Growth Changed Business.

As the central and southern parts of Florida developed commercially, and permanent homes were established, the newcomers began to call for ornamentals. So as time went on, the citrus tree trade gradually lessened, while the business in palms, yuccas, agaves, the silk oak and other southern plants and trees became increasingly important. It is quite probable that specimens from the Oneco collection have found their way into every garden of importance in the state.

When the northerner who goes to Florida wakes up to the fact that for his landscape effects he can draw on Florida's native flora and some of the desirable plants from the tropics, the peninsula will have one thing that it now lacks—well planned home grounds, not a mass of plants and trees set wherever a hole was dug by the workman. Of course, the variations in climate must be considered, but, even so there are palms and plants that carry out the tropical effect without breaking the laws of nature or good taste. In the extreme south the royal palm is at home, but in the neighborhood of Tampa and north, Cocos plumosa, or plummy coconut, is substituted.

The great clumps of bamboo, to which reference has been made, signify but one of the number of species and varieties that can be used in Florida landscape work. Bambusa Thoursii and Dendrocalamus latifolius are two recently introduced varieties of the giant-caned type. These are more attractive than the common bamboo, as the canes are larger and grow more compactly, thus overcoming the one fault of the older form—the loose, scraggly appearance at maturity.

What the Visitor May See.

When the visitor enters the grounds he is at once impressed with the tropical aspect of the planting around the office, consisting of great clumps of bamboo, thirty feet or more in height, tall cabbage palms with swaying fronds, the graceful Acrocomia Totai, a palm from South America, and the stately Phoenix canariensis.

Here you reach for a bloom that is entirely different from any of those you are acquainted with. The flower is that of the Bauhinia purpurea and closely resembles the aristocratic orchid, except that it grows on a shrub or small tree; the colors include lavender, purple, mauve and pure white.

Screening the packing house from the grounds are three splendid specimens of the Chinese cinnamon tree, while nearby is a tree from Brazil that carries the name of Schinus terebinthifolius. In spite of the long name, the tree grows to a height of fifty feet or more, with wide-spreading limbs; it flowers in midsummer and carries bright scarlet berries until the following spring.

Chinese hibiscus, particularly the double scarlet, and the dainty peach-blow, with pale pink flowers, add a touch of color here and there.

But what is that great mass of purple, and that long spray of glowing crimson? Paper flowers, or Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana and Crimson Lake, two of the most brilliant and valuable vines for the south. Bougainvilleas are grown in quantities at Oneco. A person who only knows the old B. glabra Sanderiana will be startled and charmed by the newer colors in this climber. You can find shades from delicate pink to deep purple, brick red, lake, crimson and others. Some of these were produced at the Royal Palm Nurseries and it is not too much to say that some of the most charming color effects come from these varieties.

Over there is a rubber tree—thick, shiny leaves; strong, heavy trunk, big enough for a husky boy to climb, and a long way removed from the one, two or three-leaved, scraggly plant so often used for house decorations in northern homes.

Do you know the chenille plant, Acalypha hispida? No, you do not, unless you have seen it in south Florida—trunk, two or three inches thick, twelve feet high; the rich crimson “chenille” blooms, eighteen inches to two feet long, are carried all the year.

Slats and Glass for Shelter.

Much of the propagating work is done under lath or slat houses. These shade the cuttings or seedlings from the sun and give ample protection from frost, unless it be exceptionally cold—say, around 25 degrees. Then a wood fire is started in little sheet-iron stoves set in the passageways. Imagine it, you frozen-up northerners; heating an open slat house with stoves not over eighteen inches square.

The lath house method gives much stronger, sturdier plants than those grown under glass, a fact that must be considered when growing tropical or semitropical plants for Florida.

To the northern grower, who must depend on glass houses, heating equipment, coal piles and coal bills to get his plants safely through their baby days, the methods at Oneco are a surprise and wonder. Of course, there are glass houses; at least, they have glass on top. But the sides are not tightly closed, and if a careless employee or visitor leaves a door open it doesn't mean chilled and killed plants. Incidentally, the heating equipment would not go far toward warming a 6-room northern dwelling.

Palms are probably emphasized more than any other one genus at Oneco. One author has said that they are “the princes of the vegetable kingdom,” and a visitor to the Royal Palm Nurseries certainly meets the whole royal family—the king and queen, as well as the princes. They are seen on every hand, from the tiny shoot just pushing its way through the seed bed to the lovely specimen twenty-five feet or more in height. One cannot appreciate the beauty of a palm tree until he sees it growing in the open spaces, rising like a slender tower against the deep blue of the sky. Here it is a part of the landscape, almost the keystone of nature's plan. Sabal palmettos are used as street trees in many towns and some cities, but the trained landscape man, and the nature lover who appreciates palms, feel that such a practice is not entirely appropriate.

One large house contained a goodly number of crotons, which were admired by several lady visitors. “Will you please tell me the name of this variety?” asked one of the ladies. “Croton picturatum,” replied Mr. Cook. Thoughtful pause for a minute. “Picture of Adam, did you say? Well, I never heard such a funny name as that!”

Probably the lady would have found other names equally “funny,” if she had traveled farther through the houses and across the fields, for in the open, under slat sheds, and in greenhouses are hundreds of interesting specimens of Florida's native plants, rare subjects from foreign countries, and new varieties that have been hybridized and propagated at Oneco. The rambler wonders how many florists know that the popular and valuable Asparagus Sprengeri was propagated in quantity and first introduced by the firm of Reasoner Bros.

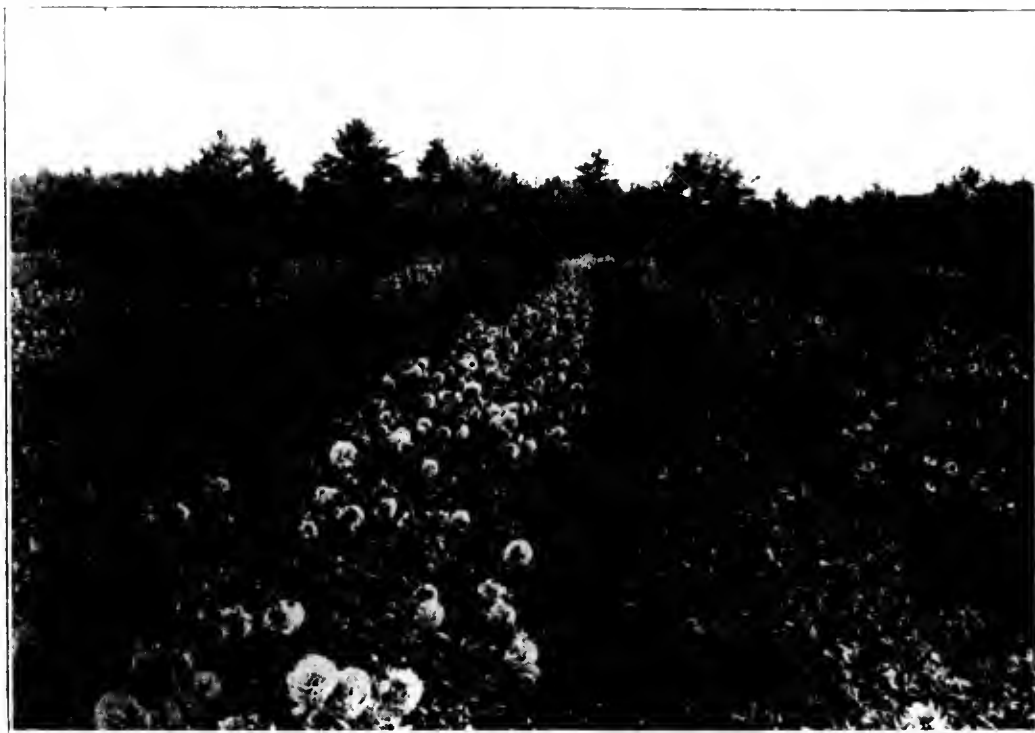

The Chinese fan palm, known in colder climates solely as a house plant, is propagated under slats. In the open ground of the nursery it takes on a stout trunk, while some of the older specimens have broad foliage, four feet or more across.

One of the prettiest palms in the collection is the silver thatch, Thrinax microcarpa. It is dwarf in habit and grows well in the shrub border. Because of the silvery sheen on the under side of the leaf, it is often used beside a pool where not otherwise seen.

In the blocks given to hedge plants the visitor sees Amor River privet, but that is about the extent of the old familiar faces. Pittosporum Tobira from Japan, ilex from South America, banana shrub from China, Surinam cherry from Australia, and our native Carolina laurel cherry are only a few of the hedge shrubs grown at Oneco. Nearly all of the hedge-making shrubs produce flowers, varying from white to yellow and carmine.

Twenty years or so ago a tubbed oleander was a common sight in northern gardens; in fact, a garden without one was not up to the minute. Thousands of the plants are propagated at Oneco for informal hedges, as the oleander does not stand shearing. During the spring an oleander hedge is a mass of color—pink, crimson, rose, lilac, white, according to variety used.

The "decorative group," so called by Reasoner Bros., is somewhat of a misnomer, as all their products are decorative. This particular group embraces the oagæ in variety; nolina, a plant with a bulbous base and a tall, slender stem; pandanus, upicca and poinsettia. By the way, there is novelty in the latter family, a variety with white bracts, instead of the familiar flaming scarlet. This new variety promises to be as useful as the older sort and certainly tends to tone down the brilliancy of its sister.

Mr. Cook freely admits that his firm faced a big task when it began the efforts to create interest in landscape development, but the hard work is over and the reward is at hand. So, too, it was a long road to travel in selecting, propagating and testing plants before advising their use in Florida. There were no blazed trails to be followed, and almost every problem that came up was solved by experiment. The records of these tests, in the form of helpful suggestions, are given freely to the people of the state. Some of these records are not available elsewhere, and the various experiments carried on at Oneco have been, and are, of such value that the United States Department of Agriculture keeps in close touch with the work.

CRINUMS FOR THE SOUTH.

For a floriferous and exceedingly handsome ornamental foliage plant the crinum is indeed an example of excellence. Its flowers are gorgeous and the tropical effect obtained wherever it is planted is truly satisfying. Some varieties flower for only a comparatively short time. There is, however, a distinction between the northern and the southern varieties and in America the southern varieties are best, because their needs are abundantly met in a climate such as that of Florida and other southern states. The only native species is Crinum americanum, called the swamp lily of Florida. Most of the bulbs are grown in Holland and Florida. The seeds from the northern-grown plants do not germinate readily.

This plant is essentially an outdoor plant and for this reason it thrives in the warm climates of our south. It requires little attention. The southern varieties will do their best in a rich and somewhat moist soil. The same plants do equally well in high lands, however, where the lands are well fertilized, drained and cultivated. It is not necessary in growing them for greenhouse work to keep the evergreen species growing after the flowers have been produced, as the plants can be transplanted from pots or tubs into a lath house for five or six months. Applications of water saturated with manure will aid their growth materially. For porch ornaments they are planted in pots or tubs.

These plants can be carried over during the winter by placing them in a temperate location, such as under a greenhouse bench, in somewhat the same manner as any of the other bulbous plants are cared for. During April and May they will require a little water, off and on, in order to resuscitate them and to encourage root growth for the spring planting.

A few of the southern species are Crinum erubescens, Crinum zeylanicum and Crinum Sanderianum. Crinum zeylanicum is a deep crimson when still in the bud, but as it becomes fully expanded it turns to white with a red stripe. The stems are long and have a purplish hue. Crinum erubescens has a stem two to three feet in length, with long, thin leaves. It carries approximately six flowers, has a purplish green stem and the flowers are white, with a purplish red outside. This flower does not bear seeds. It is also useless for cross-breeding purposes. Crinum Sanderianum, the so-called milk-and-wine lily, bears no seeds, has about five flowers and its stem length is about three feet. It is closely allied to Crinum scabrum and blooms at intervals. The blooms are white, keeled with red.

GERANIUMS AFFECTED.

I have sent under separate cover some leaves off our geraniums. We had nice, healthy stock until about six weeks ago, when we bought geraniums, some of which were affected like the specimens sent. Our plants have had a temperature of 50 degrees all through their growing season. We have held them rather on the dry side. Will you advise as to what the trouble is? F. G.—Ind.

The foliage was almost completely decayed on receipt, and it is not easy to determine what your trouble is. Probably your stock stayed too long in the propagating bed before being potted and shipped, and the plants may have been grown too crowded, not allowing sun and air to dry them out properly; the consequence would be weakened plants, soft in foliage and an easy prey to fungoid troubles.

All you can do is to clean off the diseased foliage and isolate such stock; if the plants are quite sickly, throw them away and give the others a couple of sprayings of Bordeaux mixture or some other fungicide at intervals of a week. Give the plants plenty of sun and air and dry atmospheric conditions, and they should soon show an improvement.

The Hardy Garden

PERENNIALS FOR GARDEN.

I have mailed you a sketch of my garden, which has been planted with annuals. Now I wish to plant it with hardy perennials. Will you kindly tell me what to plant for cutting and decorative purposes. R. L.—Pa.

Herbaceous perennials are not in all cases good for cutting and I have included only such as are adaptable for this purpose. I have also excluded all helianthus and some other extremely robust-growing and rapid-spreading varieties as being inadmissible. Herbaceous plants in themselves will not make as continually an attractive garden as do annuals. It needs the addition of annuals to fill up the blanks, to keep the beds really attractive. Some perennials die away more or less after blooming, and I should suggest the planting of some annuals to help keep the beds attractive. You might also use such lilies as speciosum, speciosum album, Henryi, tigrinum and candidum, dotted here and there. Clumps of Spanish irises, gladioli and montbretias would help out the floral display and prove valuable for cutting; even a few dahlias might be permissible, if the beds are of ample width.

Some of the perennials named, such as larkspurs, aquilegias, lupines, pyrethrums and Shasta daisies, can be raised from seed, which could be started at once, preferably in a coldframe. Of the others it would be best to purchase plants. Such a garden is better planted in the fall than in the spring, but could be planted now, if done at once. You would be able to get pot-grown plants probably, or good-sized clumps grown in some local nursery.

You do not state the width or length of your beds, so I cannot state the number of plants needed to fill the space properly. The following are suggested as good for cutting and also for making an effective display: Low, early-blooming plants, like pansies, daisies, myosotis and violas, and taller sorts, such as Canterbury bells and foxgloves—the latter two being good for cutting—will help your display; Delphiniums formosum, Belladonna and Bellamosum; peonies; Shasta daisies, of which King Edward VII is a fine variety; asters, such as St. Egwin, Climax, Robert Parker, Perry's Pink and Dainty; Anemone japonica, particularly the variety alba; Artemisia lactiflora; digitalis and Canterbury bells; hardy pompon mums; Clematis recta; Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno; Hemerocallis luteola, fulva and Thunbergii; Iris pallida dalmatica, Madame Chereau, Mrs. H. Darwin, florintina alba, Queen of May and I. orientalis Snow Queen; phloxes, to include Miss Lingard, Elizabeth Campbell, Pantheon, Mrs. Jenkins or other good varieties; Pyrethrum roseum; Rudbeckia Newmanii; Veronica spicata and longifolia subsessilis; Campanula persicifolia; aquilegia, long-spurred hybrids; Lupinus polyphyllus in white, blue and pink; Physostegia virginiana and Thalictrum adiantifolium. # WAYS WITH WINDOWS

MAKING THE WINDOW WORK.

Things Done and Overdone.

Time was, perhaps, when all a florist had to do was to hand flowers and plants over the counter and collect the cash. In those days the demand was spontaneous; no pulling for business was required and the front window, if there happened to be one, could be used for a storeroom, if necessary. Let the past rest. We live in the present and for the future; we know that business does not come so easily, and that it must be angled for and pulled in. As proved, one of the best baits for the angling is the display window. The window has come to be a powerful weapon in the hands of enterprising tradesmen. Like all great forces, it must be handled correctly to get the maximum results.

It can be said that the purpose of the window is to stimulate the senses of passers-by. They can be overstimulated. And mixing colors, heedless of the simple rules of artistry, is just about as disastrous as mixing alcoholic drinks. To gain the best results, all the colors should best be kept distinct. Moreover, too many colors have been recognized as a hindrance to beauty in an assemblage of plants, flowers and baskets.

Harmony "Too Perfect."

The arrangement in a window follows along the lines of arrangement in a single basket, where harmony can be overdone. There can be too much harmony—if the phrase is permissible, "too perfect" harmony. By this is implied that distinct coloring in a window will catch the eye more quickly than colors which lack the sprightly. For instance, if there is a combination of light pastel, the proper "pep" can be obtained by introducing a hard color. Thus, yellow tulips, light blue hyacinths, lily of the valley and violets go charmingly together.

In the minds of many there is no question that too rigid economy in making up a window is an absolute mistake. Good material, which is naturally high-priced, shows up to better advantage. As an instance, in the windows illustrated on this page and the next, silk curtains are used, quite expensive. But they give a rich effect and stand out well. In the same sense one might have baskets in the window for which bows are necessary. Cheap material in the ribbon will cause the bows to sag in a slovenly way, whereas they should stand out neatly and prominently. As Frank D. Pelicano, of San Francisco, a recognized master at window decorations, has said, "some designers can work to much better advantage on account of good materials. The people talk when they see something clever and desirable. Printed matter is not always striking, whereas windows can always be made so."

The Error of "Too Much."

Florists realize that they must fall in line with the principles of commercial decorators in other businesses. Effectiveness through originality is the point sought by decorators in commercial houses, such as sporting goods places, department stores, etc. There is, however, a danger of getting too original, departing from simple rules of beauty, and making a muddle of things. Many florists get too much into the window and this is particularly noticeable where there is limited space. Too much mixture of stock in the window is just as great a mistake as too much mixture in colors. An overabundance and wild mixture is confusing to the passer-by. On the other hand, if there is but one object of beauty that is striking, it will attract the eye pleasingly. In the illustrations on this page and the next the kneeling Venus in white marble serves as the primary attraction and you will note that there is no semblance of crowdedness. The Venus is the star actress, surrounded by a harmonious cast of well chosen plants in boxes and cut flowers. The regularity of lines in the window shown and the balance of one side of the window with the other adds to the pleasure of looking at the display.

Adding Life with Light.

The proper means of lighting the display window requires study, and each individual window has its own advantages and disadvantages. Frank D. Pelicano has said that flowers are like diamonds and are alive with color, especially when a dark setting brings out their liveliness; well chosen portieres can supply such a setting. Artificial light is preferable, according to Mr. Pelicano, but natural light is good enough if it can be obtained. Light portieres, gathered at both sides so they will not take much light, finish off some windows in wonderful style. Mr. Pelicano has suggested that in a window white woodwork would be preferable to cream-colored in gaining lighting effects.

Portieres make the handiest background, perhaps, because appropriately colored ones can be hung at the different seasons. This practice is carried out by Joseph Harris & Bro., of Shamokin, Pa., who know how to accomplish results, as is exemplified in the illustrations shown. For Easter this firm uses purple curtains as a background; for spring displays green-colored hangings are used and for Christmas full red is the color. Other colors are employed for intermediate occasions. These portieres are rich-looking and, since they are fine-textured, have the practical advantage of protecting rooms behind the display from the powerful flood of light that would break through ordinary loose-woven fabric.

A good salesman deserves proper treatment and these windows are splendid salesmen. Give them the attention they deserve.

THE WINDOW AT SHAMOKIN, PA.

The striking views of a display window "before" and "after," shown on the preceding page and this, were taken at the store of Joseph Harris & Bro., of Shamokin, Pa.

Concerning the windows the company says, with modest brevity: "The columns and woodwork in the window are painted white, with a floor of white tile, mottled with green. The figure is the 'Crouching Venus,' of white marble. The curtains in the background are changed according to season—purple for Easter; green for spring; orange for fall; red for Christmas, with special colors for intermediate occasions. These

but that is about the extent of the old familiar faces. Pittosporum Tobira from Japan, ilex from South America, banana shrub from China, Surinam cherry from Australia, and our native Carolina laurel cherry are only a few of the hedge shrubs grown at Onceo. Nearly all of the hedge-making shrubs produce flowers, varying from white to yellow and carmine.

Twenty years or so ago a tubbed oleander was a common sight in northern gardens; in fact, a garden without one was not up to the minute. Thousands of the plants are propagated at Onceo for informal hedges, as the oleander does not stand shearing. During the spring an oleander hedge is a mass of color—pink, crimson, rose, lilac, white, according to variety used.

The "decorative group," so called by Reasoner Bros., is somewhat of a misnomer, as all their products are decorative. This particular group embraces the oaks in variety: nolina, a plant with a bulbous base and a tall, slender stem; pandanus, upieca and poinsettia. By the way, there is novelty in the latter family, a variety with white bracts, instead of the familiar flaming scarlet. This new variety promises to be as useful as the older sort and certainly tends to tone down the brilliancy of its sister.

Mr. Cook freely admits that his firm faced a big task when it began the efforts to create interest in landscape development, but the hard work is over and the reward is at hand. So, too, it was a long road to travel in selecting, propagating and testing plants before advising their use in Florida. There were no blazed trails to be followed, and almost every problem that came up was solved by experiment. The records of these tests, in the form of helpful suggestions, are given freely to the people of the state. Some of these records are not available elsewhere, and the various experiments carried on at Onceo have been, and are, of such value that the United States Department of Agriculture keeps in close touch with the work.

CRINUMS FOR THE SOUTH.

For a floriferous and exceedingly handsome ornamental foliage plant the crinum is indeed an example of excellence. Its flowers are gorgeous and the tropical effect obtained wherever it is planted is truly satisfying. Some varieties flower for only a comparatively short time. There is, however, a distinction between the northern and the southern varieties and in America the southern varieties are best, because their needs are abundantly met in a climate such as that of Florida and other southern states. The only native species is Crinum americanum, called the swamp lily of Florida. Most of the bulbs are grown in Holland and Florida. The seeds from the northern-grown plants do not germinate readily.

This plant is essentially an outdoor plant and for this reason it thrives in the warm climates of our south. It requires little attention. The southern varieties will do their best in a rich and somewhat moist soil. The same plants do equally well in high lands, however, where the lands are well fertilized, drained and cultivated. It is not necessary in growing them for greenhouse work to keep the evergreen species growing after the flowers have been produced, as the plants can be transplanted into pots or tubs in the fall or for five or six months. Applications of water saturated with manure will aid their growth materially. For porch ornaments they are planted in pots or tubs.

These plants can be carried over during the winter by placing them in a temperate location, such as under a greenhouse bench, in somewhat the same manner as any of the other bulbous plants are cared for. During April and May they will require a little water, off and on, in order to resuscitate them and to encourage root growth for the spring planting.

A few of the southern species are Crinum crubescens, Crinum zeylanicum and Crinum Sanderianum. Crinum zeylanicum is a deep crimson when still in the bud, but as it becomes fully expanded it turns to white with a red stripe. The stems are long and have a purplish hue. Crinum crubescens has a stem two to three feet in length, with long, thin leaves. It carries approximately six flowers, has a purplish green stem and the flowers are white, with a purplish red outside. This flower does not bear seeds. It is also useless for cross-breeding purposes. Crinum Sanderianum, the so-called milk-and-wine lily, bears no seeds, has about five flowers and its stem length is about three feet. It is closely allied to Crinum seabrum and blooms at intervals. The blooms are white, keeled with red.

GERANIUMS AFFECTED.

I have sent under separate cover some leaves off our geraniums. We had nice, healthy stock until about six weeks ago, when we bought geraniums, some of which were affected like the specimens sent. Our plants have had a temperature of 50 degrees all through their growing season. We have held them rather on the dry side. Will you advise as to what the trouble is? F. G.—Ind.

The foliage was almost completely decayed on receipt, and it is not easy to determine what your trouble is. Probably your stock stayed too long in the propagating bed before being potted and shipped, and the plants may have been grown too crowded, not allowing sun and air to dry them out properly; the consequence would be weakened plants, soft in foliage and an easy prey to fungoid troubles.

All you can do is to clean off the diseased foliage and isolate such stock; if the plants are quite sickly, throw them away and give the others a couple of sprayings of Bordeaux mixture or some other fungicide at intervals of a week. Give the plants plenty of sun and air and dry atmospheric conditions, and they should soon show an improvement.

PERENNIALS FOR GARDEN.

I have mailed you a sketch of my garden, which has been planted with annuals. Now I wish to plant it with hardy perennials. Will you kindly tell me what to plant for cutting and decorative purposes.

R. L.—Pa.

Herbaceous perennials are not in all cases good for cutting and I have included only such as are adaptable for this purpose. I have also excluded all helianthus and some other extremely robust-growing and rapid spreading varieties as being inadmissible. Herbaceous plants in themselves will not make as continually an attractive garden as do annuals. It needs the addition of annuals to fill up the blanks, to keep the beds really attractive. Some perennials die away more or less after blooming, and I should suggest the planting of some annuals to help keep the beds attractive. You might also use such lilies as speciosum, speciosum album, Henryi, tigrinum and candidum, dotted here and there. Clumps of Spanish irises, gladioli and montbretias would help out the doral display and prove valuable for cutting; even a few dahlias might be permissible, if the beds are of ample width.

Some of the perennials named, such as larkspurs, aquilegias, lupines, pyrethrums and Shasta daisies, can be raised from seed, which could be started at once, preferably in a coldframe. Of the others it would be best to purchase plants. Such a garden is better planted in the fall than in the spring, but could be planted now, if done at once. You would be able to get pot-grown plants probably, or good-sized clumps grown in some local nursery.

You do not state the width or length of your beds, so I cannot state the number of plants needed to fill the space properly. The following are suggested as good for cutting and also for making an effective display: Low, early-blooming plants, like pansies, daisies, myosotis and violas, and taller sorts, such as Canterbury bells and foxgloves—the latter two being good for cutting—will help your display; Delphinium formosum, Belladonna and Bellamosum; peonies; Shasta daisies, of which King Edward VII is a fine variety; asters, such as St. Egwin, Climax, Robert Parker, Perry's Pink and Dainty; Anemone japonica, particularly the variety alba; Artemisia lactiflora; digitalis and Canterbury bells; hardy pompon mums; Clematis recta; Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno; Hemerocallis luteola, fulva and Thunbergii; Iris pallida dalmatica, Madame Chereau, Mrs. B. Darwin, floribunda alba, Queen of May and I. orientalis Snow Queen; phloxes, to include Miss Lingard, Elizabeth Campbell, Pantheon, Mrs. Jenkins or other good varieties; Pyrethrum roseum; Rudbeckia Newmanii; Veronica spicata and longifolia subsessilis; Campanula persicifolia; aquilegia, long-spurred hybrids; Lupinus polyphyllus in white, blue and pink; Physostegia virginiana and Thalictrum adiantifolium. ## THE WINDOW AT SHAMOKIN, PA.

Concerning the windows the company says, with modest brevity: "The columns and woodwork in the window are painted white, with a floor of white tile, mottled with green. curtains are made of silk and of such a texture as not to exclude too much light from the store. The cement fern boxes on top of the columns have been there for ten years and have been replanted thrice in his time."

But, modesty notwithstanding, there is much more in the window that signifies the skillful hand of an artist, from the flying doves at the top, which break the heaviness and monotony of the luxurious ferns, to the front arrangement, which leads the eye to every corner of the display. If the eye is attracted by the Venus, it cannot but examine the natural beauties about the statue. This designates strategy in window arrangement. On a second glance one notices that the window is laid out in definite lines that create a perfect balance, and where a row of boxes, plants and ferns is lined up to the right, another line stands in similar formation to the left. And yet there is no part of the arrangement so mathematically exact as to overdo the symmetrical array.

MOTHERS' DAY WINDOW.

A window which attracted the crowd and proved a good advertisement was used by the Knoble Bros. Co., Cleveland, O., Sunday, May 6. The word "Mother," in 12-inch block letters, extended over the entire length of the front of the window. The letters were edged with boxwood, while the bodies of the letters were made of white carnations and a red, white and blue ribbon ran through the center of the carnations, making the entire word so distinct that a passer-by knew at a glance what the window represented. A straight line of Boston ferns supported the letters. At each side of the window was a lone column, on which was a 10-inch pot of marguerites, red geraniums and vineas. Another line of ferns, rising gradually to a higher column at the rear of the window, was used to create an effective setting for a spinning wheel of the past century, operated by a living model, who, at a glance, was recognizable as a mother.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Plant Registration.

The following rose has been offered for registration and passed upon by the registration committee:

Name, Maidenblush; class, hybrid tea; percentage of rose, sport of Columbia. Description—Habit of plant, erect and much the same as Columbia; character of foliage, good with practically thornless stems; free grower and not easily subject to disease; flower of fine texture and good form; color creamy white, at times turning to beautiful blush pink; form, natural; fine tea fragrance and well formed bud; petalage, twenty-six; blooms profusely and cut blooms last well. The rose is distinctive in its class.

Registered by Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.

If no objection to such registration is filed with the secretary of the society within three weeks after this publication, the registration will become permanent. John C. Wister, Sec'y.

TO EXTERMINATE ANTS.

We are having trouble with ants on our pansy plants. Will you advise us as to a remedy? N. C. W.—Mich.

Ants are hard to destroy. Remedies, such as follow, will give you considerable relief, at least: Lay good pieces of marrow bone along the ant haunts. Dip these bones in a can of hot water two or three times a day. Scatter Dalmatian powder (black flag) near the ants' runs. Mix nine parts of sugar and one part of powdered borax and permit the mixture to stand for ten days before using, in order that the sugar may absorb the borax. This will destroy a great many of them. Kerosene painted along the woodwork is an effective antidote. Try one or all of these remedies and they will, at least, greatly reduce the number of the ants.

HAVE YOU BENCH ROSES?

Anyone who has bench rose plants can turn them quickly into cash by letting the trade know about it through the classified columns of The Review. It works like this:

Due to the great number of orders received in the first two mails after our ad appeared in The Review, we are obliged to ask you to omit the item of Columbia bench plants. You will, however, continue the offer of Ophelia. We were surprised at the results, as we did not expect to be able to sell these plants in so short a time.—J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich., May 5, 1922.

Kindly discontinue our ad on bench roses entirely, as we have received more orders than we can fill. We are very much pleased with the results obtained and we are thoroughly convinced that anything grown can be sold through the columns of The Review.—J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich., May 6, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

How can I get rid of mildew on my outdoor roses? J. R. A.—Ga.

Mildew usually comes from cold drafts. Allowing a house to become exceedingly warm, then rushing in a lot of ventilation and leaving it on until a cold draft strikes the plants, is a sure way to start mildew. To counteract it, affected plants can be dusted with sulphur from a powder bellows and sprayed with a liquid like Bordeaux mixture.

For outdoor stock, dusting with fine sulphur and Grape Dust, or spraying with a good fungicide, are the best remedies. Cold nights with heavy dews following hot days are often the cause of mildew on hardy roses. C. W.

FROST-BITTEN CARNATIONS.

Will carnations in the field be permanently injured if exposed to a temperature of about 26 degrees above zero? I have about 1,000 plants which have been frost-bitten.

H. E. H.—W. Va.

Unless your carnation plants were extremely soft, they would not be seriously injured by being exposed to 5 or 6 degrees of frost. We have seen the young leaves nipped by frost with apparently little effect on the subsequent growth. A. F. J. Baur.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.—Two elegant, well compiled, most attractive catalogues of greenhouse materials and heating equipment. The two books form about as distinct and realistic a display of the company's product as is possible by means of ink and paper. Even the smaller book might be considered fairly adequate, though it is only one-fifth as thick as the other volume, which contains 160 large pages, 9x12 1/4 inches, and is bound in an exceptionally strong and tasteful marbled cover, with an appropriate colored view in a central panel. Both catalogues are printed on enameled paper and are so fully illustrated that they might be called portfolios of photographs, with only enough descriptive matter to tell explicitly such facts as even the clearest of pictures cannot tell. One of the introductory paragraphs states pithily: "This is a picture book—for two reasons. First reason is that Agmco houses are their own best advertisement. Second reason is that pictures speak all languages."

TAMPA'S NEW STORE.

The beauties of nature are everywhere impressive, but combine these natural creations with the skill, experience and artistic temperament of some of the members of the trade, and a piece of art is produced which has an irresistible power of attraction. The accompanying illustration depicts the artistic abilities of members of the Knull Floral Co., Tampa, Fla., in the new store of this firm, opened recently. The picture indicates clearly how beauty can be marshaled to produce an artistic effect with an aristocratic appearance. Each plant is conservatively placed, yet in such a position as to give its native beauty every advantage.

When one steps into this shop the noisy traffic of the street is forgotten, and only the scent of roses and lilies is present. The general effect at the rear of the shop is one of genuine artistry. A person entering the store is immediately conscious of it. The scene represents a hedged balcony, overhung by a white arbor. A large mirror at the rear of the balcony gives the immediate impression of a French window, especially in the afternoon, when the glare of the light in the street is subdued.

The greenhouses and lath houses operated by the firm are show places of the city. Located at Nebraska and Twenty-seventh avenues, they cover fifteen city blocks. A large force of gardeners is kept busy at all times tending the flowers here, as well as the 5-acre farm, Rosedale, near the dam of the Tampa Electric Co., where camphor trees and nursery stock are grown. Visitors are welcome at both places.

A cold storage at the rear of the shop is one of the features of this company. During the holiday seasons the storage is used for keeping cut flowers fresh until used. During the Easter season alone fully 2,800 roses, besides large quantities of various sorts of flowers, were stored there.

F. A. Knull and his son, W. H. Knull, are the men behind the Knull Floral Co., and they know the flower business from the ground up.

AT THE PASADENA SHOW.

The Pasadena flower show, reported in last week's issue of The Review, was a matter of exceptional interest in the California city, since no show of such extent or excellence had been seen there before. Quite naturally, therefore, the April 29 issue of Pasadena California Life, a weekly magazine of high character and profusely illustrated, which is circulated in the Maryland and similar hotels of Pasadena, was devoted in large part to descriptions and pictures of the flower show. The handiwork of Harry A. Siebrecht, Jr., was particularly well shown, all three of his prize-winning entries being pictured extremely well.

The description of his bride's bouquet, written by the feminine editor of the magazine, indicated a viewpoint which florists might well consider. "Lilies of the valley and white moth orchids," it said, "went into the composition of this matchless bridal bouquet, with true lovers' knots in the white ribbon. It was airy, girlish, light, not a burden for small white hands. Ah, many a time and oft have we seen great, heavy, cumbersome loads of flowers for a bride to carry, assuming the center of the stage when the center of the stage should be held by the bride herself and the bouquet be only a ravishing component of her loveliness and allure."

The same writer went to some pains to describe Mr. Siebrecht's table decorations. She said:

"It was simple, as all great things are. In the center was a purple glory of orchids and maidenhair ferns, and the covers were marked with corsage bouquets of orchids for the feminine guests and gardenias for the men. Details do not convey the beauty of that table. It was the ensemble that spoke. The lace cover, worth, it is said, a thousand dollars, was a worthy foundation for the floral art. The delicate china and cut glass, banded in purple, matching the orchid colors, was exquisite. The whole was a glory in the room, a glory of color and airy grace, of rich appointments and artistic completeness."

The table decoration of Whitford's, Florists, which took second prize, ran the description, was "a lovely thing with a certain Frenchy flair, a Dresden effect, and one seemed to see in imagination the powdered beauties of Lafayette's day seated about this table. It was centered with Hillingdon roses, those lovely gold roses, with Spanish iris thrust through like beautiful blue bayonets, and Farleyense fern made a lacy border of green around the edges. The ladies' corsage bouquets were French with lacy frills and tiny holders, and the dainty china of Dresden completed the enchanting effect."

MAKING MORE FLOWER BUYERS.

"If you were a grocer you would know that every family is buying somewhere. There are a certain number of possible customers, and that number can only be increased by the increase in population. The only way the grocer can increase his trade is by inducing his customers to buy more or by winning part of his competitor's customers—and that is a game two can play. The florist has another opportunity: He can induce his customers to buy more and he can make more flower buyers," reads one of the thought-stimulating articles in the May issue of "Florists' Problems," a pamphlet published by Wild Bros. Nursery Co., Sarcoxie, Mo.

"The last census shows a flower production of something like 75 cents per person per year. Of course, many persons will never become flower buyers. But it shows that the possibilities in the florists' business have barely been touched. If the figures are even fairly correct, the average can be raised. And many possible buyers are not customers, else the average would already be higher.

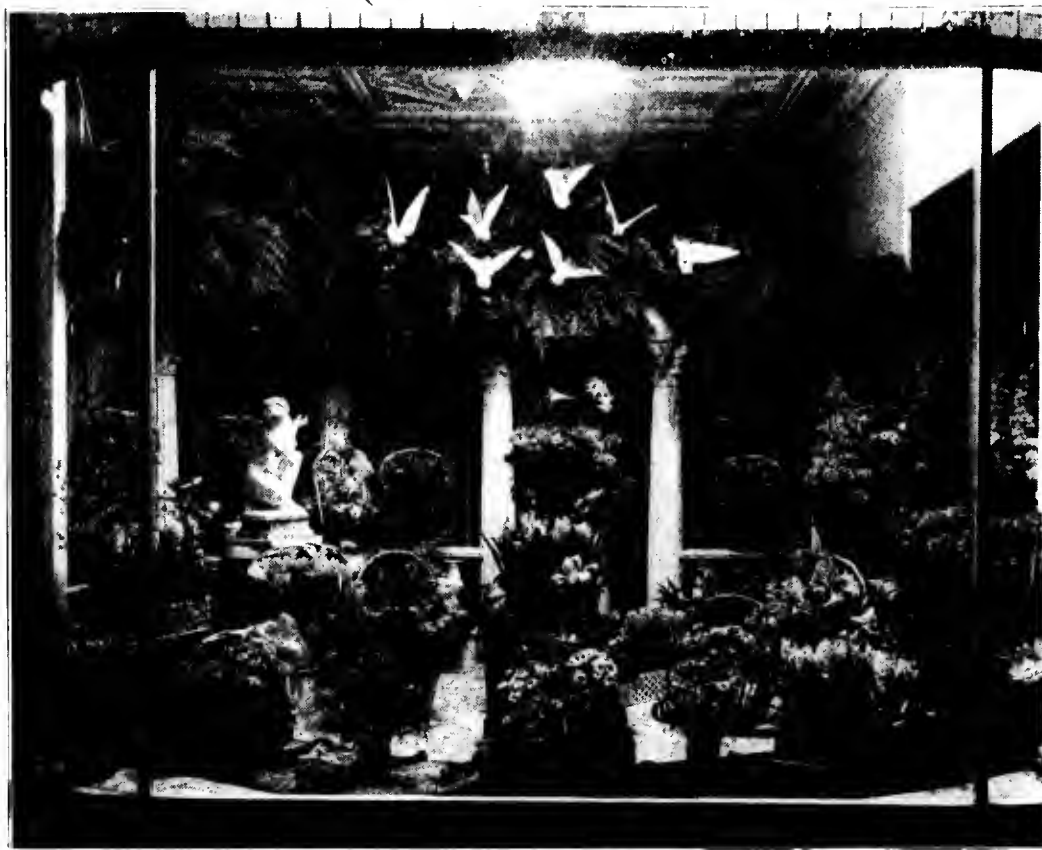

"Karl P. Baum has stated that less than fifteen per cent of the people buy flowers. Why? Largely because we florists have not made them want flowers. Often we do not even remind them where we are located. Let's raise the per cent.

curtains are made of silk and of such a texture as not to exclude too much light from the store. The cement fern boxes on top of the columns have been there for ten years and have been replanted thrice in his time."

But, modesty notwithstanding, there is much more in the window that signifies the skillful hand of an artist, from the flying doves at the top, which break the heaviness and monotony of the luxurious ferns, to the front arrangement, which leads the eye to every corner of the display. If the eye is attracted by the Venus, it cannot but examine the natural beauties about the statue. This designates strategy in window arrangement. On a second glance one notices that the window is laid out in definite lines that create a perfect balance, and where a row of boxes, plants and ferns is lined up to the right, another line stands in similar formation to the left. And yet there is no part of the arrangement so mathematically exact as to overdo the symmetrical array.

MOTHERS' DAY WINDOW.

A window which attracted the crowd and proved a good advertisement was used by the Knoble Bros. Co., Cleveland, O., Sunday, May 6. The word "Mother," in 12 inch block letters, extended over the entire length of the front of the window. The letters were edged with boxwood, while the bodies of the letters were made of white carnations and a red, white and blue ribbon ran through the center of the carnations, making the entire word so distinct that a passer-by knew at a glance what the window represented. A straight line of Boston ferns supported the letters. At each side of the window was a lone column, on which was a 10 inch pot of marguerites, red geraniums and vincas. Another line of ferns, rising gradually to a higher column at the rear of the window, was used to create an effective setting for a spinning wheel of the past century, operated by a living model, who, at a glance, was recognizable as a mother.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Plant Registration.

The following rose has been offered for registration and passed upon by the registration committee:

Name, Maidentush; class, hybrid tea; parentage of rose, sport of Columbia. Description: Habit of plant, erect and much the same as Columbia; character of foliage, good with practically thornless stems; free grower and not easily subject to disease; flower of fine texture and good form; color creamy white, at times turning to beautiful bluish pink; form, natural; fine tea fragrance and well formed bud; petalage, twenty six; blooms profusely and cut blooms last well. The rose is distinctive in its class.

Registered by Albert P. Audling Co., Maywood, Ill.

If no objection to such registration is filed with the secretary of the society within three weeks after this publication, the registration will become permanent. John C. Wister, Sec'y.

TO EXTERMINATE ANTS.

We are having trouble with ants on our pearly plants. Will you advise us as to a remedy? N. C. W., Mich.

Ants are hard to destroy. Remedies, such as follow, will give you considerable relief, at least: Lay good pieces of marrow bone along the ant haunts. Dip these bones in a can of hot water two or three times a day. Scatter Dalmatian powder, black flag near the ants' runs. Mix nine parts of sugar and one part of powdered borax and permit the mixture to stand for ten days before using, in order that the sugar may absorb the borax. This will destroy a great many of them. Kerosene painted along the woodwork is an effective antidote. Try one or all of these remedies and they will, at least, greatly reduce the number of the ants.

HAVE YOU BENCH ROSES?

Anyone who has bench rose plants can turn them quickly into cash by letting the trade know about it through the classified columns of The Review. It works like this:

Due to the great number of orders received in the first two mails after our ad appeared in The Review, we are obliged to ask you to omit the item of Columbia bench plants. You will, however, continue the offer of Ophelia. We were surprised at the results, as we did not expect to be able to sell these plants in so short a time.—J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich., May 5, 1922.

Kindly discontinue our ad on bench roses entirely, as we have received more orders than we can fill. We are very much pleased with the results obtained and we are thoroughly convinced that anything grown can be sold through the columns of The Review.—J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich., May 6, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

How can I get rid of mildew on my outdoor roses? J. R. A.—Ga.

Mildew usually comes from cold drafts. Allowing a house to become exceedingly warm, then rushing in a lot of ventilation and leaving it on until a cold draft strikes the plants, is a sure way to start mildew. To counteract it, affected plants can be dusted with sulphur from a powder bellows and sprayed with a liquid like Bordeaux mixture.

For outdoor stock, dusting with fine sulphur and Grape Dust, or spraying with a good fungicide, are the best remedies. Cold nights with heavy dews following hot days are often the cause of mildew on hardy roses. C. W.

FROST-BITTEN CARNATIONS.

Will carnations in the field be permanently injured if exposed to a temperature of about 26 degrees above zero? I have about 1,000 plants which have been frost-bitten.

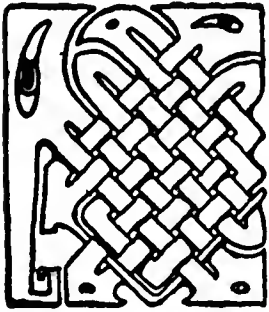

H. E. H.—W. Va.

Unless your carnation plants were extremely soft, they would not be seriously injured by being exposed to 5 or 6 degrees of frost. We have seen the young leaves nipped by frost with apparently little effect on the subsequent growth. A. F. J. Baur.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill. Two elegant, well compiled, most attractive catalogues of greenhouse materials and heating equipment. The two books form about as distinct and real a display of the company's product as is possible by means of ink and paper. Even the smaller book might be considered fairly adequate, though it is only one-fifth as thick as the other volume, which contains 169 large pages, 9x12 1/4 inches, and is bound in an exceptionally strong and tasteful marbled cover with an appropriate colored view in a central panel. Both catalogues are printed on enameled paper and are so fully illustrated that they might be called portfolios of photographs with only enough descriptive matter to tell explicitly such facts as even the clearest of pictures cannot tell. One of the introductory paragraphs states pithily: "This is a picture book for two reasons. First reason is that Agnes houses are their own best advertisement. Second reason is that pictures speak all languages."

TAMPA'S NEW STORE.

The beauties of nature are everywhere impressive, but combine these natural creations with the skill, experience and artistic temperament of some of the members of the trade, and a piece of art is produced which has an irresistible power of attraction. The accompanying illustration depicts the artistic abilities of members of the Knull Floral Co., Tampa, Fla., in the new store of this firm, opened recently. The picture indicates clearly how beauty can be marshaled to produce an artistic effect with an aristocratic appearance. Each plant is conservatively placed, yet in such a position as to give its native beauty every advantage.

When one steps into this shop the noisy traffic of the street is forgotten, and only the scent of roses and lilies is present. The general effect at the rear of the shop is one of genuine artistry. A person entering the store is immediately conscious of it. The scene represents a hedged balcony, overhung by a white arbor. A large mirror at the rear of the balcony gives the immediate impression of a French window, especially in the afternoon, when the glare of the light in the street is subdued.

The greenhouses and lath houses operated by the firm are show places of the city. Located at Nebraska and Twenty-seventh avenues, they cover fifteen city blocks. A large force of gardeners is kept busy at all times tending the flowers here, as well as the 5-acre farm, Rosedale, near the dam of the Tampa Electric Co., where camphor trees and nursery stock are grown. Visitors are welcome at both places.

A cold storage at the rear of the shop is one of the features of this company. During the holiday seasons the storage is used for keeping cut flowers fresh until used. During the Easter season alone fully 2,800 roses, besides large quantities of various sorts of flowers, were stored there.

F. A. Knull and his son, W. H. Knull, are the men behind the Knull Floral Co., and they know the flower business from the ground up.

AT THE PASADENA SHOW.

The Pasadena flower show, reported in last week's issue of The Review, was a matter of exceptional interest in the California city, since no show of such extent or excellence had been seen there before. Quite naturally, therefore, the April 29 issue of Pasadena California Life, a weekly magazine of high character and profusely illustrated, which is circulated in the Maryland and similar hotels of Pasadena, was devoted in large part to descriptions and pictures of the flower show. The handiwork of Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., was particularly well shown, all three of his prize-winning entries being pictured extremely well.

The description of his bride's bouquet, written by the feminine editor of the magazine, indicated a viewpoint which florists might well consider. "Lilies of the valley and white moth orchids," it said, "went into the composition of this matchless bridal bouquet, with true lovers' knots in the white ribbon. It was airy, girlish, light, not a burden for small white hands. Ah, many a time and oft have we seen great, heavy, cumbersome loads of flowers for a bride to carry, assuming the center of the stage when the center of the stage should be held by the bride herself and the bouquet be only a ravishing component of her loveliness and allure."

The same writer went to some pains to describe Mr. Siebrecht's table decorations. She said:

"It was simple, as all great things are. In the center was a purple glory of orchids and maidenhair ferns, and the covers were marked with corsage bouquets of orchids for the feminine guests and gardenias for the men. Details do not convey the beauty of that table. It was the ensemble that spoke. The lace cover, worth, it is said, a thousand dollars, was a worthy foundation for the floral art. The delicate china and cut glass, banded in purple, matching the orchid colors, was exquisite. The whole was a glory in the room, a glory of color and airy grace, of rich appointments and artistic completeness."

The table decoration of Whitford's, Florists, which took second prize, ran the description, was "a lovely thing with a certain Frenchy flair, a Dresden effect, and one seemed to see in imagination the powdered beauties of Lafayette's day seated about this table. It was centered with Hillingdon roses, those lovely gold roses, with Spanish iris thrust through like beautiful blue bayonets, and Farleyense fern made a lacy border of green around the edges. The ladies' corsage bouquets were French with lacy frills and tiny holders, and the dainty china of Dresden completed the enchanting effect."

MAKING MORE FLOWER BUYERS.

"If you were a grocer you would know that every family is buying somewhere. There are a certain number of possible customers, and that number can only be increased by the increase in population. The only way the grocer can increase his trade is by inducing his customers to buy more or by winning part of his competitor's customers—and that is a game two can play. The florist has another opportunity: He can induce his customers to buy more and he can make more flower buyers," reads one of the thought stimulating articles in the May issue of "Florists' Problems," a pamphlet published by Wild Bros. Nursery Co., Sarcoxie, Mo.

"The last census shows a flower production of something like 75 cents per person per year. Of course, many persons will never become flower buyers. But it shows that the possibilities in the florists' business have barely been touched. If the figures are even fairly correct, the average can be raised. And many possible buyers are not customers, else the average would already be higher.

"Karl P. Baum has stated that less than fifteen per cent of the people buy flowers. Why? Largely because we florists have not made them want flowers. Often we do not even remind them where we are located. Let's raise the per cent.

"Take your telephone directory and mark those who buy from you. Now notice how many who are able to buy do not. Unless you have developed your market unusually well, you will notice a wonderful opportunity. And remember, the 'phone book does not list all the desirable customers, and that there are several possible buyers in many families.

"How shall we start them to buying flowers? Advertising. Window displays, mailing cards, circulars, newspapers—all are advertising. By all means use your window. You pay for it. Make it work. Sight leads to sales. The other forms will depend on your location and class of trade. We are great believers in cards and circulars, especially if you quote prices. They pay us. Newspapers may be the least or most expensive, depending on whether you have to pay for a large circulation out of your trade territory or whether your trade covers the whole town. If the latter, newspapers should pay. By all means feature the slogan.

"In your window and all other advertising give the people an idea if you would sell flowers. Suggest uses—flowers as gifts, flowers for the sick, flowers for valentines, Easter, Mothers' day, Memorial day, Christmas. It not only helps make new customers, but makes the old customers buy more. The seasonable flowers, mums for Thanksgiving, violets for valentines, bulbs in the spring, peonies in May, gladioli in summer, will build business, if you keep reminding the people."

GETTING ACQUAINTED.

"I never knew so great an investment and so much expense were involved in growing flowers under glass. I shall more cheerfully pay $5 a dozen for roses henceforth," remarked a business man after a florist friend had conducted him through his greenhouses.

The moral of this remark, that florists would do well to give the public and particularly business men a closer acquaintance with their growing methods, has had the attention of a few florists here and there. One of them is Claude M. Hamilton, of Kewanee, Ill. Mr. Hamilton entertained the members of the local Rotary Club at his greenhouses at Terminal Park, April 25. About 125 business men were present at the luncheon, and all came away with a better conception of the florists' industry. The affair was described in a local paper to the extent of a column on the front page, approximately half of which was devoted to the business of the meeting and the other half to Mr. Hamilton and his entertainment. The newspaper account said in part:

"Petunias, verbenas, salvias and other flowers adorn many homes in Kewanee tonight as the result of the visit of the Rotary Club to the Terminal Park greenhouses this noon at the invitation of Claude M. Hamilton, proprietor. Every person received as a souvenir of the visit a handsome little basket in bronze and blue weave, filled with a flowering plant.

"It was a meeting marked by originality, which Mr. Hamilton offered. Upon arrival at the greenhouses in the special car, the visitors were at once escorted to the large greenhouses at the northwest corner of the property, where long tables extended east and west. Here there was room for 125 persons. Banked on the north and on the south of the tables were great lines of flowers. The wealth of all the greenhouses was centered here as decorations for the dinner.

"The dinner presented many novel ideas. There was no silverware and no china, but all the service was from earthenware pots such as are used every day at the greenhouses. All the tableware was new and each visitor was invited to take home the pots and pans from which he ate. A flower pot of one size, securely corked, was the water glass, and a pot of another size was the coffee cup. Instead of knives and spoons, the visitors ate with flat pieces of woodenware which are used as labels in the greenhouses. The coffee was poured from a large new sprinkling can.

"Mrs. Hamilton was present at the event and assisted in making the big crowd welcome."

The illustration on this page shows how the Rotarians adapted themselves to their surroundings.

IT PAYS TO PICK 'EM CAREFULLY.

There is a tendency strongly marked among advertisers. It is seen in this trade and in many others. An advertiser makes a start with what he considers the best paper. It pays. He takes on another, and still another, until he finds he has built up a large expense account without a corresponding increase in his returns. Then he cuts off all the advertising at once. He does not pause to figure out that a far better course would be to stop the unprofitable advertising and continue in the mediums of demonstrated pulling power.

We enclose our check to cover bill received today for our small card in The Review. We believe that we receive greater returns from this investment than from any other advertising medium.—Tupelo Floral Co., Member F. T. D., Tupelo, Miss., April 29, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

FLOWERS FOR FOOD AND DRINK.

If you thought flowers were only to be seen and smelled, there are a few new ideas for you in this editorial, clipped by T. P. Langhans from a Pittsburgh newspaper:

EDIBLE FLOWERS, AND DRINKABLE.

Since prohibition went into effect it has been widely heralded that "wine" can be made of the flowers of the dandelion. A newspaper published in an eastern city whose people are, perhaps, not so abstemious as those of Pittsburgh reports that in addition to the usual number of persons who are gathering the tender dandelion greens in the parks and fields for salad many are picking the flowers.

This is one case in which Americans use flowers for another purpose than to please the eye or gratify the sense of smell. There are not many examples in this country of flowers being used for other than æsthetic ends by the general public. In the orient, however, certain flowers are rather extensively used as food, and it seems not at all unlikely that if we knew how to prepare them we could gratify our palates with blossoms just as we please our olfactory sense. We eat leaves, roots, stems, fruit and seeds and find nourishment in them. Why should flowers not be nutritious, also?

The ancients ate flowers. They made sweetmeats of violets and also used them in the production of a sherbet described by classic writers as delicious. In the near east today it is the custom to put violets, roses and limes into certain kinds of confectionery. Nasturtium sandwiches are eaten in Greece and Turkey. The dahlia is described as an excellent food, though somewhat acrid. Flowers are used almost as much as vegetables in the preparation of rice dishes in China and Japan.

Flowers as food offer a big field for experimentation. They may afford ingenious cooks an opportunity to distinguish themselves by giving piquant new dishes to the world.

PRIMULA POISONING.

Having seen several communications with regard to remedies for poisoning by Primula obconica, I wish to add my mite. Jonathan Bland, the veteran florist of Independence, Ia., formerly suffered much from this kind of poisoning, but he has discovered a simple cure, which is, for him at least, complete. It consists of simply plunging his hands and arms in hot water. He says it gives him a sort of thrill at first and is quite effective, so that he now handles the primulas without fear.

George S. Woodruff.

CUTWORMS ON GLADIOLI.

Cutworms are apt to do considerable damage by cutting off the tops of choice gladioli. When this occurs, turn over the soil near the plant and you will usually find the cutworm about one inch from the surface; if you do not destroy it, during the night it will travel to the next plant and do further damage.

A poisoned bait may be used by mixing a little bran, Paris green and molasses with a little water. When tops have been cut off, corms will send up fresh sprouts.

PENNOCK POINTS RIGHT ROAD

For Florists' Success.

In asking me to talk before this body on the "Basic Principles Governing the Successful Florist" you have given me rather a hard subject and one that can be looked at from a great many different angles. Everyone has his way of running his own business. Some reach success through one method, some through another. The few things I am going to set forth are mostly along the lines that we have followed in our business in Philadelphia and our branch stores in New York, Baltimore and Washington.

The flower business in the past has been conducted more or less along lines of the least resistance, a great many florists simply knowing how their business stood by the amount of money they had left in bank after the bills were paid. Today this is practiced to a much smaller extent, as almost every florist who wishes to make a success of his business realizes that to do so he must practice up-to-date methods, and conduct his business in a systematic way—a way that will give only the best results.

Accounting Points the Way.

It is often a good plan for a florist to bring in a certified public accountant and start his, the florist's, books out in the latest and most up-to-date methods of bookkeeping. By this I do not mean an elaborate, complicated system, but a simplified way of keeping books, in order to know definitely how the business stands each month. It should be arranged so it will be known what branch or department of the business is making money and what part is not. The sooner the part not making money is cut out the better. Of course, at times there are certain things that one would have to handle in order to cater to a general trade, even if the immediate returns are not discernible. In other words, a thing may be a deficit that would be chargeable to advertising.

Another thought is that a great many times a person running a business is overimbed with some pet scheme that he has and he does not realize that that particular end of the business is losing money. If he had the figures each month showing a loss, then it would probably be cut out much sooner than if he went on without knowing just how he stood. In fact, it may be carrying the whole business down and, eventually, the business goes bankrupt, whereas, if this part had been stopped in the beginning, the rest would have gone on successfully. This brings us back to the old saying, "If you take care of the pennies, the dollars will take care of themselves," and this is only too true in many instances.

Charges and Collections.

Collections and charges are also important features of a business. In granting credit, be careful to grant credit only to those who you feel reasonably sure will pay. Often a moral risk is far better than a risk where there seems to be plenty of money, but little principle. This kind of credit is more dangerous than giving credit to one starting out with a small capital and a good moral reputation. It is not always safe to give credit simply on "moral." At the same time, it is a splendid guide, and many a successful business has got a good start by the fact of getting credit on its moral reputation and the effort always to do business along straight lines. The unprincipled dealer is almost always sure, sooner or later, to get into trouble, and sometimes into such serious trouble that it will carry him under, as unprincipled methods cannot succeed in the long run. The man who builds up a first-class reputation is building along with it stability, which in the end will count for more than any other one thing that he can do. It may take years to build up a reputation, which can be out in the business is pretty nearly as well off to start with a new place, even if it is in a small way, and plan his building for the future. If the business prospers, and it is far more liable to with a well laid plan, then each succeeding house is built according to this plan. In looking at some of the larger places that we have in our business today one finds they are more or less haphazardly built. Of course, they were built under strenuous circumstances, lack of capital oftentimes, and at other times lack of knowledge, but, altogether, they were not built as they would be if a well laid plan had been made in the beginning, with the idea of making a large place of it. All these large establishments started in a small way and, had they realized they were going to be large concerns, then, of course, they would have made plans better suited for large places.

The address of Samuel S. Pennock, president of the S. A. F., delivered before the convention of the Florida State Florists' Association, at Lakeland, Fla., May 5.

I can recall one or two places that were prosperous and became large establishments and big factors in the business, but when the original owner gave up the management it was a hard matter for his successors to continue and make it a successful business. Had these places been thought out more carefully as to their planning and not been built in such a haphazard way, they could have gone on almost indefinitely. These cases are, of course, more or less isolated. No one starts in business but that he feels eventually he will have one of the big businesses of the country. Even the smallest grower, starting out with only one small house, feels that he is going to grow and, if he starts out with always the idea in mind of a plan for a bigger business, he will be pretty sure to make a success as he goes along.

When Publicity Pulls.

In comparing our business with other lines of business, it is quite evident that we are not suffering the way many other lines are suffering and have suffered. The farmer, for instance, the last year, has marketed most of his crops either at a big loss or at so near a loss that there has been no profit at all. But, looking at the various lines of our own business, we find the unsuccessful firms are few and far between. I think this better business condition, which the flower business, in general, is and has been facing, is due primarily to publicity, which has been carried on in its various branches.

We have before the public a slogan which is conceded by advertising authorities to be the best slogan that has ever been introduced in any business in this country. "Say It with Flowers" is known from one end of the country to the other, and the continual bringing of this slogan before the public has, without a doubt, helped every grower, wholesaler and retailer in every line of the business, whether he deals in plants, cut flowers, or what not, and it is certainly up to every florist to back this national publicity campaign.

While it may seem like getting back little immediate return where a contribution of $50, $100 or $500 is given towards the national publicity campaign, lost by a single act of dishonesty or unscrupulous dealing.

I think that I have noticed a more general change for the better in methods of doing business in the last ten years than any time during the time I have been in the business, and more florists have realized that it is necessary for them to pursue up-to-date methods. The younger generation, as they come along, with their modern methods of training, realize this more than the older generation.

Characteristics That Build.

Courtesy is another thing that it is not possible to have too much of in one's business. Unfailing courtesy to customers, under all circumstances, no matter whether the customer is wrong or right, builds for better business and leaves a feeling that will bring back a customer, where discourtesy is sure to drive that same customer away.

Coming to the growing end, I am not quite so familiar with that as a grower would be, but I believe anyone starting yet the results are sure to be far-reaching and will make for future business all over the country.

Probably a number of you have noticed recently in the trade papers the story of the coöperative advertising of the St. Louis florists. They came out just before Easter with a double-page spread in the St. Louis papers and all the St. Louis florists are enthusiastic about the results that this brought them in increased business. They feel it was money well spent, and was more than a paying investment for them. Collective local advertising cannot help but repay every city or town that takes up advertising of the kind.

A Story with a Kick.

A LESSON FROM THE STARS.

In the garden of a country home two men were talking. Near them sat a small boy, looking at the stars.

Said one of the men: "I am making a product that I know is the best in its class—and still I cannot sell it."

There was a moment of silence. Then the second man called to the boy who sat near them. "Son," he said, "if you had your choice of any of those stars up there, which one would you choose?"

The boy promptly pointed to the brightest star in sight. "That big one over there!" he said.

The man who had addressed the boy turned to his companion. "As a matter of fact," he said, "there are other stars in the heavens, which the boy cannot see, that are far brighter and bigger than the one he chose. But he didn't know the other stars were there, so he couldn't choose them. That's why your product isn't selling. People simply do not know it exists."

"I know what you mean," said the first man, "advertising. But I have tried advertising in the past—two or three times—and it didn't work."

His companion seemed preoccupied with the stars. "If we stand here and watch the sky for a few minutes," he finally said, "we shall see a shooting star. It will spurt across the heavens for a second, and then it will die out. There are thousands of shooting stars every night. People pay little attention to them and they are instantly forgotten. That's the kind of an advertiser you were."

"The pole star," continued the speaker, "has stayed on the job so long and so faithfully that its very name has come to mean 'a guide, a controlling principle.' And that's the way to advertise. There are certain products today whose names are regarded as a guide to satisfaction and a controlling principle of quality. They are the pole stars. In this present economic situation, it is the pole stars that are doing the business."

Another Illustration.

Another illustration of what publicity can do and is doing is the F. T. D. That has become one of the strongest affiliated societies of the S. A. F. and, today, is really a tremendous power and is bringing the florist more business, probably, than any other one of the affiliated societies. I think we all want to take our hats off to this organization for the way it has been handling and showing the possibilities of transmitting orders from one town to another. There certainly is many a dollar saved for the florists through a possibility of their customers being able to supply friends in a distant city, and the F. T. D. business, which is backed by clean, clear-cut methods—methods that make for ever increasing possibilities—is becoming not only national, but international, and will be more so as the years go by.

Special Feature Days.

All holidays or special days are days that the florists want to encourage, as this brings in extra business, creating a market that otherwise would not be possible. Such days as Christmas and Easter do not need to be pushed nearly as much as some of the other holidays, but we have other days that can be made better florists' days than they are at present. Christmas and Easter, the florist, as a rule, has pretty nearly as much as he can handle and handle satisfactorily.

Mothers' day is, in certain localities, fast approaching in volume Easter and Christmas. To a great many florists it is a more satisfactory day. In Chicago, for instance, and other cities of the west, they feel that Mothers' day is a better day than Easter, which is really surprising, considering the short time that Mothers' day has been in existence—they claiming that Mothers' day appeals more to the masses than to just flower buyers, and that is what we want to strive for—more days to sell flowers to the general public.

You will probably remember that I spent about six months in Germany last year in child welfare work and there a birthday is the big day of the year of everyone's life, and means more to them than any other day. Flowers on such occasions are given more than any other one article. At one of the places where I boarded, the lady was the recipient of flowers from a great many of her friends on her birthday, and I think that she appreciated the flowers more than any other one thing she received. There is no reason why the florists in this country should not encourage the observance of birthdays more, reminding their customers to celebrate the birthdays of those they love by sending a few flowers. Then they would have more business every day in the year and not a spasmodic business, as holiday business is at present.

Armistice day is another day that can be made a florists' day and, with the united efforts of the S. A. F. and of the florists' state organizations, eventually will be as popular and as good a day for the florists as Memorial day is now, which, in many localities, is a splendid florists' day.

FLORIDA FLORISTS MEET.

The first annual convention of the Florida State Florists' Association was held May 5, at Lakeland, Fla.

After the address of welcome by E. R. Giddings, of the Westmoreland Floral Gardens, Lakeland, to which F. W. Fletcher, of Rosalind Gardens, Orlando, responded, the president's address was given by C. Leslie Whipp, of Mills the Florist, Jacksonville, and report of the secretary-treasurer by N. A. Reasoner, of the Royal Palm Nurseries, Oneco. ## GROWING GREENS

GROWING PLUMOSUS IN FLORIDA.

On the Increase.

The growing of Asparagus plumosus in Florida has grown to be an important industry within the last few years. The acreage is now considerably over 300, and much of this is not yet producing to capacity. The heavy shipments from Florida have rapidly decreased the quantity of plumosus grown under glass in the northern states, as the latter has failed to hold its own in competition.

I have visited many of the ferneries within the state and have found few on the same type of soil. This necessitates almost every grower's having to work out his own production problems, as no general rule would meet with success on all these types of soil. The effects of various applications of fertilizer can be tested out by using test and check plots instead of using the whole fernery for experiment in each case.

All of us, however, have the common red spider and several other annoying pests to contend with. The spider can be held in check by the sufficient use of irrigation and spraying with a lime-sulphur solution. The army worm, which is apt to catch us unawares during the fall months, can prove exceedingly destructive. It can be handled better in theory than in actual practice. It will thrive on poisoned bait ordinarily used for cutworms. A heavy spraying of arsenate of lead seems to be the most effective remedy. Grasshoppers may be controlled in the same way.

Problem of Marketing.

The marketing of the constantly increasing supply of plumosus is the big problem that all growers must prepare to meet. That the market for plumosus has quite definite limitations does not seem to be fully realized by some of the newer growers, who have not fully investigated the marketing end of the business.

The price of plumosus, like that of any other commodity, is governed by the law of supply and demand, and the grower is going to be the loser unless he sees that the balance is properly maintained. The most important principle to follow is to put out a supply for which there will be a demand and this means "quality." Don't dump culls on the market and expect to maintain that market. It is better all around to ship half as much and get a fair return than load the market with inferior goods.

I make a practice of soliciting all of my customers personally and have observed that no two florists use the same quantity of plumosus with the same quantity of flowers. I have several retail florists on my shipping list and find some of these using as high as six times as much plumosus as others doing the same volume of business. It has occurred to me that the problem of the plumosus grower as the supply increases is to educate the florists in the proper and most fitting use of plumosus. Don't tell the florist that he is not using sufficient plumosus, but show him how he can better please his customers and give them a better showing for their money. That will help both his business and our own.

The plumosus growers of the state could get together and publish albums of designs, corsages, etc., showing how a little additional plumosus will add materially to the appearance of the florist's products. This method of advertising is being effectively used by the manufacturers of artificial flowers and could be similarly used in increasing the use of plumosus. In many of the smaller establishments floral albums are constantly used by florists to copy from or obtain ideas. Why not, instead of letting them copy designs and sprays that show no plumosus at all, supply them with albums showing its effective use?

We are not far enough advanced yet in the business to take action on the suggestions that I have made, but it is well to look ahead so as to know how to prepare for a situation which is inevitable under the present rate of increase in production.

It is hardly possible to consider a marketing organization among the growers, as no two ferneries produce the same quality of plumosus. When necessity calls, however, they can cooperate in advertising, not plumosus, but how to use it.

AWARD WHITE MEDAL.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held May 8, it was unanimously voted to award the George Robert White medal of honor for eminent services rendered to horticulture in 1922, to Albert C. Burrage. The recipient of this honor is serving his second term as president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and May 6 was reelected president of the American Orchid Society. He has made many notable displays of orchids at the Boston shows from his wonderful collection at Beverly Farms and has helped to make Boston the orchid center of America. The beautiful show of native orchids staged by him at great cost in 1921, attracted 25,000 visitors, and the still more striking and extensive show of native ferns and orchids, which opened May 3 and will not close until May 14, promises at least to treble that attendance. Mr. Burrage has proved himself to be a generous patron of horticulture and has done much to interest the masses of our population in the care, preservation and perpetuation of our native flora. The award is a well merited one.

VINCAS IN WINDOW BOXES.

The vinca is a plant of various uses. It is particularly well adapted for use outdoors as a permanent ground cover and for covering bare, rocky places and steep banks, while it also forms a dense carpet under shade trees, where it is almost impossible to induce grass to grow, as in cemeteries or where the overhead foliage excludes the sunlight. When this hanging or trailing vine is interspersed with geraniums, petunias, torenias and other plants, it makes a decorative foliage and flower combination which is excellent for window boxes.

The accompanying illustration, showing the flower store and apartment house of O. B. Stevens, Shenandoah, Ia., gives an excellent idea of how a decorative combination of the kind mentioned above can enhance the beauty of an already attractive place. In this illustration it will be noted that the artistic sense of Mrs. Stevens has been given full play. The vinca vines have attained a length of almost ten feet. The boxes in which they grew were filled with a loamy soil, which was mixed well with a double portion of bone meal, and the plants were set out about May 10, last year. The vincas, Asparagus Sprengeri and geraniums, which were large, strong 4-inch plants, were set deep in the soil and the torenias and white petunias, from 2-inch pots, were placed between the larger plants to fill in. They were watered only when necessary after planted, but the boxes soon became filled with roots and it was found necessary to water them every morning. The growth of these plants was luxuriant and they kept their color and foliage exceedingly well during the summer months, when the sun's rays were the hottest, and even after the cool nights came these plants remained in good color until they were taken in about December 1. The building faces the north; so the plants were not exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The boxes, being of the Illinois self-watering type, made watering easy, simply a matter of turning a faucet that connected the city main with a pipe feeding the boxes.

SNAPDRAGONS UNNAMABLE.

I have sent by parcel post two snapdragons of different shades. Will you give us the names of them? One is said to be Ramsburg's Golden Pink Queen.

H. G.—Colo.

The snapdragons came much dried after their long journey, and I regret that I cannot name them for you. I should suggest sowing seed of bright pink, intermediate snapdragons or such other colors as prove the best sellers with you and try them out in lieu of cuttings. You will find them more vigorous and disease-proof than plants grown from cuttings, and in well selected strains of seed a small proportion fail to come true to color or name.

Probably a number of you have noticed recently in the trade papers the story of the coöperative advertising of the St. Louis florists. They came out just before Easter with a double-page spread in the St. Louis papers and all the St. Louis florists are enthusiastic about the results that this brought them in increased business. They feel it was money well spent, and was more than a paying investment for them. Collective local advertising cannot help but repay every city or town that takes up advertising of the kind.

A Story with a Kick.

A LESSON FROM THE STARS.

In the garden of a country home two men were talking. Near them sat a small boy, looking at the stars.

Said one of the men: "I am making a product that I know is the best in its class—and still I cannot sell it."

There was a moment of silence. . . . Then the second man called to the boy who sat near them. "Son," he said, "if you had your choice of any of those stars up there, which one would you choose?"

The boy promptly pointed to the brightest star in sight. "That big one over there!" he said.

The man who had addressed the boy turned to his companion. "As a matter of fact," he said, "there are other stars in the heavens, which the boy cannot see, that are far brighter and bigger than the one he chose. But he didn't know the other stars were there, so he couldn't choose them. That's why your product isn't selling. People simply do not know it exists."

"I know what you mean," said the first man, "advertising. But I have tried advertising in the past—two or three times—and it didn't work."

His companion seemed preoccupied with the stars. . . . "If we stand here and watch the sky for a few minutes," he finally said, "we shall see a shooting star. It will spurt across the heavens for a second, and then it will die out. There are thousands of shooting stars every night. People pay little attention to them and they are instantly forgotten. That's the kind of an advertiser you were."

"The pole star," continued the speaker, "has stayed on the job so long and so faithfully that its very name has come to mean 'a guide, a controlling principle.' And that's the way to advertise. There are certain products today whose names are regarded as a guide to satisfaction and a controlling principle of quality. They are the pole stars. In this present economic situation, it is the pole stars that are doing the business."

Another Illustration.

Another illustration of what publicity can do and is doing is the F. T. D. That has become one of the strongest affiliated societies of the S. A. F. and, today, is really a tremendous power and is bringing the florist more business, probably, than any other one of the affiliated societies. I think we all want to take our hats off to this organization for the way it has been handling and showing the possibilities of transmitting orders from one town to another. There certainly is many a dollar saved for the florists through a possibility of their customers being able to supply friends in a distant city, and the F. T. D. business, which is backed by clean, clear-cut methods—methods that make for ever increasing possibilities—is becoming not only national, but international, and will be more so as the years go by.

Special Feature Days.

All holidays or special days are days that the florists want to encourage, as this brings in extra business, creating a market that otherwise would not be possible. Such days as Christmas and Easter do not need to be pushed nearly as much as some of the other holidays, but we have other days that can be made better florists' days than they are at present. Christmas and Easter, the florist, as a rule, has pretty nearly as much as he can handle and handle satisfactorily.

Mothers' day is, in certain localities, fast approaching in volume Easter and Christmas. To a great many florists it is a more satisfactory day. In Chicago, for instance, and other cities of the west, they feel that Mothers' day is a better day than Easter, which is really surprising, considering the short time that Mothers' day has been in existence—they claiming that Mothers' day appeals more to the masses than to just flower buyers, and that is what we want to strive for—more days to sell flowers to the general public.

You will probably remember that I spent about six months in Germany last year in child welfare work and there a birthday is the big day of the year of everyone's life, and means more to them than any other day. Flowers on such occasions are given more than any other article. At one of the places where I boarded, the lady was the recipient of flowers from a great many of her friends on her birthday, and I think that she appreciated the flowers more than any other one thing she received. There is no reason why the florists in this country should not encourage the observance of birthdays more, reminding their customers to celebrate the birthdays of those they love by sending a few flowers. Then they would have more business every day in the year and not a spasmodic business, as holiday business is at present.

Armistice day is another day that can be made a florists' day and, with the united efforts of the S. A. F. and of the florists' state organizations, eventually will be as popular and as good a day for the florists as Memorial day is now, which, in many localities, is a splendid florists' day.

FLORIDA FLORISTS MEET.

The first annual convention of the Florida State Florists' Association was held May 5, at Lakeland, Fla.

After the address of welcome by E. R. Giddings, of the Westmoreland Floral Gardens, Lakeland, to which F. W. Fletcher, of Rosalind Gardens, Orlando, responded, the president's address was given by C. ## GEDDIS DEFENDS PRICES.

Mothers' Day Prices Attacked.

Against an attack on "flower profiteers" in the St. Louis Times of May 2, David S. Geddis, general manager of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., came to the defense of the trade with a letter defending flower prices which was printed in the St. Louis Times of May 4.

The offending item in the Times was a news dispatch from Philadelphia. It stated that the National American War Mothers were coöperating with the Mothers' Day Association, first, to extend the observance of Mothers' day to a full week, from Monday, May 8, to Sunday, May 14, and, second, to stop profiteering in 'white carnations, called "the official emblem of Mothers' day."

Instead of wearing white carnations, the dispatch stated, the War Mothers advocate the wearing of a small white button on which is printed in green and white a carnation and the words, "Anna Jarvis, Founder—Mothers' Day." The buttons are to sell for 5 cents each and a part of the proceeds of the sale, it is stated, will be used for philanthropic purposes.

Miss Jarvis at Us Again.

A letter from Miss Jarvis to the president of the National American War Mothers was quoted in the Times, as follows:

"The white carnation is the only emblem of Mothers' day. The War Mothers and other Mothers' day friends will wear the official white carnation button badge, the only badge worn for Mothers' day celebration. Flowers are barred."

Apparently Miss Anna Jarvis, unable to obtain financial aid for her association from florists, has appealed to the button manufacturers. Since she believes that florists have injured the day by charging 25 cents for a carnation, she evidently intends to do a little profiteering on her own hook by selling buttons for 5 cents the piece.

In serious vein, however, David S. Geddis defended florists' prices in an able letter which appeared in the St. Louis Times, May 4. In the letter he stated:

"Reading the Times of May 2, I noticed a news item headed, 'War Waged on Flower Profiteers,' and in defense of the florists' industry I wish to state that there are no flower profiteers in the business and never have been.

Lower Today than Years Ago.

"I wish to say that flowers of today are better in quality and cheaper in price than they were twenty-five years ago. Roses years ago, during the winter months, were purchased by the wealthy only, as the only fine rose those days was the American Beauty, which sold from 50 cents to $2 each. Today we have the Premier and Columbia, which can be purchased from $2 to $12 a dozen.

"Carnations in those days were called pinks, which were small in flower and short-stemmed, and sold for $2 and $3 a dozen. Today we have the fine, large, long-stemmed carnations, which sell from $1.50 to $5 a dozen.

"Potted plants and baskets of flowers are sold from $3 to $15. Years gone by plants and baskets that do not compare with those of today, sold from $10 to $50.

"In those days the purchasers called for and delivered most of their purchases. Today the flower buyer expects the florist to carry on hand at all times a large supply of this perishable commodity, in order to fill any sized order he may wish to place, and expects a prompt delivery.

"If the grower of flowers and the retailer could depend upon the public purchasing a supply of flowers daily, as they buy their meats, vegetables, groceries, milk and butter, the florists' industry would not have to depend on the holidays to make up for the heavy losses which enter into the business. If it were not for the florists' industry, what could replace our line to give cheer to the sick, and a token of loving sympathy to the dead (forget the war). A flower at any price will cheer the heart and take gloom from all living creatures."

IT MAKES THE MARKET.

It frequently has been said that The Review makes the market in most lines of florists' stock, but it is especially true of the market for gladiolus bulbs. There are so many offers in the Classified section of The Review that buyers and sellers all are guided by the prices quoted there:

I certainly had "some week" last week. The Review can't be beat as a business getter; I am well satisfied with it. I get in touch with the larger growers and florists and I think I shall sell all I care to during the next two weeks.—Fred W. Baumgras, gladiolus grower, Lansing, Mich.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

STORING BULBS.

I am lifting a good many bulbs from beds which I planted last fall, in order to put in annual bedding plants. What is the best way to treat and care for these bulbs so that they will be all right for next fall? J. R. A.—Ga.

If the bulbs referred to are hyacinths, tulips or narcissi, stand them in flats in a cool, dry shed. After all of the foliage has dried up, pick them over and store them away in a cool, dry shed or cellar until fall. While new bulbs give better results, a good proportion of the kept-over stock will probably flower. C. W.

Davenport, Ia.—The Bills Floral Co., formerly located at 104 West Second street, has changed its location and is now ready for business in its new quarters at 209 Brady street. Miss M. A. Tierney, owner of the store, has received many congratulations from business men of Davenport and from customers in general on the interior beauty of the store.

LIVE WIRES

F. T. D. DIRECTORS MEET.

The board of directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association met at Detroit, May 1 and 2. So loyal and devoted are the members of the board to the association's interests that there are scarcely ever any absentees noted at their meetings. This time only two were missing, both delayed at the last minute by pressing business, and both sent telegrams expressing their regrets. W. J. Palmer was detained in Buffalo and Charles Grakelow was kept at home in Philadelphia. President Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; Vice-president Charles F. Feast, Baltimore, Treasurer William L. Rock, Kansas City, and Secretary Albert Poehelon, Detroit, were all present, as were the following directors: W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis; W. J. Smyth, Chicago; Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.; W. W. Gammage, London, Ont.; H. P. Knoble, Cleveland; Edward Seery, Paterson, N. J.; Max Schling, New York, and A. F. Borden, Los Angeles. Hilmer V. Swenson, of Chicago, and Robert Tate Paterson, of Baltimore, were also present.

Plans were made for the annual meeting, to be held next October at Baltimore, when everyone expects a banner attendance and a meeting of much interest. This meeting will be the first the F. T. D. has held so far east, and many of those who have not attended the gatherings in the central west are expected to make the trip to Baltimore. Vice-president Feast is full of enthusiasm regarding preparations for the meeting and has strong support from the live florists of Baltimore.

Considerable discussion was held concerning the project of a clearing house for F. T. D. members, and plans were proposed whereby the clearing house could function with only a part of the membership availing themselves of its services. It is thought that with more careful calculation and planning, the project may be realized before many years have passed.

A larger membership is one of the aims of the directors of the association, in the hope that in time the dues may be lowered, rather than raised. Action in this regard, of course, depends upon the extent to which the association adds other enterprises to those it is already undertaking in behalf of its members.

Many other matters of importance to the association's welfare were threshed out, the directors putting in two full days of hard work, and much benefit is expected therefrom. The opinion prevailed that despite conditions which had not made things easier for the retailer, the trade is in good condition and that shortly the association's membership will begin to grow again at the encouraging rate it showed not long ago.

AMERICAN ORCHID SOCIETY.

Meets at Boston.

The second annual meeting of the American Orchid Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, May 6. About thirty-five members were present when the meeting was called to order by President Albert C. Burrage. The minutes of the 1921 meeting, held in Boston, were read by Secretary A. J. Loveless and approved. Treasurer Louis Burk read the treasurer's report, showing over $3,200 in the treasury. Some discussion arose over what disposition should be made of the treasury funds, and it was voted to leave the matter of investment to the trustees.

The secretary reported that the society now had thirty-five life and eighty-three annual members, a total membership of 118. Massachusetts leads in number of members, with New Jersey second. J. T. Butterworth said the membership clearly proved that Boston was the best place to hold a big orchid show, since Massachusetts had so many orchid enthusiasts. Joseph Manda said that a successful show was not possible without the aid of New Jersey, which always furnished a large part of the exhibits.

Elect Officers and Trustees.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Albert C. Burrage, Boston, Mass.; first vice-president, Theodore H. Wickwire, Buffalo, N. Y.; second vice-president, Oakes Ames, North Easton, Mass.; third vice-president, W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; treasurer, Louis Burk, Philadelphia, Pa., and secretary, A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass. The trustees for three years are Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; Oliver Lines, Pittsfield, Mass., and F. E. Dixon, Elkins Park, Pa.

President Burrage strongly recommended the issuing of a list of native orchids, one which would be absolutely correct, one which could be sold to members and others interested in orchids in this and other countries. He said there is a great need of, and a strong call for, such a list. It was unanimously voted to prepare such a list. The almost total disappearance of two fine native orchids, Pogonia rotundifolia and Orchis juncifolia, was reported. Only a few small stations now contained these plants and Oakes Ames, Edwin H. Lincoln and H. Walter Child were appointed a committee to look up details and report on these two scarce and pretty varieties.

References were made to the show of wild flowers and ferns then in progress in Horticultural hall. All visitors from a distance enthusiastically praised it. George E. Baldwin stated that no other city could stage such a show as Boston, since authorities in other cities, like New York, would not allow the use of quantities of evergreen trees such as were used at the present show, on account of fire hazards. A. C. Burrage, who conceived and carried out the arrangement of the show, made some criticisms of it and showed how it might have been improved, especially in the use of greater masses of the native flora.

Plans Considered.

Thomas Roland advocated the holding of a great national orchid show in 1924 in some large city and he considered Boston the most natural place for the holding of such a show, which would be bound to give the American Orchid Society a boom, especially in the adding of new members. It was unanimously voted to hold such a show in 1924. Joseph Manda urged the striking of special gold, silver and bronze medals to be offered by the American Orchid Society at not only the national orchid show, but also through various other societies where orchids were scheduled. The idea was adopted by acclamation. There being no further business of importance, the meeting adjourned after being in session one and a half hours.

Among visitors from a distance at the orchid meeting and wild flower show were the following: Louis Burk, Philadelphia; George E. Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Joseph Manda, East Orange, N. J.; Frank J. Sealey, New York; R. Tyson, Convent Station, N. J.; Fred Heeremans and A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass.; A. C. Burrage, Paul de Nave, Douglas Eccleston, F. W. Pocock and George I'Ansen, Beverly Farms, Mass. Thomas Roland, Henry Penn, G. F. Stewart, W. N. Craig, Gustave Thommen, H. Walter Child, E. H. Lincoln, J. T. Butterworth, George W. Butterworth, Prof. M. L. Fernald, Oakes Ames, Miss M. R. Case, C. W. Hoitt, L. D. Towle and other local members were also present.

President Burrage gave an informal lunch to members of the American Orchid Society, at the exclusive Algonquin Club, Commonwealth avenue, in advance of the business meeting. The members gave a rising and enthusiastic vote of thanks to Mr. Burrage for this courtesy.

It was stated that the beautifully colored frontispiece of Cypripedium acaule was reproduced from a fine colored plate of this orchid, furnished by Miss W. Eileen Low, of Jarvis Brook, Sussex, England.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Plant Registration.

Seven new small-flowered varieties of chrysanthemums have been registered by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind. The firm's descriptions of them are as follows:

Luella—White with pink tip on petal; strong grower, producing an abundance of long sprays; blooms November 1.

Snow-Crest—Pure white bloom; individual blooms are of good size and the sprays are of good size and length; blooms November 3.

Lucretia—Blush pink with deeper pink on reverse of petal, giving a beautiful two-tone effect; strong grower; blooms November 5.

Autumn Giants—Yellow with reddish reverse; strong grower; blooms November 5.

Pink Daisy—Single floret about as large as a silver dollar; strong stems, permitting handling without getting droopy; beautiful shade of pink with yellow disk; one of our favorites; blooms November 10.

Luella—Light pink of pleasing shade; produces large sprays and blooms November 8.

Crystal White—The best pure white pompon we know of, perfect individual blooms and produces fine sprays in abundance; ideal in growth; blooms November 15.

HEAD ROOM FOR MUMS.

Can I grow Early Frost and Chrysolora chrysanthemums with three feet of head room?

What are two white and yellow varieties of mums that will bloom about Thanksgiving time? G. S.—N. J.

Early Frost and Chrysolora can be grown in three feet of head room, provided they are not planted until late in June. Plants rooted any time in May and grown straight along will come inside that space, and are often more satisfactory than earlier planted stock.

Regarding what white and yellow mums bloom around Thanksgiving, the most largely grown varieties for this date of blooming are white and yellow Chadwick. White Seidewitz has also given general satisfaction. White and yellow Mistletoe are grown largely by some people, but, owing to the plants' tendency to disease, good stock of either variety is not always procurable.

C. H. T.

CUTTING BACK MUMS.

I am growing William Turner, white and yellow Marigold, Pacific Supreme and Charles Rager mums. They were rooted in January and are now six inches tall and quite thrifty. Will it hurt the blooming quality of the plants to take a top cutting from each plant? How late in the season can this cutting back be done? Is it advisable to take the crown bud on Turner, regardless of date?

F. C.—Ind.

It will not hurt the chrysanthemums to take the tops from each cutting of the varieties that are now more than six inches high. I should suggest this cutting process be done now, while the wood is still soft, so the cutting will be in proper shape to cut and the parent stock be soft enough to break again readily. This cutting back can be carried on until the middle of June, if it is desired to keep down the height of the plants.

The best flowers of Turner that we have are from buds taken between August 28 and September 5. We pay no attention to the question as to whether or not it is a first bud that the plant produces or the fifth, as we consider the period of taking the bud of much more importance. Our Turner plants here always give us fine results. C. H. T.

NOVEL SHOW

BURRAGE SHOWS BOSTON.

Native Flowers and Ferns.

There have been many fine and attractive flower shows held in Boston, where roses, orchids, azaleas, rhododendrons, gladioli, dahlias, peonies, carnations and other popular flowers have been made special features, and in May, 1921, a grand display of native orchids, exhibited and staged under natural settings by A. C. Burrage, was made, which attracted a record attendance of 24,000. All attendance records, however, have been shattered by the grand exhibition of native ferns and flowers, planned, prepared and staged once more by the same enthusiastic and redoubtable horticulturist, A. C. Burrage. As the show is still in progress and as these notes are written, the total attendance cannot be given, but May 4, in a day of continuous, drenching rain, 4,200 attended. The following day, equally wet, saw 5,000 present. May 6, clear and pleasant, it was hard to get near the hall, so great was the throng, and by 2 p. m. the total attendance of the two preceding days had been passed and all records for a single day were smashed.

Waterfalls and Everything.

The staging of this beautiful and unique show was a big undertaking. All the flooring of the main hall had to be removed. Around the sides and extreme end of the hall, mountain-like masses of such evergreens as white pines, hemlocks, cedars and spruce rose to heights of fifty feet, resembling forest-covered mountains. At the base and rising for a considerable distance were moss-covered rocks, naturally placed, on which were to be found all of the forty-seven varieties of ferns native to New England, each planted just as it is found in a state of nature, sometimes in bold masses, occasionally solitary specimens. At the extreme end of the hall a high and bold mass of rocks—some sixty tons of rock were used—was built up to a height of twenty-five feet and in the center a wide and quite impressive waterfall came tumbling down in a series of falls, the last being one about fifteen feet in height. Three hundred gallons of water per minute passed over the falls. Behind the falls and on both sides grew masses of the beautiful New England ferns, apparently reveling in their newly found home, dripping with the spray from the falls. A skillfully prepared concrete pool was at the base of the falls, through which the water went rushing along, a natural-like stream, at a fairly rapid pace to nearly the opposite end of the main hall, where it disappeared down a large pipe, was carried back to the rear of the falls and pumped over again by an electric motor.

A rustic bridge crossed the stream near the falls and along its banks were wide, swamp-like borders planted with vaciniums, andromedas, cypripediums, calthas, osmundas, sarracenias and many other plants, most of which are at home in moist situations. Scattered through the forest-like slopes of mountains were numerous large specimens of white dogwood, or Cornus florida, viburnums, amelanchiers, Kalmias angustifolia and latifolia, Rhododendron maximum and other flowering trees and shrubs, which gave fine masses of color. At the base of the rockwork, in which ferns and some flowers revealed, were plantings of various orchids, bluets, violas and some seventy-five other varieties of native flowers, even so late a bloomer as Aster novæ-anglæi being represented.

Everybody Happy.

The entrance and exit from the exhibition hall was through avenues of evergreen trees on paths covered with soft gravel, on which pine needles had been thickly scattered. It was an inspiration to hear the exclamations of delight from the great numbers of children attending, to all of whom the waterfall was the star magnet, but it was cheering to see how many took note of even the humblest flowers and seemed to recognize them instantly. It was also worth a great deal to listen to the conversations of many middle-aged and elderly people, who paused to look at and talk about familiar flowers, reminding them of their early days in the country, before they came to live in the city. It cost a good deal to stage this beautiful, unique and much appreciated show, but A. C. Burrage remarked to me on the opening day that he felt amply repaid for all his labors when he viewed the delighted faces of 100 happy children. Incidentally, great credit must also be given Douglas Eccleston, Mr. Burrage's superintendent, for the able way in which he carried out such a huge undertaking.

I wish great cities other than Boston could have such exhibitions as this. It is something of a revelation to those accustomed to the rather tedious and hackneyed arrangements at flower shows, and if, in addition to pleasing multitudes of people, it will serve as a stimulus for the creation of better backgrounds and more natural and artistic staging at our shows, much will have been accomplished. And how much better it is to have such shows absolutely free, with many thousands present daily to enjoy them, rather than have a few hundreds daily to view them! All societies cannot afford to do this. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society can, and the more free flower shows we can have, the greater love of flowers will we instill in people's hearts and the more will we promote the cause of floriculture and horticulture.

The Results.

As a direct result of this exhibition, the Society for the Preservation of Native New England Plants came into existence under the auspices of the Garden Club of America and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Its direct object is to encourage and educate the people of New England to protect native plants and wild flowers from destruction, to cut them only with care and discrimination, leaving the rarer species to multiply themselves, and to spread a knowledge of their habits and cultural requirements throughout the community at large.

The new society plans to provide free lectures, hold exhibitions, plant wild flower sanctuaries and spread knowledge and love of wild plants, believing that, once people have learned about them, they will become their guardians and stop their rapid extermination. The annual membership fee is $1 and the sustaining membership fee is $5. Junior members, those under 18 years, pay no dues but ten cents for the price of a button. Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby is secretary and a large number of members have already been enrolled. The daily lectures on wild flowers and ferns, May 4 to 8, by Prof. M. L. Fernald, H. W. Faulkner, R. T. Jackson and Norman Taylor attracted crowded audiences and aroused great interest each day.

BLUE LACE FLOWER.

A flower first used in basket work a few years ago by a New York retailer has gradually spread in favor until many florists in various parts of the country are growing it. This is the blue lace flower, botanically known as Didiscus cærulea or Trachymene cærulea. The plant is an annual, attaining about two feet in height, and is grown from seeds, which are procurable from the leading houses. Notably successful in their culture of the flower, although this is the first season they have tried it, Zieger & Sons, Germantown, Philadelphia, give it treatment such as snapdragons receive, with especial care as to watering; the plants will damp off if kept too wet. Zieger & Sons planted two benches, one of which was in heaviest flower during December, January and February. The second bench, 4x80 feet, which did not flower through the winter, afforded a cut of not less than 2,000 blooms the Friday before Easter. Zieger & Sons have found these plants profitable at novelty prices, but express a doubt whether they would be worth growing otherwise.

The blue lace flower is useful for that added touch which some retailers are anxious to give their work, to lend distinction and to make for variety. The flowers are small and blue, and the foliage is rather hairy.

CLUB MEETINGS

CHICAGO FLORISTS' DANCE.

Evening of Pleasure.

A bevy of beauty, compounded of feminine pulchritude, cut flowers and pot plants, enlivened the May 4 meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club at the Randolph hotel. At this meeting the ladies and past-presidents were the guests of honor and all business was dispensed with. A delightful crowd of approximately 175 people was in attendance, and the younger set of the gathering swayed among the palms and ferns, with which the hall was beautifully decorated, to the tintinnabulations of the orchestra. Those who did not dance or felt a hesitancy to tripping the light fantastic spent the evening chatting and reminiscing with their friends and neighbors.

A special feature of the evening was the performance by two students of the noted Russian ballet dancer. This boy and girl were appropriately costumed and gave an excellent exhibition of their skill and ability in performing the difficult dance. The dancers were loudly applauded, and the little girl was given a large bouquet of Columbia roses as a fitting appreciation of the way in which she also executed the May dance.

Prize-Winners.

Another feature of the evening was the display of basket and pan arrangements for Mothers' day. Three prizes were offered and these were all awarded to Hans Jepsen, of Maywood. One of Mr. Jepsen's baskets consisted of an artistic arrangement of daisies, irises, statice and lilacs. One pan of sweet peas was also displayed by Mr. Jepsen and this pan consisted of the following varieties: Blue Bird, Zvolanek's Blue, Zvolanek's Rose, Snowflake, Mrs. Kerr, a seedling of Mr. Jepsen's, Glitters, Apricot and Sunburst.

A corsage parade was also staged and florists vied with one another to capture the prize. The first prize in this contest was taken by little Miss Lautenschlager, who marched proudly across the hall, amid loud applause, with her corsage, as if she were a grown-up. Miss Lautenschlager has not quite made her debut yet, and it is doubtful whether her daddy would permit her to use the vanity case, this being the first prize, at so early a period in her career, but Mr. Lautenschlager appeared to be much pleased with the entrée which the little miss made. The decision regarding the winner of the third prize was a little difficult, and it was necessary for Mr. Waters to call for a second voting, but this prize was finally carried off by a coy but beautiful maiden of perhaps twenty summers, who stepped blushing across the floor. The happy party ended about 11:30 p. m.

NEW YORK CLUB MEETS.

Quarantine Discussed.

A regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms, at the Engineering Societies' building, Monday evening, May 8, with an attendance of about 125 members. President Roman J. Irwin presided.

The meeting opened with the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, which were officially confirmed.

A resolution of sympathy with relatives in the death of Selah Van Riper, a member, was passed, and a copy ordered to be forwarded to the family.

Clifford Lowther, for the transportation committee, reported progress on the arrangements for the trip to the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City.

A. M. Henshaw, president of the Allied Florists' Trade Association, reported the results of the recent open meeting of that organization and gave figures as to contributions received for publicity purposes, which totaled $15,157.90, of which $10,764 had been used in advertising. He reviewed the expenditures and explained plans to consume the balance, which, of course, was expected to receive material additions from efforts now being put forth to increase it.

William Saville, chairman of the exhibition committee, announced that at the June meeting it was hoped to have extensive exhibits of peonies and irises.

James McHutchison made a short address bearing upon the forthcoming hearing before the federal horticultural board in regard to matters in connection with quarantine 37, and urged that as many interests as possible be represented at such hearing. The scope of the board, he said, seemed to him to be diverging into a course which practically amounted to a tariff. C. H. Totty also spoke on the matter, endorsing the points brought out in Mr. McHutchison's address. R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., spoke from the nurserymen's standpoint, as also did John Watson, of Princeton, who produced and read a lengthy paper embodying an argument in favor of the quarantine, which did not appear to meet the views of many present.

F. F. Rockwell, of the Seabrook

Chicago Florists' Club Holds Dance for Ladies and Past-Presidents at Hotel Randolph May 4.

Farms, Bridgeton, N. J., showed moving pictures of the Seabrook vegetable growing establishment and gave a running description of the pictures. The various details of the operation of this mammoth farm were admirably described and proved most interesting to the audience. He also showed views of P. M. Koster's grounds, in the same neighborhood, where conifers and other horticultural material were being produced in quantity.

Theodore Outerbridge, of Sunnylands, Bermuda, was present and made a short address covering problems he was called upon to meet in trading with the United States under present horticultural conditions.

New Members.

The following were elected to membership in the club: Joseph Hahn, 30 Barclay street, New York; Emil Bartels, 43 West Eighteenth street, New York; Morris Gross, 40 Crescent street, Long Island City; Frank Valentine, 165 East One Hundred and Tenth street,

New York; George A. Burnett, 92 Chambers street, New York; Walter H. Barnwell, 92 Chambers street, New York.

Mr. Bartels and Mr. Hahn, being present, were formally introduced to the club.

Considerable time was taken up with the presentation and adoption of amendments to the by-laws of the club, all taken up separately, and adopted on motions made by C. B. Weathered.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., exhibited a splendid vase of the new rose, Mrs. Warren G. Harding. T. A. Weston showed some hybrid tulips, the results of crosses between Darwin and early-flowering varieties. Both exhibits were awarded votes of thanks.

The secretary announced the death, since last meeting, of John I. Raynor, a life member of the club, and, on motion, the chair appointed P. J. Smith, F. H. Traendly and A. S. Burns, Jr., a committee to prepare memorial resolutions for presentation at the next meeting. J. H. P.

ABOUT ASTERS

GROWING ASTERS UNDER CLOTH.

Please give me any information you can in regard to growing asters under cloth shade. What is the best grade of muslin to use for this purpose, how should the supports be put up and at what time should the cloth be put on? J. P.—O.

You will understand, of course, that growing asters under cloth shades is a great deal like growing asters in the greenhouse, and there is always a question as to whether or not it pays. That depends, as with all other crops, on the kind of crop you get and the kind of market you get for the crop. There is no doubt that it has its advantages. In the first place, the cloth shades the plants from the heat of the sun, which is a big advantage with asters, and growing them under cloth has its advantages over growing them in the greenhouse, because the former method allows more circulation and freer evaporation, reducing to a minimum the danger of damping off and retarding the development of fungus, which is so liable to reduce the yield of a crop grown under glass.

The supports for the shade should be put up just as soon after the plants are established as convenient. Any width of bed may be covered and 1x2-inch lumber is heavy enough to use. We should advise using a frame around each bed any desired length and in width anywhere from twenty to fifty feet, with height sufficient to clear at least six feet, so that a man can walk under the frame for cultivation and for picking flowers.

The use of side muslins would depend on whether a grower is bothered by beetles or other insects. In some sections you cannot grow asters on account of beetles. If the muslin is put on early enough and side cloths are used, one will, of course, have protection from beetles, such as cannot be secured any other way. At any rate, the covering should be put on before the hot sun sets in; certainly before the buds appear.

Of course, only the best ground should be selected for anything of this kind. The ground should be well fertilized with thoroughly rotted stable manure—in no case should fresh stable manure be used—or enriched by a heavy application of sheep manure or pulverized poultry manure. The latter should be used more sparingly, on account of its high content of nitrate.

It does not pay to go to the expense of covering plants that will not return the maximum yield for the plants that are cultivated. If an upright type of plant is used, such as Perfection, it will permit much closer spacing than if the branching type is used, and a great many more flowers can be picked to the square foot. If I were growing asters under cover, I should use the Dutch bed system and set my plants about fifteen inches apart each way, with an 18-inch walk every six feet. If cross-pieces are used every four or five feet and the muslin sown together on the edges, the first length of the muslin being attached to the frame on one side, it can then be rolled over the entire bed like an awning and rolled back again at any time desired. Of course, it would have to be put on in overlapping sections as far as the length of the piece would be concerned, so that each twelve or fifteen feet of length could be rolled across separately.

James A. Wiebens.

ASTERS AFTER TOMATOES.

I am growing tomatoes in my greenhouses. This crop will be over about August 1. Could I grow asters or mums on solid beds after this crop is gone? If so, what temperature would the asters or the mums require? The soil here is quite rich. F. L. S.—Mass.

The early part of August is late to plant out chrysanthemums and expect much from them; a month earlier would give you pretty good results. You could lift strong plants of asters from the field and plant inside, and these would give you flowers from the middle of September onwards. White would be probably the best paying color, next to that pink and lavender. In the event of an early frost cutting off outdoor supplies, you could undoubtedly market asters at profitable prices; but if, on the other hand, the fall proves, as it now often does in your state, an open one, the asters would, I fear, not net you much money, especially as they would have to face competition in October from chrysanthemums, in addition to outdoor flowers, like asters, cosmos, dahlias, late gladioli, etc.

You could grow single violets or pansies; the former need not be planted until late in October. The pansies can go in a month earlier. These crops can be grown as cool as 40 to 42 degrees at night in winter. Given sufficient head room, sweet peas of the winter-flowering type could be started as soon as your tomatoes were cleared. They need 45 degrees at night and 50 degrees when flowering commences. Chrysanthemums and asters need cool culture, with an abundance of air. A temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night as fall advances is ample on cold nights, as a minimum. Tomatoes exhaust the soil a great deal and I should not attempt to plant another crop without forking in a liberal top-dressing of well rotted stable or cow manure. C. W.

BETTER ON ASTERS.

What is the best method of combating the black beetle which attacks asters from June onwards. We have tried various remedies, but find them worse than the disease. The sprays disfigure and burn the plants and blooms, and some, such as the whale oil spray preparations, add an evil smell. N. R.—Del.

The blister beetle, which feeds on the flowers of asters, is a voracious feeder, and if in large numbers can devour or ruin all flowers as fast as they show color. The insect is a good-sized beetle of a uniform black color, with a rather soft body, one-half inch or more in length. Of the poison sprays recommended to exterminate this pest, the best success has been reported with a spray containing three pounds of arsenate of lead in fifty gallons of water. Much injury, however, is caused by the beetles feeding to get the poison, and on small areas of asters it is best to knock the beetles off into a shallow pan of kerosene. If one goes over the plants each morning for a few days as the plants come into bloom, the insects can all be collected. With a little experience one becomes sufficiently skillful that little time is required even for a considerable number of plants.

Quay, Okla.—R. R. Nichols expects to go into the florists' business soon.

Cambridge, O.—Ten years ago Fred W. Arnold, a letter carrier, engaged in the florists' business, purchasing the stock and renting the Oldham greenhouses. Later he built a range of houses and went into debt for more than $20,000. Last week he paid the last dollar. He has 42,000 feet of glass and thirty acres of land.

OBITUARY

John H. Patterson.

John H. Patterson, founder and chairman of the board of directors of the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, O., whose machines are used by many florists, died suddenly May 7 aboard a train bound for Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. Patterson was stricken with a heart attack. He was seated in a chair chatting with his valet, his only companion, when he suddenly fell unconscious.

John Henry Patterson, who started life as a farmhand near Dayton, O., and established the biggest business of its kind in the world on the land that he had plowed as a boy, retired as president of the National Cash Register Co. July 16, 1921. At that time he was 77 years old, having been born December 13, 1844.

He did farm work, canal toll collecting, retailing of coal, mine operating, and finally went west to seek his fortune as a ranch and orchard owner before he hit upon the idea that made his career—manufacturing and selling cash registers.

After his venture as a ranchman in Colorado he returned to Dayton, where he set up a factory for making cash registers, employing at first thirteen men. Today the establishment employs hundreds and is looked upon as a model factory institution.

A daughter of Mr. Patterson is Mrs. Noble B. Judah, of Chicago. A son, Frederick Beck Patterson, is president of the National Cash Register Co.

Fred H. Hunter.

Fred H. Hunter, well known wholesale seed merchant of San Francisco, Cal., died at his home in that city May 3, after a long illness, leaving a wide circle of friends and associates throughout the country to mourn his loss. Mr. Hunter had been in business in San Francisco for the last ten years, under the firm style of the Hunter Seed Co., and previously was manager of the German Seed Co., at Los Angeles. Practically all his life he had been in close touch with the seed business and was generally considered one of the leading authorities on seeds in the west.

Besides taking a keen interest in business, he was a member of the San Francisco Commercial Club and San Francisco Olympic Club and was alert in all matters pertaining to the development of the city, as well as the special problems of the seed trade. Mr. Hunter was 45 years of age, the son of Dr. John W. Hunter and Henrietta E. Hunter, of Walla Walla, Wash. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Gladys M. Hunter, and two small children, Fred H. Hunter and Phyllis M. Hunter. He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. R. H. Harper and Miss Laura Hunter, of Spokane, Wash., and two brothers, Frank W. Hunter and William H. Hunter, of Walla Walla, M. M.

E. C. Matthes.

E. C. Matthes passed away at New Brunswick, N. J., Sunday, April 30, at noon.

The deceased was born at Sach, Germany, sixty-three years ago. He came to the United States in 1882 and was in the employ of a Mr. Marks, on Long Island. In 1886 the deceased started in business for himself and had a range of greenhouses until 1912. He then leased his land and purchased a 30-acre farm at Middlebush, N. J., where he specialized in the growing of roses and dahlias. Morning, noon and night found Mr. Matthes among his roses.

Three years ago his only daughter died at Middlebush, N. J. The deceased is survived by his wife and a niece.

USING LIMESTONE.

Is limestone of any value as a plant food or fertilizer in growing chrysanthemums, asters, snapdragons and Asparagus plumosus? I have several houses that I use only in the summer time, beginning about May 1. The soil has been in these houses for four years, but it has been allowed to freeze during the winter. Each spring I have mixed stable manure and some bone meal, but the soil now appears to be getting too light and arid. Will limestone dust give it more substance? Our soil is a clay loam. Is it a good thing to put the limestone in soil which is used for planting seeds to prevent the seedlings from rotting? What care is necessary to make the seedlings grow to good, stocky plants? Is there any better method of planting snapdragon seeds than in sand? I find that the seedlings do not damp off as they do when they are planted in the soil.

B. H.—Ia.

If your soil is acid and a good deal of green seum shows, a liberal dressing of limestone dust would prove advantageous. It will not add any body to your soil, and lime is not really a food at all, but lime releases plant food which is otherwise inert.

It also sweetens acid soil and helps to keep away soil pests. It is not a good policy to apply lime at the same time as the stable manure is applied, as in this case too much of the ammonia would be released into the atmosphere. After your manure, however, has been well incorporated with the soil, it will be all right to broadcast some of the limestone dust and rake it in. If your loam is of a clayey nature, the addition of lime should be distinctly beneficial.

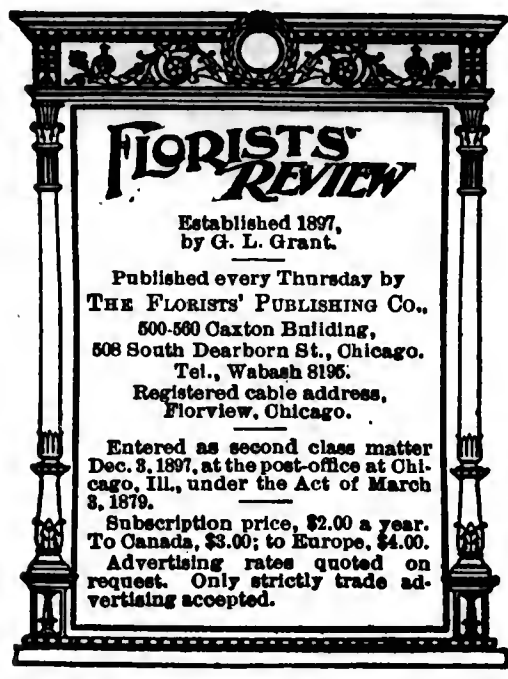

For seeds I would go lightly on the lime. Some leaf-mold procured from rotted leaves, with sand added, makes the best starting medium for snapdragon and other seeds. All flower seeds need only a light covering and small seeds do not need any covering at all. Begonias, gloxinias, tracheliums, petunias and mimuli are of this class. All seeds should be protected with glass, and papers should be laid over the glass to exclude the sun and prevent drying out. Great care is also necessary to prevent seed pans and flats from drying out.

C. W.

Daytona, Fla.—L. F. Darnell has sold the Daytona Cut Flower Shop to Curry the Florist, of Deland, Fla., who will conduct this store as a branch establishment. The store is closed after Mothers' day, until next November. Mr. Darnell reports the closing season's business as quite good, showing about a third increase over the previous year's, an especially good record in view of the fact that this has been an off season for Florida. Mr. Darnell will return next week to Cleveland, O., for the summer.

John H. Patterson.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

SEND the Editor a copy of your Mothers' day advertising. Thank you!

THE popularity and sale of any article is governed by its quality and price. Flowers are no exception to the rule. They must be good to be desirable; then the lower the price the more numerous the sales.

NEARLY any florist can keep a sound financial footing by declining the business of those who do not pay as bills are due. Limiting credits and overhead expense usually mean slow growth, but it will be substantial.

THOSE florists who, at the suggestion of The Review, have provided postcards to acknowledge all plant orders from brother tradesmen are well pleased with the results. Expressions of satisfaction are frequent. If you haven't such a printed card, get one now.

BUSH rose plants continue in strong demand. In the old days, when rose houses were replanted every year, the year-old plants went to the brush heap. Now, with better varieties and replanting being done only every second to fourth year, the plants have ready marketability.

AMONG the florists who complain of diminished profits are conspicuously those who greatly enlarged their organization and amplified their facilities during the boom period. Now they do not know how to reduce their heavy overhead expense in order to make a profit on the lower prices obtained for flowers.

"MANY of the letters received in response to Help Wanted advertisements in The Review at first reading strike a business man as funny," wrote a recent user of such advertising. "but a second thought shows they are mildly tragic, especially the replies from old men. Some of them boast of forty years' experience and some frankly confess they are more interested in peace and quiet than in money. The wonder to me is why they do not cultivate an acre of truck and hardy flowers for themselves, just where they happen to be. It would take little to start it and after the first year a real living could easily be made. It must be so easy to lean on others that after a time any sort of initiative becomes impossible."

WORRYING about a dull yesterday will not make a busy today. Thinking about the present and the future, not the past, is what makes the florists' business good.

MAKE it a point to clean up the accounts receivable before customers go away for the summer. You'll have to start now and keep closely at it to get the job done.

NURSERYMEN and seedsmen, in their respective efforts to secure wider publicity and greater sales, are searching for a slogan as good as "Say It with Flowers." Since we have this, let us make the most of it. Keep the slogan alive.

THAT QUARANTINE.

Ever since quarantine 37 was put into effect, large quantities of printers' ink have been devoted to its denunciation or defense and, now that the date, May 15, is approaching for the conference on the subject called by the federal horticultural board, the "arguments" for and against have increased to a point which has made it impossible to find place for all.

Viewing the quarantine from the angle of its avowed purpose of protecting America against insects and plant diseases not present or widely distributed in this country, The Review never has been able to see the need for an embargo or to believe that such need as may exist could not effectively be supplied by other means. No one who has read any considerable part of the matter published can have failed to note that the economic effects of the quarantine are the ones which influence the opinions of most of the writers, deny it as they may. Those whose business has been injured by the quarantine, and those who fear an extension of it may have that result, are vehement in denunciation of such curtailment of their liberty of action, while those who find themselves benefited financially by the prevention of European competition are becoming whole-hearted in their support of the quarantine. Thus the real merit of the case seems to be buried under its economic aspects.

The hearing at Washington May 15 can not fail to be of great interest, but it seems that more value may attach to the development of the present purposes of Dr. Marlatt and his associates than to the further exposition of the divergent views of those whose business has been or may be hurt or bettered.

EFFECT OF THE STRIKE.

After a month of strike, the coal miners and operators are still as stubbornly at odds as when the month began. The efforts of the mine workers' union to extend its power into non-union fields is meeting with powerful resistance, and the campaign seems to have been checked, temporarily at any rate. The strongest restriction on production of bituminous coal in non-union fields has been the lack of demand. Domestic movement is at a low ebb and what demand there is centers upon the steam sizes. The result of this has been a sharper advance of the general level of prices on slack and mine run, and decreases in the top figures upon sizes prepared for the domestic trade. A comparison of top quotations, high and low, for the last week in April with the preceding week showed that forty-three and one-third per cent of the prices were unchanged, that seven and one-third per cent showed reductions and forty-nine and one-third per cent showed advances.

At the present estimated rate of consumption, it is stated, reserves are being eaten into at the rate of 4,000,000 tons per week. On this basis, with no increase in the output from non-union fields, the stocks on hand would last until about the middle of August before they were reduced to a danger point. The total stock of coal on hand April 1 was given as 68,650,000 net tons. The report of the United States Chamber of Commerce is to the effect that stocks cannot drop below 20,000,000 tons without danger of a coal famine. The quantity which can be drawn from stocks before a serious situation develops is, therefore, 48,650,000 tons, sufficient to hold out twelve weeks at the present rate.

Presuming that greenhouse owners have on hand sufficient coal to carry them until summer, it appears that they may sit tight until July or August before worrying as to next winter's supply of coal. By that time, in all likelihood, some agreement will have been reached by the operators and unions.

DO WE WANT WILD FLOWERS?

In the spring and the fall of the year a few florists make use of wild flowers in basket arrangements and decorations for the sake of variety. They buy them from persons who bring in an armful or several basketfuls they have gathered. While some customers may appreciate the variety, a different sentiment moves others. How widespread is that sentiment is evident from the reprinting in newspapers in many places of the following editorial, originally in the Chicago Tribune:

A professional wild flower hunter, devastating the countryside for blossoms to sell to a florist, can do more damage than a dozen motor parties. It must be stopped.

The easiest and most immediate corrective measure would be for the public to refuse to buy wild flowers from a florist. That would kill the market immediately and save the flowers.

Even better—and perhaps this may follow—would be legislation making it as much a crime to offer wild flowers for sale as to offer wild game for sale. Our flowers are confronted by the same unorganized but devastating danger as our wild ducks and prairie chickens and partridges. Preservation of floral life is as important to many as preservation of bird life. Since its destruction is becoming commercialized drastic steps are needed to save it.

YES, IT EVIDENTLY PAYS.

There is a frequently repeated saying that "it pays to advertise." Of course, it makes some difference where and how one advertises, but when the advertisement is of a seasonable article at a fair price and appears in the Classified section of The Review it not only pays to advertise, but it frequently pays handsomely; yes, even splendidly. Like this:

Please discontinue our petunia ad in The Review, as the one insertion sold 10,000 plants.—J. Sylvester, Oconto, Wis., May 4, 1922.

To get the full force of the above, it is necessary to consider that the plants were advertised at 6 cents each, so that the 10,000 sold brought $600. The advertisement cost $1.08.

The Market.

A distinct improvement in market conditions began to manifest itself May 6 and not only did prices improve, but clearances were better than for some time; the present week sees a continuation of improved conditions. There has been no cessation in buying by retailers during the slump period, but heavy crops of various spring flowers clogged the markets. It is at these times that publicity advising the general public that flowers are cheaper would be truly effective. No doubt, in time there will be campaigns properly financed in all leading flower-growing and distributing centers to cover this.

The coming Mothers' day has acted as a tonic and has been responsible for much of the improvement noted. Roses are in large supply and, in consequence, have not advanced like carnations. Roses are, however, holding their own and moving a little better than they did a week ago. Lack of excessive heat has kept quality good. Carnations are moving up and as much as $15 per hundred is proposed for the end of the week. The sharp advance in this flower is the worst feature of the Mothers' day trade. Growers and retailers are doing what they can to remedy it, and on all hands buyers are urged to purchase white and colored flowers rather than carnations only. The occasional sharp advances in carnations hurts their sale at other periods and is responsible for a growing inclination not to buy them at all. It is hard to convince people that these swift advances are necessary.

Sweet peas are still much overdone and values are low, $1.50 per hundred being top price for fancy stock. Callas and Easter lilies are down in the dumps. If the continued flood of snapdragons could only have been delayed until Memorial day, how much better it would be for the growers! Marguerites are arriving in shoals and prices are quite low. There are still some daffodils and tulips and small lots of irises. Such gladioli as Mrs. Francis King and America are arriving in fair numbers, but are not selling well.

Gypsophila elegans is in good supply and demand. Delphiniums are good. A limited number only go to the wholesale markets, most being shipped directly to the retailers. Some nice salpiglossis and other annuals are coming in. Of Cattleya Mossiae there is now an ample supply, as well as some odontiodas, odontoglossums and Dendrobium chrysotoxum. Fair supplies of both gardenias and valley are coming in. A good assortment of pot plants is available, prominent being hydrangeas, calceolarias and show pelargoniums.

Various Notes.

At Penn's last week was noted a fine assortment of flowering plants, which included tuberous-rooted begonias, gloxinias, show pelargoniums, Calceolarias Stewartii and Lymanii, azaleas and fuchsias. Business here continues extremely good. Great preparations are being made for the Memorial day trade.

The great show of native ferns and flowers staged by Albert C. Burrage for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was the chief local event of horticultural interest last week. It attracted many thousands of visitors, including a considerable number from outside the state. The forcing of so many varieties of native flowers in Mr. Burrage's greenhouses proved to be no simple matter. Some late blooms refused to respond at all, while others came along too quickly. It was surprising to see so much material flowering far ahead of its natural time. The show has given a great incentive to wild flower preservation, and one of the first flower sanctuaries will be at the Arnold Arboretum, the woodlands of which will prove ideal spots for naturalization of many plants, and here they will be well protected by officials and police.

Prof. H. F. Tompson, professor of market gardening at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, and in charge of the Lexington experiment station, will address the Gardeners' and Florists' Club May 16 on vegetable growing.

April gave us a deficiency of a little over four inches of rain, but our serious drought ended May 4 and 5, when a 2-day rainstorm gave us just four inches of rain, put out the numerous forest fires raging and wonderfully improved vegetation.

The Chestnut Hill Garden Society will hold its annual flower show during the week of May 20 in tents on the grounds of E. B. Dane, Chestnut Hill, and a grand exhibition is assured from the many estates in Brookline and Chestnut Hill.

John Eisemann, well known as the Beacon Florist, received an order by wireless from Colonel W. A. Gaston, senior member of the firm of which the late Richard M. Saltonstall was a member, asking Mr. Eisemann to make the finest presentable casket cover for his deceased friend. Mr. Gaston sailed for Europe two days before Mr. Saltonstall died and was advised by wireless of his death and at once sent a message to Mr. Eisemann. The casket cover was beautifully made of cattleyas, delphiniums, valley and adiantum. Mr. Eisemann had charge of the flowers at the funeral and says he never saw such a wealth of flowers. Several leading Boston retailers had three truckloads each of designs and this in spite of all obituary notices carrying the request, "Please omit flowers."

John Curley, the esteemed salesman and grower for Fred W. Holbrow, of Dorchester, is proud of the arrival of a baby girl. This makes number seven. Maurice Saunders, of the Symphony Flower Shop, is also passing cigars over the arrival of a son and heir.

Daylight saving started here April 30 and will continue until the end of September. About eighty per cent of the population of New England have adopted "summer time" and a greater part of the objection to it seems to have passed away; at least, few people now criticize the change, even in the rural districts.

Boston's first radio exhibition opened in Mechanics' building, May 3, and florists were again called upon for much decorative material for the numerous booths. The more exhibitions held of this kind the better it is for the florists' trade.

J. T. Butterworth's Cattleya Mossiae are now in fine crop, that beautiful variety, Mrs. J. T. Butterworth, standing out above all others in excellence. The grand collection of miltonias is now coming into flower and will soon make a notable display. Other orchids flowering well at this time are Dendrobium chrysotoxum, odontiodas and odontoglossums.

The Boston Traveler remarks: "The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la, are always objects of much interest, but this year's early importations from Britain included one item of more than usual moment, that of the Lady Astor."

John Eisemann, of the Beacon Flower Shop, is making tremendous preparations for the Memorial day trade and has for a long time been getting thousands of magnolia and other wreaths ready. A large storehouse was specially engaged to accommodate these, and orders are already pouring in.

At Carbone's, in addition to the big line of flowers and plants, a special feature is now being made of garden furniture, vases, sun dials, bird baths and numerous other accessories for use in Italian and other formal gardens; a heavy business in these is being done.

The coming quarantine hearing in Washington May 15 is proving of much interest to many local growers, some of whom will attend the hearing. All are hoping that the hitherto unbending, stiff-backed policy of the federal horticultural board will be changed, so that growers can import some stock much needed. W. N. C.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The strength the market showed at the beginning of last week was neither pronounced nor persistent; it faded out after a day or two. The supply of flowers was not large, but it was more than adequate. The conditions were not similar in all the wholesale houses, some of them reporting light receipts and fair daily clearances of all good flowers, only low grades being slow to move, while others reported rather larger receipts and a daily carry-over. Nobody said business was bad, but everybody said it might easily have been better.

A few warm days, the first of the season, had a pronounced effect on the quality of stock. Many open roses were seen, together with soft carnations and sweet peas. There were fears that the warm weather, if long continued, would force the Mothers' day supply into the market too soon and create a scarcity at the time of the big demand, but gradually the fear of shortage at the end of the present week has passed.

Mothers' day orders have been arriving in a perfect flood. There now is no question of the demand; it already has made itself felt. Nor is there question of supply; good carnations will be short of the needs of the week, but there are likely to be a good many too old or poor to be safe to ship and other flowers will be moderately plentiful. There will be good cuts of roses and the supply of peonies will be much larger than at any previous Mothers' day. The peony will go a long way toward making up for the shortage of carnations. The peony is big, showy, fresh and fragrant; that the people like it is amply demonstrated.

The orders received by the larger wholesale houses are notable for their size as well as for their number. Carnations lead in demand, followed by roses, peonies and sweet peas. These could be sold, it seems, in almost unlimited numbers, but the full success of the day will depend on the ability to make clean sales on snapdragons, of which there is a large supply; on Darwin tulips

Did you ever hear of a caliscope or thermograph? So far as known, the first outfit ever installed in a greenhouse establishment has just been put to work in the range of Stielow Bros., at Niles Center. The names are formidable, but the apparatus is simple. It is merely an equipment by the use of which the fireman in the boiler shed ascertains the exact temperature in any of the fourteen greenhouses in the range. He needs only to step to the instrument on the wall to do it. The thermoscopes in connection with the thermometers in the greenhouses are electrically connected by wire with the caliscope in the boiler room. If the fireman wants to know the temperature in house No. 11 on any cold winter night when the outside temperature is falling fast, he does not need to run half a mile, more or less, to find out and to get back on his job. All he has to do is to move the sliding arm of the caliscope across the contact points, which are numbered the same as the houses, to No. 11. Letting it rest there a moment, the caliscope hand indicates the temperature at the moment in the house in question. To read the temperature in each of Stielow's fourteen houses takes less than a minute and the readings may be repeated as frequently as desired.

The caliscope outfit was installed for Stielow Bros. by the American Teletherm Co., 1869 East Fifty-fifth street, Cleveland, O. Several other growers who have seen it are thinking of putting it in.

Various Notes.

The peony is a precarious crop, subject to many vicissitudes, but there now are such extensive plantations that a full cut, if one ever is had, will bury the market, which is preliminary to reporting that the Gould Co., which at first estimated its crop at Halls, Tenn., at 30,000 dozens, now expects this week's shipments to be only 17,000 dozens.

As treasurer of the Allied Florists' Association, W. J. Smyth recently sent checks for $1,564.38 to the S. A. F. publicity committee, representing one-fourth the local collections for publicity. At the same time Mr. Smyth sent his personal check for $50 to show his interest in the national campaign. He has a nation-wide business in telegraph delivery orders.

A. J. Zech is waiting for the close of the regular bowling season, after which he will call a meeting of members of the trade now rolling in various tournaments and organize a team to represent Chicago at the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City in August. All the indications are that Chicago will send a large delegation to this convention.

A 3-acre tract of land at Devon and Caldwell avenues was dedicated May 6 in commemoration of the late Peter Reinberg, former florist and president of the board of county commissioners, under the auspices of President Daniel Ryan and members of the Forest Preserve commission. A lasting memorial will be erected there soon, Mr. Ryan said.

It cost Dr. C. D. Blake $25 for driving his golf ball into the premises of Richard F. Gloede, greenhouse owner, 1419 Central street, Evanston. Dr. Blake was assessed this fine by Justice Max Witkower on a charge of assault and battery brought by Frank Gloede, son of the florist, who alleged that when the doctor came to get the ball he struck him on the leg with a golf club. The doctor said he found the boy had the ball and offered him 50 cents for it, but the boy turned and ran.

The A. B. C. had a gladiolus show in its store last week. The blooms were from W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, Mo., to whom the A. B. C. had supplied the bulbs some time ago. They were flowered under glass. Only comparatively new varieties were shown. Many visitors favored Arizona, Pink Beauty and, of course, Marechal Foeh, but White Giant and L'Immaeulee were outstanding varieties. John P. Degnan thinks L'Immaeulee soon will displace Chicago White.

May 6 C. H. Bookedis opened his new store at 944 North Michigan avenue, opposite the Drake hotel, where he formerly was in charge of the Mangel store. Although not fully settled, as the building is not completed, Mr. Bookedis has an attractive layout and business started satisfactorily the moment he had his show windows dressed. The store fronts on the heavily traveled automobile drive and is the only flower store so fronting between George Wienhoeber's place, at Washington street, and the Briggs Floral Co., at Sheridan road and Broadway, though Mangel maintains special windows on the Drake corner. Mr. Bookedis has a 10-year lease, and it recently was reported that the term rental is $55,000.

Old heads in the business sometimes have difficulty in realizing the passage of time, but anyone who knew the establishment of Wussow Bros., at 445 West Eightieth street, seeing it now will realize the flight of time. The father of the firm settled there in 1872. The property now belongs to his widow, but the sons operated it for some years. The place is absolutely empty now and the range of glass is falling into decay.

George Fisher & Bro., whose store at 183 North Wabash avenue usually is made attractive by the cheerful tinkle of the cash register, did its full share to start the Mothers' day market off in good shape by heavy purchases May 8. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America are holding their fifth biennial meeting here this week. The opening session was at the huge Carmen's hall. The Fisher firm had the decorations and supplied several great set pieces and a dozen or more big baskets of flowers from subsidiary organizations, some of them representing as much as $75 each. Joseph Ziska & Son made the special wire frames for the big designs. About 10,000 flowers were used for the opening day. Later the entire display was moved to Medinah Temple, where the decorations will be maintained all this week.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has rented one of the big rooms of the Western Cold Storage Warehouse for two months and will handle practically all its peonies there. Incoming shipments will go direct to the warehouse and outgoing shipments will be dispatched from there, only small lots for inclusion with miscellaneous orders and the stock for city sales being sent to the store. Manager Klingsporn figures that the peony will dominate the market from now until the first week in July.

The five trucks of Mearz Bros., 1581 Ogden avenue, scarcely ever are idle. These are the enterprising gentlemen who took over the business of C. H. Fisk, Inc. Of their five machines, one is a Stutz, one a Studebaker, two are Fords and one is a White, said to be one of the first of that make sold to any Chicago florist. It has been in daily operation since 1911, except for a few days for overhauling each winter. It has made its fifty or sixty miles a day, Sundays and all, and has outlasted several other cars. Its total mileage now is estimated above 225,000.

Dr. Knapp, whose peony plantation at Evansville has been famous for years, is this season making the first cut of consequence from the new place in Tennessee. Years ago the idea of southern Indiana plantations was to make Memorial day. Now the idea is to plant still farther south to make Mothers' day. Miss O. A. Tonner says the Tennessee stock is maintaining Dr. Knapp's reputation for quality.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report the arrival of the first candidum lilies of the season, all the way from Texas.

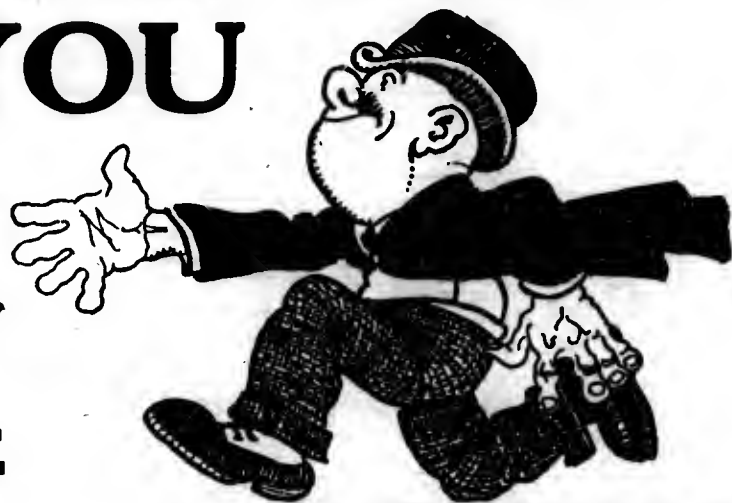

Efforts to put out flowers of iris on this market from California have met with varying success. Some small shipments coming through nicely, larger ones have been tried and the stock heated in transit.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. is having an excellent season and William Wienhoeber, who personally looks after the buying, is continuously scouring the market for its finest products. E. Wienhoeber, who is the veteran among Chicago retailers, rarely misses a day at the store.

On his way home from the meeting of the board of directors of the F. T. D., at Detroit, Karl P. Baum stopped in Chicago for a day on the market. Mr. Baum talks of experimenting with the shipment of magnolia blooms to this and other northern cities for use as a novelty in season.

A. Brown, who for some time has been city salesman in the cut flower department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., has resigned to go into the retail business for himself at Hammond, Ind.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Towards the end of last week the market picked up to some extent. The improvement was due, however, to an easing up in the supply rather than to an increased demand, but, then, this might generally describe changes for the better in the New York market. Bulbous material is largely finished; only late tulips and a few narcissi, among them poeticus, are arriving. Parrot and Darwin tulips, mostly outdoor-grown, represent about the last of the cut.

Roses have shortened a little in supply and, with the exception of American Beauty, prices have advanced. Beauty is in somewhat oversupply and the price range is $15 to $40 per hundred for specials, with clearances hard at that. Hybrid teas all along the line show advanced prices over the previous week. Some fine Crusader is coming in, and the fact that this variety lacks fragrance may be well regretted.

Carnations are in fair supply and prices are stronger, $8 per hundred being now the price for tops. White varieties are somewhat scarce, but this is a usual condition for the days preceding Mothers' day.

Cattleyas are plentiful—too plentiful for the demand, which is smaller than might be expected for the time of year. Top grades bring $75 per hundred; other grades are down to $25 per hundred and even lower. The supply of gigas is increasing, and a considerable number of hybrids come in, the best moving at $1 per flower.

There is no dearth of white lilies and sales drag at $12 to $20 per hundred. Lily of the valley is plentiful, and much frame-grown stock is coming in; glass-grown stock moves rather slowly at about $2 to $8 per hundred, the higher figure for selected stock.

Sweet peas continue abundant, and remunerative prices are hard to realize. The top price is $1 per hundred, and unusually fine stock moves at this figure. Passable grades can be had at 50 cents per hundred.

The supply of miscellaneous flowers is increasing. Snapdragon is arriving in great quantity, and moves slowly at 35 cents to $1.50 per bunch. Blue lace flowers are available in larger quantity than ever before, and are bought largely for window display, due to their lasting quality. Stocks are in much larger supply, and some fine quality among arrivals is seen; they move

for Memorial Day

The largest Jessamine Farm in the U. S.

While you are reading this we are picking and packing Buds—so let your orders come—you are sure to get them.

The unusually warm and humid atmospheric conditions of the past 10 days have developed an abnormal growth in the buds, and Cape Jessamines have started moving several days earlier than we had previously predicted. However, not more than 60% of the crop will be ready by May 30th.

Our Buds are fine; we believe in cultivation and fertilization, which costs money, but the extra quality more than repays it. "Squirrel ear" leaves and knobby buds do not go with us. If you have never bought of us, all we ask is a trial shipment.

We ship anywhere in the U. S.; time arrivals and guarantee A-1 stock. No order too large for us. Place your order where the supply is large, but to avoid the rush, order early. We are booking orders daily. Special attention given regular orders.

Business continues to be satisfactory. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, but there is no surplus, but flowers are of good quality and the outlook for Mothers' day is encouraging. Carnations are plentiful at this writing. Roses are in big supply and are being offered in many cases at attractive prices to clear. Columbia, Butterfly and Premier are exceptionally good just now. Sweet peas are in large supply and sell well. Violets are over for this season. Snapdragons are fairly plentiful, of good quality and sell well. Lilies are in good supply and clear easily. Calendulas are good and are in big demand. Myosotis, stocks, bachelor's buttons, daisies and lupines are seen in small offerings. Bulbous stock is shortening up now, but a good quantity of jonquils is seen daily.

100,000 PEONIES 100,000

Will be fresh cut in bud every day. Best commercial varieties. Will sell all or part to responsible parties. Price, reasonable. Twenty miles west of Kansas City. Cutting just started.

H. H. KERN, Bonner Springs, Kan.

Outdoor bulbous stock is making a good showing. Valley, orchids and gardenias are receiving a larger demand; they are of good quality. Green goods of all kinds are fairly plentiful.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The first week in May was poor, with a slight improvement at the close. There was little demand and prices were low and unsteady. Outdoor lilac continued to have a depressing effect on indoor flowers. Roses were plentiful and cheap. There is a heavy surplus of pink snapdragons. More variety in color would be desirable, while more snapdragons in winter and fewer now would be most helpful of all.

Sweet peas are declining. There are fewer nice bunches and more short-stemmed bunches. A few from frames or cold houses are welcome. Southern gladioli are coming in more freely. They are not selling so well as in former years, owing probably to the unusually heavy supply of roses and of snapdragons. Outdoor valley is good enough to make indoor valley feel the competition on this dull market. Cattleyas have declined in price.

Carnations are holding their own as well as, if not a little better than, anything else, when they are good. Poor carnations are of no account. Calla lilies are awfully plentiful; their season is drawing to a close. Easter lilies continue to be low in price. There are a good many Darwin tulips. They are decidedly decorative. Blossoms have been quite active. Southern peonies have come; they sell slowly.

Visits.

Charles Russell, of the Jones-Russell Co., of Cleveland, O., was in town Saturday morning, May 6. Mr. Russell called on W. B. Taber and on Mrs. Drew-Baer, at the London Flower Shop; on A. B. Cartledge and on J. Liddon Pennoek, of Pennoek Bros. At Twelfth and Chestnut street he met George Rauseh. Mr. Rauseh said business was dull, dull as ditch water—only $2, $3 and an occasional $5 order. Now, if a $15 customer came in, the camera man was at once put to work. There was something in Mr. Rauseh's blithe and cheery manner that made Mr. Russell wonder whether this was meant in a Pickwickian sense. So, as he was going there anyhow, he just dropped in to see. There he found the entire force working just as hard as it could go. The orders being filled were marked $10, $5, $15, $7.50, $15, $10, while many vases full of flowers stood awaiting their turn. Inquiry elicited the fact that there was a tea on in obscure somewhere.

Grasping the Opportunity.

The committee appointed by President Campbell at the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, held at the Adelphia May 2, to consider a plan for co-operation with the American Legion and Woman's Auxiliary in fostering a general observance of Mothers' day in sending and wearing flowers, met at 221 South Broad street Friday, May 5. Those present were Alfred M. Campbell, Ralph E. Faust, Charles Henry Fox, Charles H. Grakelow, William K. Harris, James W. Heacock, Robert Kift, Mark P. Mills, Arthur A. Niessen and Edward Reid, chairman.

A thorough discussion of the matter brought out the following facts: Flowers will sell this Mothers' day whether the florists coöperate with the Legion and the Auxiliary or not. The time to accept an invitation is when it is given. The custom of using flowers at Mothers' day can now be fixed as at Easter. It will benefit every florist, not the growers of white carnations only, but even the geranium growers. It was decided to accept the offer. How? By advertising in all the papers, exactly as the Legion has indicated. Mr. Fox was instructed to get in touch with the American Legion officials in the city at once. The next step was to raise money to pay for the advertising. Each committeeman was assigned his field to canvass and work was immediately commenced.

Mr. Reid said that $600 had been raised among just a few persons and when the project was known and understood a generous subscription was assured. He thought it a great opportunity for promoting their business that should be eagerly seized by all.

In three days $2,000 was raised. It will be expended on newspaper advertising; on 5,000 store show cards; on sending flowers to the gold-star war mothers and to disabled soldiers.

The Market.

This market was exceedingly quiet last week. Weather conditions were good, bringing in stock from every corner, both indoor and outdoor.

Gladioli have made their first appearance, some arriving from the south and others being home-grown. The home-grown ones, of course, are far superior to the southern ones and bring $12.50 per hundred, while the others can be had at $6 to $8 per hundred.

Roses are slowing up slightly, but there are plenty to supply all needs. Carnations hold their own and clean up a trifle better than any other flower. They are selling at $4 to $5 per hundred.

Sweet peas have seen better days, and there are only enough sold to supply the trade daily. Consequently, many are left in the wholesale houses when the day is done. Snapdragons show the pay the unnecessary cost of operation—these are contained in the report of the House committee on labor in a bill to establish a commission to inquire into labor conditions in the coal industry.

The report states that the committee on labor attempted to obtain all-important facts relating to the coal industry with special regard to the cost of production and the labor cost of production, together with working and living conditions of the employee, the retail and wholesale price of coal, its transportation, the profit made by the producer and various middlemen, and other matters which had a direct bearing upon the wages of employees in coal mines and the occasion for industrial disputes, including the strike in the mining fields now in existence.

The committee sought information from the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Mines, the Department of Labor Statistics, the Bureau of the Census, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the statisticians of the United Mine Workers of America and the National Coal Operators' Association. It early developed that little authentic, definite information could be obtained from any source.

The proposed commission would consist of ten members, as follows: The directors of the Geological Survey, Bureau of Mines and Bureau of the Census, the commissioner of labor statistics, two members representing the public, two members representing the miners, and two members representing the operators. The bill sets out as the purpose of the agency the right of Congress to obtain information as a basis for legislation to (a) settle industrial disputes in and to prevent the overdevelopment of the coal industry; (b) to stabilize such industry and levy taxes in respect thereto; (c) to regulate commerce in coal among the several states and with foreign nations; (d) to provide a coal supply for the maintenance of the navy and the merchant marine, and (e) to protect the coal supply for the District of Columbia, and forts, magazines, arsenals, shipyards and other public buildings of the United States outside of the District of Columbia.

The agency created has no administrative power except to obtain facts, does not purport to regulate, control or influence the industry in any way, and in any event can not fall within the class of cases where regulation is denied the federal government to matters purely intrastate.

FLORISTS AS WATER CONSUMERS.

Laying Mains and Supplying Water.

In a recent case before it the New Jersey court of chancery had occasion to discuss several important legal phases of the relationship which exists between the florist and a water company which supplies premises (Millville Improvement Co. vs. Millville Water Co., 113 Atlantic Reporter 516). Discussing various matters concerning right to refuse service because a former occupant of the premises has failed to pay his bill, right of the company to adopt rules governing consumers, etc., the court says, in part:

"It is well recognized that a water company, though charged with the public duty of furnishing water to all of the inhabitants without discrimination, may adopt reasonable rules for the conduct of its business and the operation of its plant, and such rules, so far as they affect its patrons, are binding on them, and may be enforced, even to the extent of denying water to those who refuse to comply with them. Such power is not dependent upon any express legislative authority; it is incident to a corporation of that nature. . . . This right of reasonable regulation is uniformly held to include the right to shut off the water supply of delinquents, and also the right to require consumers to pay water rents for a reasonable time in advance. . . . Various periods for advance payments have been held reasonable, but in Rockland Water Co. vs. Adams, 84 Me. 472, 24 Atl. 840, 30 Am. St. Rep. 368, one year was held an unreasonable period. In all such cases it is to be assumed that the regulation includes a right of the patron to a return of such part of the advance payment as is unearned by reason of the service being discontinued before the end of the period for which an advance payment has been made.

Fulfilling Its Contract.

"But although the right of a water company to adopt and enforce reasonable rules for the conduct of its business and operation of its plant is thus uniformly recognized, such rules, to meet the requirements of reasonable regulations, are necessarily subordinated to the recognized public duty of corporations of that nature touching uniformity and universality of service; that is, the public duty of corporations of that nature to recognize and respect the paramount right of all citizens, similarly situated and appropriately circumstanced, to receive water, and to receive it on the same terms. Consistently with that duty, it is clear that service of water cannot be denied to a tenant whose premises are adequately equipped to receive such service and who is willing to pay for it.

"That conclusion is rendered manifest by a more detailed consideration of the relations of a water company to its patrons. In the absence of legislative authority, there is no lien on the real estate for water supplied to either an owner or a tenant; the water is supplied on the credit of the patron. Turner vs. Revere Water Co., 171 Mass. 329, 50 N. E. 634, 40 L. R. A. 657, 68 Am. St. Rep. 432; State vs. Albuquerque Water Supply Co., supra. In the cases last cited it is also held to be an unreasonable regulation to deny water to an owner or occupant of a building because of a default of a prior owner or prior occupant, though reasonable to deny water to a delinquent patron. This personal nature of the service and the rights of all citizens to its enjoyment necessarily exclude the notion that a water company can deny service to a tenant whose landlord refuses to guarantee payment for such service.

"Nor is there, as between a landlord and his tenant, any liability on the part of the landlord to pay for water supplied to the premises in the absence of express or implied agreement between them to that effect. Water pipes and fixtures are appurtenances of a building and the use of them passes to a tenant. But the water is a commodity in no way attached to the realty, and is not the property of the landlord; it is to be furnished at a price to such person as is entitled to receive it and desires to purchase it. Sheldon v. Hamilton, 22 R. I. 230, 47 Atl. 316, 84 Am. St. Rep. 839. As between the water company and the tenant who is entitled to receive water service and whose premises are properly equipped for such service, it has been specifically held that the public duty of the water company to serve patrons without discrimination, denies to such company the right to refuse to supply such tenant or to impose a condition that the landlord become responsible for the charges.

Tenant's Rights.

"The general rule which appears to be recognized by practically all the authorities on the general subject may be said to be that, in the absence of legislation to the contrary, a tenant is privileged to contract for water service to the same extent as the owner of the property, and that any restriction upon or discrimination against that right of a tenant is inconsistent with the public duties imposed upon a water company and accordingly unlawful; and that, in the absence of legislation creating a lien on the real estate for water service or other legislation of like effect, no person can be denied service because of delinquency of a prior owner or tenant. No legislation in this state of the nature suggested has been brought to the attention of the court.

"It appears to be held with entire uniformity of decisions that, in the absence of statutory regulation to the contrary, it is the duty of a water company to lay water mains and all laterals, fixtures and connections in such manner that connections may be made with properties at the boundary lines between streets and alleys and private lots; that it is not the duty or privilege of a water company to enter upon private property in the construction of its system beyond that boundary line, and is not the duty or right of a citizen to lay pipes in the street or beyond the boundary referred to. . . . Accordingly, the owners and tenants of a building must accept entire responsibility for the suitable equipment of such buildings to receive reasonable service.

"But where a building is supplied with water through a single tap, and separate parts of the building are oc-sible to bolt to the outside of these posts strips 2x4 scantling, to which the siding may be nailed against the 4-inch sides. Between the iron posts two 2x4-inch posts will be required to stiffen the walls. These may be set with the thin edge to the siding. The boiler tubes should be about three feet in the ground and should be set in concrete. Ordinary block or patent siding may be used for the walls. Under the edge of this there should be a 6-inch footing course of concrete, into which the false intermediate posts should be set about two inches.

The tops of all of the wooden posts in the side walls should be cut so that they will have a one-third pitch. Upon these fasten a 2x6-inch plate. The posts in the end walls should be cut off square.

For rafters use yellow pine or cypress 2x4-inch pieces, setting them so that they will be three feet from centers. Use a 2x6-inch piece for the ridge, cutting the upper ends of the rafters against it. At the lower end the rafters may be halved on to the plates either from above or below. In the former case 2x2-inch strips should be fastened to the plates under the lower ends of the sashes to close the openings. Every other sash should be fastened in place and the intermediate sash should be hinged either at the top, bottom or side.

There should be a permanent rafter for the frame at each end of the house and vertical sashbars should run from the plate to the rafter. A door frame may be set in each of the end walls.

Benches, three and one-half feet wide, should be constructed around the walls at the height of thirty-six inches. There should be a space of two inches between the back side of the beds and the walls.

The amount of radiation required for these houses depends upon the plants to be propagated and the temperatures desired. For 50 degrees, with a bottom heat of 10 degrees, we would use one 2-inch flow pipe on each side wall plate, with two 1½-inch returns under each of

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Business has again been poor and stock is piling up. Shipping fell off suddenly for some reason after Easter and has not picked up since. The warmer weather has brought along stock of all kinds rapidly. Good Spanish irises, I. tingiana and tulips cleaned up fairly well, but outside of these there was little doing in bulbous stock. Roses cleaned up nicely and carnations, both indoor and outdoor, sold fairly well, though prices in all cases are away down. Orchids are scarce, but there is not a big demand. Valley is plentiful and sells well. Sweet peas, baby roses and other small flowers are all over-plentiful, especially yellow daisies, which were never better in quality, or sold worse. Greens are more plentiful.

Various Notes.

Sidney Wiffin, formerly of Des Plaines, Ill., who has been with F. R. Hills since coming to Los Angeles, has joined the force of Walter Armacost & Co., Sawtelle. His brother, Arthur, has been with Mr. Armacost for some time and is living at Los Angeles, but both will now live at Sawtelle.

Fred Howard, Roy F. Wilcox and Fred Hooper, foreman of the glass department at the nursery of Howard & Smith, left last week for a ten days' fishing and rest trip to Sespe Hot Springs, Mr. Howard driving the party to Fillmore. From here the men pack into the mountains about twenty-five miles. All are busy men, and the recreation will doubtless benefit them.

C. Green is starting to build a new greenhouse, 36x150 feet, at his Montebello nursery. He has disposed of his lease on the land at the west end of Montebello to the Roy F. Wilcox Co. and from now on will concentrate all of his energies on his home place.

H. E. Jaeger, of the Orchid, at Pasadena, has been dangerously ill with the "flu," also his wife and children, but all are now well along the road to recovery.

George J. Hall has just returned from a business trip through Arizona and to San Francisco. He reports a good time and called on many in the trade, including his old friend and co-worker, Bert Harris, for several years connected with the trade in Los Angeles and now running a retail store in Oakland.

A. A. Farley and his father, who some time ago sold out the Denison Greenhouses, at Denison, Texas, is now in the business of growing bulbous and other stock for cut flowers at Downey, a small city a few miles southeast of Los Angeles.

T. D. Robertson, of Fullerton, has purchased another 3-acre tract of land in a section which proved frostless during the recent severe winter. He had previously leased this land, and consequently its possibilities for tender stock are already proven.

Angelo Tassano, his brother, Dominic, and their families are taking a trip to Italy this summer. The portion of the Artesia nurseries under glass and close cultivation will be leased temporarily to Gorini Bros., and G. Gorini will be located in Mr. Tassano's home on Stephenson avenue. Tassano Bros. have bought another 10-acre tract adjoining their Artesia land and this will be put under close cultivation on their return.

H. N. Gage is building three new greenhouses, each 26x200 feet, at his Montebello nursery.

C. Brazee reports a most successful season with his bulbous stock. His new place on the Harbor boulevard is now in fine shape and proving all that could be desired. Mr. Brazee says that he has over a carload of bulbs on order for next year.

At the establishment of W. Armacost & Co., Sawtelle, a new garage to take care of fourteen cars is being built and thoroughly equipped for repairs of every kind to be done on the place. The store is most attractive now with the immense number of baskets shown. F. Royston is at the springs up in the San Jacinto mountains.

The staff of the E. C. Amling Co. is busy preparing statice and other everlasting wreaths. H. R. R.

COTTAGE GARDENS WINS SUITS.

Two suits brought by the executor of the estate of Charles Willis Ward to foreclose two mortgages, each for the sum of $200,000, on property of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, at Eureka, Cal., have been decided in favor of the defendant. The suits were contested vigorously by the receiver, G. Vanden Abeele, in whose favor the verdict was returned.

Some time ago two suits were begun by the executor of the estate of Charles Willis Ward to foreclose two mortgages,

Get Ready for Christmas

If you want to grow Cyclamens like these for next Christmas, you'll have to begin right now.

We obtain our seed from the best foreign and domestic growers, Ferd Fischer, Stuart Low and J. A. Peterson & Sons. Our plants are cool grown, well spaced and are sure to grow into money quickly if properly handled. Here is a list of varieties:

PERLE VON ZEHLENDORF, Salmon.
ROSE VON ZEHLENDORF, Salmon.
WANDSBEEK, Salmon.
PINK PEARL, Salmon.
ROSE OF MARIENTHAL, Rose.

GLOWING RED, Red.
CHERRY RED, Red.
ROSEA MAGNIFICA, Red.

We are offering fine 3-inch stock, excellent plants in every particular, at $15.00 per 100; $150.00 per 1000.

Of course if you wish us to grow them until fall we will have splendid 4 and 5-inch stock for you then, or, if you are in the retail business, you can buy them in flower, ready to sell, as you need them, throughout the season.

Whether it be plants or cut flowers, we are always strong in coming in with a big crop just when it is needed. The boys plan it that way. Just now they are working their heads off making up and shipping Magnolia Wreaths for Decoration Day. At the prices quoted below, lots of the florists would rather buy them than make them.

12-inch Frame, over all, 18 inches $1.00 each; $10.20 per dozen
14-inch Frame, over all, 20 inches 1.25 each; 13.80 per dozen
18-inch Frame, over all, 25 inches 1.50 each; 15.00 per dozen

If you prefer to make your own, we have Dr. Dux's Superiora leaves. Our first consideration is to give you exactly what you want. That has always been the policy of each in the sum of $200,000. The mortgages covered real estate and personal property. The actions were resisted by G. Vanden Abeele, receiver. Through his attorneys, Puter & Quinn, it was shown to the court that prior to the execution of the mortgage, March 12, 1918, the stockholders of the company increased the capital stock $300,000 and asked permission of the corporation commission to issue 3,000 additional shares of stock at the par value of $100 per share. The evidence introduced in the case showed that March 13, 1918, the board of directors authorized the execution of the $200,000 note and mortgages, which were executed March 15, 1918. March 21, 1918, the corporation commissioner objected to the execution of the mortgages on the ground that they were in excess of the amount allowed by law. Mr. Ward wrote the commissioner that as soon as the latter would grant permission to sell the increased capital stock he would accept such stock in lieu of his $200,000 mortgage. November 7, 1918, permission was granted and immediately thereafter Mr. Ward accepted 3,000 shares of the capital stock. It was shown that he had subscribed for this amount and that he accepted it and canceled the debt. Judge Sevier rendered his opinion in favor of the defendant, holding that the mortgage was fully paid. This is a victory for the creditors of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, for now they will receive all of the funds of the receivership; otherwise about five-sixths of such funds would have gone to the Ward estate.

The Market.

Hot weather last week brought a large quantity of stock into the market which was being held back for Mothers' day. Spring flowers are abundant at present, but, in spite of the flood of stock, the market cleans up well. There are plenty of carnations. Roses are coming in well and baby roses are no longer scarce. Easter lilies and calla lilies are still arriving and there is an abundance of such flowers as candytuft, gillyflowers, Supervisor Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., crowned the May queen, May 1. The little lady was Rosalie Soldate, and crowds of juveniles captured Funston park, where the pretty May day celebration took place. It was a municipal affair and Mr. Rossi acted as representative of the mayor.

Mrs. Darbee spent several days visiting the various growers at Santa Cruz, after which she motored to the Hotel Del Monte for a few days' rest. On Mrs. Darbee's return, Mrs. Gooch will spend a week in Sacramento. Much business has kept General Gooch at the store.

This firm will supply everything sold in the store and in some respects the store will resemble a branch establishment. The proprietor is S. Anderata, a scientific gardener who formerly had charge of large gardens in Venezuela, South America.

The Francis Floral Co. is now settled in its new store, 433 Powell street. This store is only a few doors from the former place of business of this firm.

San Francisco florists are preparing to extend a fitting welcome to their Shriner friends when the National Shrine convention meets here, June 12 to 14. Many of the northern florists are Shriners and most of them have signified their intention of attending the convention.

C. Kooyman has met with such success in growing valley in a room near a furnace for the building, at the rear of his store, that he has become an enthusiast over the project. "How easy it would be for the country florists to grow their own lilies of the valley!" he said. "All the bulbs need is water, when planted in a warm room, and it would be a wonderful thing for the isolated florist to cut valley whenever he had a call for it." Mr. Kooyman is going more heavily into growing valley next fall.

Mothers' day is going to see a much greater business rush than Easter did, according to J. A. Axell. "I am judging from the rush of advance orders for Mothers' day," he said. "Business was good at Easter, but it is going to be much better for Mothers' day. The trouble is, there will be the usual complaint about not being able to get enough stock, especially white carnations. Prices will soar up, and," added Mr. Axell emphatically, "that is bad for business."

The E. W. McLellan Co. is cutting a good many gardenias of fine size.

Enomoto & Co. have been growing with Mothers' day in mind and expect to have good crops of various staples.

Domoto Bros. have a fine display of potted, flowering azaleas, covered with bloom, as well as potted hydrangeas, roses, rhododendrons, palms and other plants and shrubs.

The Growers' Floral Co. is cutting statice of fine quality.

floral palls, May 1. William Paganini, of this staff, made a great hit with his whistling for the Fairmont radio concerts.

Frank D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is busy planting some of his special bulbs. He started May 1, because it was full moon. Mr. Pelicano says it is not a superstition, but a fact, that better flowers and better bulbs result when they are planted at full moon. Too few scientists, he thinks, have given enough attention to the influence of the moon on the earth's affairs, except in the case of tides.

F. C. Jaeger & Son found that sales for April were considerably ahead of those for the same month in 1921. "The reasonable prices now prevailing enable us to do more business, though we sell for less than we had to ask a year ago," said F. C. Jaeger, Jr. This firm is having a large sign and a special window prepared for Mothers' day.

plants have disappeared, and their place is taken sparingly with outside stock. Just now there seems to be an abundance of other kinds for present needs, but no large reserve in sight.

Some local news was discussed among the growers at the recent meeting of the association, which was quite interesting to all. It was imparted by the speakers. Mr. Chervenka, of the Woodland Park Floral Co., described a new seedling rose that the firm had developed and named Honeymoon. Another originated by the same company was a white sport of Tausendschoen that looks promising. A. A. Hinz, who knows geraniums when he sees them and grows thousands, told of a new one, scarlet in color, which he has developed. It is semi-double, a has developed. It is a semi-double, stocky grower and is named Tacoma Beauty. The Kenwood Greenhouses have a new single geranium which is an odd color in pink, named Lady Morris. H. W. Manike has developed a new carnation seedling from plants that he has been nursing along for ten years, and he is well pleased with the result. He has also succeeded in bringing out a tomato that grows in sprays two feet or more long and produces from twenty to twenty-five tomatoes on a spray, some of the fruit being as large as goose eggs.

Bedding plants are in big demand and moving well. The call for perennials is much larger than usual, the long, cold winter having killed many of them. Roses, too, suffered severely.

The regular shops and growers who have large overhead expense have to meet a marketing situation peculiar to this section of the country. The price for lilies, both wholesale and retail, was standard with them, and strictly adhered to. Now comes a large grower of foreign birth, not eligible for citizenship, from a city near Tacoma, with truckloads of the timely blooms, and peddles them in the stalls at a price that allows a cut of 15 cents per bloom to the consumer. That is the situation here on florists' special days at all seasons of the year. Those in the trade here are complaining against such unfair competition.

There is such an oversupply of daffodils on hand at this time that the trade is hard pressed to move the stock, while there has been plenty of tulips for all offerings. The red tulips clean up easily enough, but the yellow stock sells less readily. The cut of carnations has been increasing steadily of late, and better weather conditions have made for a decided improvement in color requirements. The run of roses has been varied; Ophelia has fallen off in quality, while Premier is even improved.

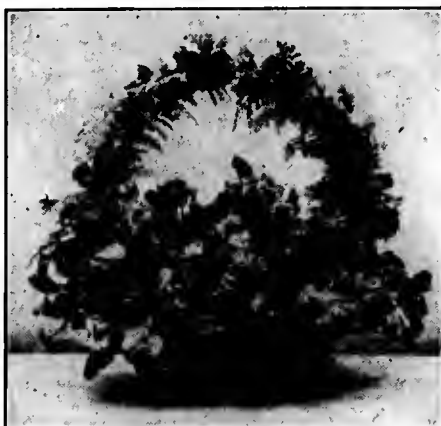

The sale of potted stock has been less active, with the exception of hydrangeas. Some fine stock is being offered at this time, the colors being better than is usual on this offering. Ferns are in slower demand and the recent movement of tulips has been lighter.

Funeral work has been holding up and, from present indications, there will be plenty of stock for Mothers' day. The local trade is again laying its plans to feature all flowers for this day and not carnations alone.

Various Notes.

Irving Harris, of the Bon Marche Flower Shop, has been enjoying a heavy demand for seeds. There has also been more of a demand for cut flowers from his customers.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop has been attracting comment of late over the fine windows which have been developed, using the current spring blooms and greens, along with pottery and

The Seattle Rose Society has asked the assistance of grower members of the Seattle Florists' Association in advising the general public as to the best types of roses for planting in yards and along the curbs as a part of the city beautiful scheme under way. Those florists who also handle shrubs and nursery stock say that this has been a distinct aid to business, and the seed sales have also grown.

GALLAGHER & STEVICK have acquired the seed business of Davis & Fine, Inc., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

ONION seed to the amount of 280,000 pounds planted on 55,800 acres in 1921 produced 25,300 earloads of commercial onions.

DEMAND for gladioli has been exceedingly strong this season, and a number of firms have cleaned up earlier than they anticipated.

THE demise of Fred W. Hunter, the well known wholesale seed merchant, of San Francisco, Cal., is noted on the obituary page of this issue.

FARM operations seem to be from two to four weeks late this year in most sections of the United States. It has upset the calculations of many others than seedsmen.

THE date of May 10 was set for opening bids for grass and field seeds for government use by the general supply committee at Washington, D. C. No specific quantities were set, but quotations were asked on lots of fifty pounds, on lots of fifty to ninety-nine pounds and in lots of 100 pounds and over.

THE average progeny of each pound of watermelon seed planted for the commercial production of watermelons in 1921 was 135 melons, it is stated. Over 450,000 pounds of seed were required to plant the total commercial acreage of 153,877 acres, from which 61,917 earloads of 1,000 melons each were produced.

THE building of the Manitowoc Pea Canning Co., Manitowoc, Wis., was destroyed by fire last week, causing $100,000 loss, only partly covered by insurance. It was not used as a cannery, but as a storehouse. The fire occurred on the thirteenth anniversary of the destruction by fire of a building which was formerly on the same site.

OF the $1,500,000 provided in the seed loan act for the relief of farmers in drought-stricken areas of the northwest, $784,734 had been lent up to April 30 to 6,361 farmers. Leon M. Estabrook, chairman of the seed loan committee, composed of officials of the United States Department of Agriculture, says that applications for loans for the purchase of seed have come in rapidly and that the entire sum available will probably be exhausted by May 15.

WESTERNERS HOLD MEETING.

The twenty-second annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at 10 a. m. April 29, at the Hotel Fontenelle, Omaha, Neb. This, the spring meeting, was presided over by President Fred W. Mangelsdorf. About thirty-five seedsmen attended the meeting and the time was spent in discussing future prospects, garden seed, etc.

The present officers and board of directors were reelected for the ensuing year, as follows: President, Fred W. Mangelsdorf; vice-president, Harold Chesmore; secretary, Max F. Wilhelm, and treasurer, Henry Windheim.

SOUTHERN SEEDSMEN TO MEET.

Those who attend the next annual convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association, to be held at the St. Charles hotel, New Orleans, La., May 29 to 31, will have the pleasure of hearing an instructive, as well as pleasurable, program. Joseph Steckler, of the executive committee, and L. B. Reuter, of the membership committee, both of New Orleans, are working hard for the entertainment of those who are going to attend. The program follows:

MONDAY, MAY 29; 10 A. M.

Address of welcome, by Mayor A. J. McShane.
Reply to mayor's address, by D. R. Mayo, Knoxville, Tenn.

"New Orleans and the Mississippi Valley," by Harold W. Newman, president New Orleans Association of Commerce.

President's address, by Joseph Steckler.
Secretary-treasurer's report, by F. S. Love.
Adjourn for lunch at 12:30 p. m.
Monday afternoon, delegates will be the guests of New Orleans on a trip on the Mississippi river aboard tug Sampson. The time will be specified at the morning meeting

TUESDAY, MAY 30; 9:30 A. M.

"Resources of Louisiana and Value of Good Seed from the Farmer's Standpoint," by Hon. Harry D. Wilson, Commissioner of Agriculture.

"Relation of Seed Laboratory to the Seedman," by James L. Burgess, Agricultural department, North Carolina.

"The Essentials in Building a Mail Order Seed Business," by H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.

"Advertising," by Fred I. Meyer, New Orleans, La.

Adjourn at 12 o'clock.
Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. cars will be at the St. Charles hotel to take all delegates on a trip through the city to the Southern Yacht Club, on Lake Ponchartrain, where lunch will be served at 1:30 p. m.

Tuesday morning, at 9:30 o'clock, a walking trip through the French quarter will be taken by the ladies. A competent guide will be provided.

The Tuesday afternoon session will be called at 3 o'clock. There will be a general discussion of the seed business, election of new members and committee reports.

Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, dinner will be served at the famous Louisiana restaurant.

Announcement will be made at each morning session of the several forms of entertainment in the city.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31; 9:30 A. M.

Executive session.
Election of officers.
General association business discussed.
Adjourn 12:30 p. m.

HOW LONG CAN A SEED LIVE?

As Determined by Experiment.

Probably no question concerned with plants has had so many contradictory and inaccurate answers as that dealing with the length of time a seed may retain its vitality. Wheat and other seeds have frequently been found in ancient Egyptian tombs, but a microscopic examination of such grain invariably shows that the embryo has acquired a brownish color and is practically destroyed. In no case would it be possible for it to germinate. Actual experiments have proved that out of 750 seeds of wheat stored under ideal conditions for sixteen years only eight per cent sprouted, and by the time the seed was from 30 to 35 years old no germination would take place.

While the power which many seeds and spores possess of retaining their vitality under the most adverse conditions is one of the most interesting phenomena connected with plant life, it is only recently that there have been made available any trustworthy data upon the maximum life of a seed. In 1907 Becquerel tested the germination of about 500 kinds of seeds, which had been preserved in the Natural History Museum of Paris. The ages of the seeds could be definitely determined, varying from 25 to 135 years, but the oldest seed (Cassia bicapsularis) which Becquerel succeeded in germinating was 87 years old. In the following year Ewart published a list of over 4,000 varieties of seeds which had been germinated after varying lengths of time. About 600 species recorded by Ewart were from seed which had been sent out from Kew forty years before, for a projected botanical garden at Melbourne, but were locked up in a cupboard and forgotten. As the results of the investigations of these two workers, it was possible to make a significant generalization about the types of seeds which show extreme longevity, namely, that all had exceptionally strong and impermeable coverings. Not only are coats of such seeds impervious to air, but they are likewise impermeable to dry alcohol, ether, chloroform and similar substances. These hermetically sealed seeds, therefore, are able to live longer because of protection from external influences. Interesting discussion of the subject appears in the latest issue of the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin.

Does Respiration Occur?

Some seeds retain their vitality but a few days. Others, if properly preserved, will germinate after years, and possibly, in rare cases, a century or more may pass before they are lifeless. In any case a fundamental question concerning the state of the living matter in a dormant seed remains to be answered. Are vital processes slowly but continuously going on within a seed or is everything at a standstill? Originally it was believed, because seed could be immersed in various toxic substances or kept in a vacuum for a year or two without loss of vitality, that there could be no gaseous exchange between the contents of the seed and the outside, says the article. Some investigators contended that respiration, that is, taking in of oxygen and giving out of carbon dioxide, continually takes place in dry seeds just as it goes on in living plants and animals. Certain experiments seem to prove that seeds can exist for a considerable time without any gaseous exchange with the outside world, since their walls have become absolutely air-tight. Hence, if there are any changes going on, each cell must be living on its own supplies, and the life of the seed is necessarily limited to the length of time required to use up such a source of energy. If, on the other hand, a dried seed has really entered into a state of "static equilibrium," in which no change whatever takes place, it should be capable of retaining its vitality indefinitely.

Becquerel prepared seeds by perforating their outer coats and drying them completely, after which they were placed in a high vacuum and deposited with the Bureau of Standards in Paris. They are to be tested every ten years, and ultimately we may know how nearly seeds are immortal.

Evidences of Extreme Viability.

Since plants unquestionably have appeared in regions where they were previously unknown, after the soil had been opened up by digging or dredging, it was concluded that the seeds must have been preserved alive for long periods, because buried more or less deeply in the earth. Of course, there has never been adequate supervision of such cases, and invariably it has been found that the plants recorded as appearing under such conditions do not have particularly long-lived seed, at least when preserved in air. Rather extensive experiments have further demonstrated that it is not true that seeds preserve their vitality longer if buried in the soil, but that they will keep much better in air if perfectly dry.

The appearance of unusual plants in regions cleared by forest fires has been regarded as another evidence of the extreme viability of seed. While it is true that some seeds which have lain dormant in the earth for a considerable length of time may be germinated through the heating of the ground, there is no authority for the idea that plants originating under such circumstances have come from seeds which have lain in the soil an extraordinary length of time. The possibility of their being carried by birds or other animals, or by wind or flood, cannot be disregarded.

not shed their seeds until the tree or branch that bears them dies. In 1874 Dr. Engelmann collected a branch of P. contorta from Colorado and, after keeping it in St. Louis for four and one-half years, he sent it to Professor Sargent, of the Arnold Arboretum, to test the seeds. The results showed that at least some seeds of this species are capable of germination after retention in the cones for ten years, and experiments conducted in the seed laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture demonstrated that seeds of this same pine 30 years of age were still capable of germination.

All investigators are agreed that the viability of ordinary dried seeds is unaffected by exposure to extreme cold. What was regarded as a most remarkable fact at the time was the finding in January, 1899, by some members of the Peary arctic expedition, of seeds abandoned by Lieutenant Greely eighteen years before, which during this period had been exposed to a winter temperature of from 60 to 70 degrees below zero. Twenty-three years after these seeds were harvested some of them germinated, and this demonstration of the ability of seed to withstand low temperature was then cited as one which would not likely be repeated.

MOTTLY MUSINGS

Charles H. Atkins has been appointed landscape gardener of East Rutherford, N. J., and will have charge of the parks. He will also act in an advisory capacity with the shade tree commission. Mr. Atkins is a brother of F. L. Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins.

"Observe these wounds," said Harry Payne, of the Sunnyside Greenhouses, Dover, N. J., referring to some stock plants of geraniums injured in a severe hail storm, and incidentally mentioning that possibly last summer and fall this popular plant received the severest setback known in many years. A fine stock has been prepared for Mothers' day, while the planting season in this region extends until July 4.

Alonzo J. Bryan, Washington, N. J., sees no diminution in the mail order trade for bedding plants; rather the reverse is the case. This trade was worked up by judicious advertising, backed by the goods.

The Herriek Greenhouses, Hacketts-town, N. J., are strong on Ophelia and Columbia. The latter variety is 3 years old and the pride of the grower, William Hart, a former American Beauty grower of note at Madison, N. J. He has one planted at every upright in the rose houses. Mr. Hart says that they pay, though not in large numbers.

Arthur Taylor, Boonton, N. J., is the recipient of congratulations on being appointed postmaster of this town, which, being located in a nest of mountain summer resorts, is of considerable importance. A flower store fills a long felt want and is well supplied from the greenhouses adjoining the Taylor residence, conveniently located a short distance from town.

John E. Lager, of Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., is in the hospital undergoing an operation for an infection of the ear.

The Sayre Floral Co., Sayre, Pa., is steadily developing a shipping plant trade, in addition to the home retail branch in plants and cut flowers. It is the intention, according to C. L. Waltman, one of the proprietors, to add one house every alternate year, since there is ample room for expansion and soil that seems peculiarly adapted to cyclamens, a specialty with this firm. Vinea variegata is another special item. About 28,000 plants are ready in the cutting bed to be planted outdoors and later to be lifted and potted into 4-inch pots. Carnations are in equally large numbers. About five acres of land are piped with the Skinner irrigation system, the only thing, in the opinion of the other partner, H. F. Merrill, who has charge of this branch. Grower Scott, a son of Cornell University, has charge of the roses. Columbia and Butterfly are the leaders. A fine lot of Dracæna indivisa in 4-inch and 5-inch pots was also noted. It is the purpose of the company to follow up the footing already gained through advertisements in The Review, so that it may become known as a specialist in the lines now being offered.

Ira G. Marvin, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., commenting upon the grand display of tulips in the city square, notes an increase in the sale of both bulbs and plants. He paid tribute to the city fathers for their liberality. Mothers' day business looks good in the face of the coal strike, the effects of which are being felt in all lines.

"Up to our eyes with the combination of the seed, nursery and flower departments," observed G. R. Clark, Scranton, Pa., who, as secretary of the Scranton Florists' Club, gave interesting details of the illustrated lecture given at the last club meeting to a full attendance by Curator N. R. Davis on the fauna and flora of Panama. The city forester and director of public works also attended. Members J. L. Dillon and Mr. Stradle, of Bloomsburg, Pa., were among those from a distance.

J. B. Knapp, Sayre, Pa., is adding a house for bedding plants, of which about 12,000 geraniums alone are in fine shape and which are expected to find new homes around Mothers' day and later. Carnations are in crop and will help swell the treasury, as there is a reported shortage and an advance in price.

Dana R. Herron, Olean, N. Y., says Carnation Belle Washburn never fades there. White Wonder and Enehantrass Supreme complete a trio of leaders. "Words fail me," observed our worthy confrere, "to describe the wonderful Laddie seen growing at C. Merkel & Sons' place, at Mentor, O., where a man is kept busy picking the whole day long." Mr. Herron said that although the company has been forced out of its store by a fire, which compelled the transfer to the greenhouses, where an office has been fixed up, the firm's business, apparently, had not suffered; rather, the pleasing reverse. The fire was put out by an explosion at the soda fountain.

John D. Rudy, Elmira, N. Y., has every foot of greenhouse space filled with fine stock for Mothers' day and Memorial day.

A. H. Woepel, Corning, N. Y., commenting upon diseased lily bulbs, opines that unless there is a whole house where a night temperature of 70 degrees can be maintained through the winter, the small grower may as well give up the attempt to force lilies. He forms his opinion as a grower of both Harrisii and giganteum since they were first introduced and as one who handles bulbs from the most reliable importers. A new house, 25x100 feet, is under con-

Carnegie's Milking Stool

Suko the Jap surprised us the other day by saying a saying of Carnegie's.

We were talking about our $5 Hobby Box, Happy Hap Fern and Tisket Tasket Basket when Suko remarked:

"Why, Mister Stumpp, you stool have three legs only wear? Mister Carnegie he one time spoke that no stool good much what four legs not have. You three things 5 dollars for, very good so far is, but no far go enough. Stool need leg one more.

Why not rose tree vase what cost by himself over $3? Then him fill roses with and sell $5. Not make money any, but everybody say pleasant things about how Mister Stumpp give for money much.

It make leg number four on stool so F. T. D. business he solid sit down, no wobble."

So we promptly took Suko's advice and the silver etched rose tree vase, filled as you see it, is now the fourth leg of the $5 stool.

On every F. T. D. order for it we lose a dollar. You make a dollar.

We charge that dollar up to advertising. It will do us both good.

struction to take care of bedding stock, that usually at this time crowds out carnations, which, it is found, cannot be sacrificed, since they are in demand until outdoor blooms are available. Bedding stock and sweet peas are fully up to the usual high standard of quality.

The Hoffman Nurseries, Inc., Elmira,

N. Y., is the new title of the old and well known business founded by Harry N. Hoffman, who now has handed the helm to his two sons, although he still retains an active interest, particularly in the nursery and landscape work. The old range will be torn down this summer and rebuilt at the new location, where two horses, each 36x200 feet, of steel-

Flowers and Giving

"Consider the lilies of the field." How bountifully they bloom, how freely and fully they give of their loveliness and sweetness.

Brother Florists, we give to you our kindly thoughts and best wishes. Let us make this Spring-time very beautiful. "He that soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully."

frame construction, are completed, with four more of the same size now to be added, along with an office, work-room and basement for cold storage, with complete under-cover arrangement for the handling and shipping of stock. The beautifying of the approach to this modern establishment will be the special pleasure of Harry N. Hoffman himself.

The Rawson Flower Shop, Elmira, N. Y., has passed through one of its best seasons, according to Manager Frank Durand. Grower Oswald has a fine line of both plants and floral conceits for Mothers' day.

Manuel Oppenheim, Olean, N. Y., returned from a tour of the neighboring growers and found stock in fine shape for Mothers' day. As a leading retailer, he makes the store attractive at all times to remind the public of the firm's purpose.

The Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., in a special Mothers' day advertisement calls attention to the stock of roses and carnations produced under the supervision of Grower Carl Reich.

The Charles N. Cotter Co., Jamestown, N. Y., expects a banner Mothers' day business, based upon the past and present conditions; prices will be steady, with stock not overabundant.

James & Sons, Hornell, N. Y., will have a choice line of cut flowers and flowering plants for Mothers' day. They are well pleased with the way business keeps up.

Every day florists from surrounding towns take away truckloads of bedding stock from the United States Cut Flower & Plant Co., Elmira, N. Y., a thing unthought of before the era of good roads. This, of course, leads to the production and consumption of more plants, of which the limit is not yet.

George A. Heelas, Jamestown, N. Y., reports a steady climb in volume—not such large profits, but, nevertheless, healthy business. Our worthy craftsman is an authority on birds. This knowledge helps the business.

Eliot Worden, Jamestown, N. Y., finding it impossible to expand, owing to the rapid rise in value of the home place, is looking for a nearby site for the purpose of building a large range.

W. A. Wettlin, Hornell, N. Y., has a fine stock of cannas and dracaenas in 3-inch pots, growing at the farm in virgin soil. The finest cannas and gladioli were grown here last season. A fine selection of imported bird cages was noted. The sale of birds has become a valuable side line.

Elmer Rawlings, Allegany, N. Y., has the two new houses, each 25x200 feet, with low concrete beds, planted chiefly with Geraniums A. Ricard, Beaute Poincettine, Mrs. E. G. Hill, S. A. Nutt and Jean Viaud. These are in largest demand and promise to clean out the entire supply of rooted cuttings in short order. Commenting upon the increase in the business of rooted cuttings, Mr. Rawlings credited it jointly to advertising in The Review's classified columns and careful attention to keeping stock true to name, a most important factor where it passes through many hands often before flowering. A variegated-leaved, double sweet alyssum was noted. It is a great

The Market.

The consignments to the seven wholesale cut flower markets were heavy all last week, while the demand was fairly good, but not large enough to consume daily receipts.

The retailers say trade last week was dragging and, outside of funeral work, business was dull. This week business in all lines should be good. Several large weddings and social functions and Mothers' day, May 14, are expected to create a large demand, which should consume all consignments coming into this market during the week.

Carnations were up one day and down the next. The supply was large all week and the growers fear an off crop by the end of this week, just when the blooms are needed for Mothers' day. The stock coming in is of most excellent quality, especially the Enchantress varieties, Betty Jane, a local favorite; Edna and Nebraska.

In looking over the various wholesale markets daily last week, one found that the receipts in sweet peas were the heaviest in years and, in order to give room for morning shipments, the prices bowling ball. The booby prize, won three years in succession by A. Hoffmann, Sr., was contained in a large carton, carried in by two men and placed on the head table. When the box was opened, a live negro baby hopped out and handed Mr. Hoffman a silver ash tray and a lot of vegetables. A special prize for the bowler who made the least errors was won by J. J. Beneke, as he made only two on this night. This prize was a gold watch chain. Then the band played "Ain't We Got Fun?" "Tuck Me to Sleep," and "Smiles." Everyone present had a jolly good time. The third bowling banquet will long be remembered.

A special meeting has been called for May 16 to decide on advertising for Memorial day. With the cooperation of the retailers for this day, another full page will be contracted for.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Flower Show Association held its meeting May 3, at 3 p. m., in publicity headquarters. In the absence of Chairman J. F. Ammann and Vice-chairman H. G. Berning, W. A. Rowe presided. The statements of the secretary and treasurer were approved by the committee. The various chairmen of committees reported the working of their committees. Chairman W. C. Smith, of the hall committee, was requested to make the first payment of $500 of the week's lease on the coliseum in which the show is to be held. The secretary reported a considerable number of requests from outside growers for preliminary lists. The next meeting of this committee will be held June 6.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners held its monthly meeting May 3, in the municipal greenhouses, on Oakland avenue. President George Pring presided during the evening. A memorial service was held for Charles Muehdorfer. It was also decided, beginning next month, all meetings would be held outdoors at the various private places and parks. Secretary Hugo Schaff reports the attendance was large.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held their monthly conference at the home of President W. A. Rowe, at Kirkwood, and decided that this week's club meeting would be held at publicity headquarters and an interesting program was planned. Special notices will be mailed by the secretary. Beginning with June, meetings will be held outdoors for five months.

Frederick W. Pape, city park commissioner, addressed the members of the World War Registrars and their relatives at a meeting of the organization in Vandevort's Music hall, May 4. Mr. Pape's address was on the plans of the park commission to complete the planting of 900 trees along Kings highway, which will form the Gold Star court.

The many friends of Benjamin M. Duggar, president of the Garden Club of St. Louis, expressed their sympathy in the loss of his wife, who died May 4. The funeral was held May 6 from her late residence at 12 Hortense place.

Stock will be far short of the demand for Mothers' day. There will be a fair supply of everything in this market, but, from the number and size of orders being received for the last two or three weeks, local growers cannot take care of the demand. Roses and carnations are in greatest demand; both are of good quality, and there is every reason to believe that what will be cut in the next week will be up to the standard of the season so far. Prices will of necessity be higher than at Easter. Weather conditions in the next few days will determine whether many peonies will be cut. These flowers have been counted on for May 14.

Various Notes.

J. C. Lambert, of the Ove Ghatt Co., was in the city May 5 and 6.

C. J. Tucker, manager of Longview Farm, has gone to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Frank Fittinger, of Herington, Kan., is visiting her sister, Miss Bernadette Lucier.

Adolph D. Mohr was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis at his home Thursday, May 4. He was removed to the Vineyard Park hospital and was operated on at 7 p. m. that evening. His condition was critical for a time, but he is slightly improved.

Longview Farm is planting new rose stock. Two benches of the new white rose, Angelus, and one bench of young stock of Premier have been put in.

The Alpha Floral Co. is cutting gladioli. The first lot was brought in Friday, May 5.

Earl T. Lacey said that Henry Kusik & Co. had a Mothers' day business Saturday, May 6. That day closed a busy week.

Wholesale Cut Flower Co., has returned from a road trip and will remain in the house until May 15.

Glenn K. Parker, manager of the Stuppy Supply Co., received a message from Boston, May 6, stating that Frank X. Stuppy had been operated on at 1 p. m. that afternoon in the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, in Boston. The telegram stated that Mr. Stuppy was resting well, but that no one but the physicians and attendants could see him for twenty-four hours.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. is getting in good cuts of roses and carnations daily. Many orders for gladioli have been booked.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. will handle 25,000 southern Easter lilies for Mothers' day. Shipments of these have been coming of late and many have been sold. The blooms are fine, from one to five on a stalk. These lilies will also be received for Memorial day.

Mr. Preston, of the Preston Floral Co., El Reno, Okla., was in the city several days last week. He placed an order for Mothers' day with the Stuppy Supply Co. J. E. K.

ers' day is looked forward to with great interest and it is expected to surpass last Mothers' day. This was the case with Easter. Although sales now are for smaller amounts, there are more of them. This may be due to the fact that so many flower buyers were overseas and, since they have returned, business is on the upgrade.

Pot plants are much in demand now, but the variety is small and many customers go away dissatisfied. Roses will be plentiful, which will help a great deal for this next holiday. Darwin tulips are still plentiful and early peonies will soon be in.

Florists here are going to push everything but carnations for Mothers' day, since it is feared that public sentiment will be so aroused that it would be better not to handle any carnations at all rather than displease customers with exorbitant prices.

Various Notes.

ered from his recently reported illness.
I. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, was here on business last week. J. W. T.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Wholesalers and growers report a glut of all classes of flowers, although the retail stores find their business holding up well, because of the large number of funeral orders received. In addition, there is considerable entertaining and there are any number of conventions, bringing thousands of strangers into the city. Over and above all that, it must not be lost sight of that Washington is the biggest tourist city in the world. Hotel accommodations are taken up to the limit; so, of course, the retail business is good.

Wholesalers and growers complain that the retailers want to place orders for white carnations only and do not want any of the colors at all.

The sellers, on their part, are anxious to divide the business, because there is no profit in selling only one kind and having all others go to waste. One wholesaler stated that it is not so much effecting a sale as seeing to it that a fair distribution is made of the desirable carnations among all of the retailers.

Advance quotations on selected white carnations hover about $15 per hundred, with $12 the asking price for all other desirable stock for Mothers' day business. A considerable number of orders are being placed, with still more "feelers" being sent out to see if sales will be made by growers and wholesalers at $12 per hundred for A-1 stock. Last week, however, the advance prices remained firm at the higher figures and indications are that retailers delaying the placing of Mothers' day orders are likely to get left entirely.

into the market in such quantity as to drive the prices down materially. Good flowers can be had at from $30 per hundred up to $7.50 per dozen on a few selected grades. Other roses are good as to quality, but they are coming into the market in such quantities that it is impossible to move them all and a great waste occurs.

Darwin tulips are still arriving in heavy quantities, prices ranging from $6 to $8 per hundred. The quality is good, but it is not possible to clean up each day's offering. This is practically all there is in the way of bulbous stock on the market just now.

Sweet peas are good and can be had at from $5 to $15 per thousand. Easter lilies are bringing $2.50 per dozen and are in some demand. Extra fine snapdragons sell at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. There is plenty of good outdoor valley to be had, the price ranging from $2 to $4 per hundred.

Carnations have been plentiful and the growers report a reasonably good outlook for Mothers' day. The influx of these flowers during the last week caused prices to "fade" and, while there was plenty of inferior stock moving at low prices, there were enough excellent carnations to be had at under $5 per hundred.

The movement of short-stemmed sweet peas and the cheaper roses and carnations has been slow, on account of carts, which are kept in motion, but the sale of flowers to the vendors has fallen off materially and the growers are looking to the better grades to make up this loss.

Various Notes.

Considerable progress is being made on the two new greenhouses being erected for Gude Bros. Co., at the northeast range. The grading has all been completed and the material is on the place ready for the workmen. The top and side ventilating hoists are being supplied by the Evans Construction Co., of Richmond, Ind., and the balance of the material, other than the rough lumber, is being furnished by the King Construction Co. These houses are to be 40x200, and Mr. Gude states that when they are completed work will be undertaken on the construction of three more houses of similar size. The two houses now under way will be used for the production of carnations and potted plants.

Miss Amelia Gude, daughter of William F. Gude, is driving a new Hudson sedan around town.

Miss W. Eileen Low, daughter of the head of the firm of Stuart Low & Co., of Bush Hill Park, Middlesex, England, reached Washington last week and visited points of interest around town. She was much interested in flower production in this city. The firm of which her father is the head has produced a carnation, named in her honor, which approximates Laddie.

Other visitors were Anton and Miss Gertrude Schultheis, of Scranton, Pa.; I. Rosnosky, of Chicago, and E. Thorsen, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia. These called on the local trade in the interest of their concerns.

The Market.

Last week showed great activity, which was refreshing for a change. Stock cleaned up finely all week, with the exception of the first day or two. A few items, such as white roses and bulbous stock, were not cleared, but most stock disappeared.

From all present indications, stock for Mothers' day is going to be extremely scarce. Carnations, especially, will be scarce, since nearly all growers in this section are off crop. From all indications, the demand for Mothers' day flowers will be enormous.

The quality of bulbous stock is not so good as it has been, but some stock, fine for this time of year, is appearing. Longer roses seem to be off crop; the majority that come into the market are short or medium. Easter lilies and callas are scarce, while violets are about done for. Some excellent lupines are arriving at present, while calendulas and sweet peas are still in excellent condition.

Various Notes.

The Ohio Floral Co. has taken over the greenhouses formerly owned by Herman A. Hart and reports an excellent business.

Jack Levine, with the M. H. Levine Co., New York, called on the trade last week.

The florists' dance held May 9, at Conklin's dancing academy, proved a great success; a large number were present. Those who did not dance particularly enjoyed the radio concert, which was a special feature of the affair. All are looking forward to another gathering in the near future.

James MacLaughlin, of the McCallum Co., has a new Dodge touring car. The Cedar Flower Shop has a new Ford delivery car.

in huge quantities each year, have already made their appearance in retail shops and in department stores.

April was extremely dry, with considerable cold weather that retarded vegetation. However, the drought has been broken by a northeaster which prevailed for more than forty-eight hours, drenching the lands considerably. Rain was badly needed to check forest fires, which have been raging in this section.

Wide-awake florists are already advertising Mothers' day in the local press.

Herbaceous stock suffered considerably during the winter just past. Hollyhocks and digitalis were a total loss.

The Grand Army chapter of this city has decided to eliminate flowers for decoration on Memorial day, pleading as an excuse the scarcity of last year, when, it is stated, members were able to place only one carnation on each grave. E. A.

The Market.

Market conditions are about the same as they were last week. The supply is normal, but stock moves slowly. Some days the demand is greater than on others.

Carnations are only fair at present and the price is $4 per hundred. Roses are fine and the best are bringing $25 per hundred and shorter grades $4 to $15 per hundred. Darwins have been fine, although there is a scarcity. They have been bringing $6 per hundred.

Snapdragons have been plentiful and have ranged in price from $1 to $2 per dozen. Easter lilies find ready sale at $2 and $2.50 per dozen and at present there are more buds to the dozen than flowers, the ratio being about 3 to 1. Callas are $1 and $2 per dozen. Orchids are $1 and $1.25 each. Gardenias are small and scarce. Outdoor valley is plentiful now and the prices are $2 and $3 per hundred. Sweet peas are bringing $1 per hundred. Potted plants are scarce.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day will soon be here and the florists are preparing for a heavy sale of cut flowers. Let us hope that there will not be a big advance in market prices. Mother deserves to be remembered by everyone and the best way is to "Say It with Flowers." Let us not make it prohibitive.

Charles Feast and wife and Robert T. Paterson attended the F. T. D. directors' meeting last week at Detroit. The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held May 15. A number of important questions will be taken up at this meeting and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

The fifth monthly meeting of the Erie Florists' Club, of Erie, Pa., was held the first Monday in May. President John V. Laver presided. Several new members from Erie and nearby towns were received into the club. Plans for coöperative advertising for Mothers' day were completed, and attention was called to the fact that other trades are going after Mothers' day business. Entertainment and publicity committees were appointed. Lively discussions concerning prices and credits completed the evening.

"Album of Designs"

EDITION

With this Album the Florist can show his customers, in handsomely printed pictures, how the completed design will look. It makes it easier to close a sale and leads to bigger and better orders.

No other book for Florists ever has enjoyed so large a sale or been so universally used as The Review's "Album of Designs." Six editions have been sold. A seventh and revised edition now has been printed. 96 pages, over 200 designs and decorations.

Single Copies, postpaid . . . . $ 1.25
Per dozen, postpaid . . . . . 12.00

Why show your trade an old, soiled Album when you can get a fresh, clean new one, postpaid, for only $1.25?

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

It was a hard winter on evergreens in the middle west. With little snow and alternate freezing and thawing, the losses were considerable, both in nursery rows and in permanent plantings.

THE number of nurserymen among the 13,000 readers of The Review is greater than the number of those who pay to receive any other trade periodical. Good reason for this showing lies in the fact that in the Nursery Trade Department of this paper they get all the news and get it first.

No nurserymen's movement has won so much support in so short a time as has the Illinois campaign to "Plan to Plant Another Tree." It would be profitable to them if nurserymen in other states could, in return for financial support of the campaign, induce Secretary J. A. Young to send the weekly clip sheet to the newspapers of their respective sections.

A CONTEMPORARY, in proclaiming that it carries twice as much nursery advertising as any other weekly, evidently has overlooked the Classified columns of The Review. Under the various headings are from twelve to fifteen columns of nursery advertising each week, which is about as much as the aforesaid contemporary carries on both display and classified pages in issues other than those of which an extra thousand or more copies are distributed gratis.

FARE TO A. A. N. CONVENTION.

The railroad passenger associations have arranged a one and one-half fare for the round trip for attendance at the annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Detroit, Mich., June 28 to 30, on condition that certificates for 250 tickets be presented to the secretary at the convention.

One-way tickets going to the convention will only be sold June 24 to June 30, inclusive, but be sure when purchasing your going ticket to request from the agent a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. Certificates are not kept at all stations. Inquire from your agent several days ahead of time, and if he has no certificates, request him to get several. If he is unable to do that, simply purchase a local ticket to the nearest station where certificates can be secured, and then buy your one-way ticket to Detroit and ask the agent for a certificate.

As soon as you arrive at the convention be sure to deliver your certificate to the secretary in order that he may ascertain if the necessary 250 certificates have been received in order to get the one-half fare for the return trip. A special agent of the railroads will be in attendance at the convention, June 28 to 30, inclusive, from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., to validate certificates. If the necessary minimum of 250 tickets is presented to the special agent and your certificate is duly validated, you will be entitled, up to and including July 4, to a return ticket via the same route over which you made the going journey at one-half of the regular one-way tariff fare.

The return ticket issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train on which reduced fare transportation is not honored.

TEACHING TREE SURGERY.

There is on display in the department of botany at Brown University, at Providence, R. I., an exhibit on "Tree Surgery." This exhibit is one of several prepared for educational purposes, to be shown all over the United States in the next few months, for the purpose of demonstrating proper methods of treating diseased or injured shade, ornamental or fruit trees. The display consists of a series of panels containing portions of trees and colored photographs, with abundant explanatory matter, showing methods of removing branches, guying limbs, treating wounds, preparing and filling cavities, protecting trees from danger, etc.

The exhibit was prepared by Prof. J. Franklin Collins, of Providence, formerly head of the department of botany in Brown University and now pathologist in charge of the office of forest pathology maintained by the United States Department of Agriculture in collaboration with Brown University. Professor Collins has made a special study of tree surgery for many years, with the idea of bringing scientific knowledge into this popular field to replace many quack practices now in vogue, and, in addition to standardizing the practice of tree surgery, he has invented two new, superior types of tree filling, which are subject to public service patents.

The secret of a beautiful lawn and healthy trees

The Tribute of J. A. Smith to Davey Tree Surgery

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc.,
Kent, Ohio.

Brookline, Mass.

Gentlemen:

The secret of producing and maintaining a heavy, velvety growth of grass on a densely shaded lawn, is told in one word: CARE. I care for my lawn in the proper way at the proper time, and in spite of the shade produced by five large Elm trees, am able to keep a uniformly beautiful lawn the year 'round.

The trees on Mr. Walton's estate receive proper care by the Davey Experts, and while the first treatment was rendered a little more than one year ago, there is from one-quarter of an inch to one inch of healing around all the wounds treated by them. I am convinced that Davey men are the best in their profession, and it is a pleasure to recommend them to all who desire the best in the care of trees.

Very truly yours,

J. A. Smith (Gardener).

Every gardener and estate superintendent has a most important work in the saving of trees under his care.

Davey Tree Surgery brings to his aid the highest development of science plus a generation of experience. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

in 3-inch and 4-inch pots for spring sales? Should they be left in pots in hotbeds or would it be better to keep them under glass? O. F. C.—Mich.

If seed of hardy delphiniums is sown in early spring, the plants will make good clumps before winter and may be left outdoors. It is best not to sow seed of digitalis until the middle of June. The latter will withstand winter weather if given a light protection.

PROPAGATING HEDGE PLANTS.

I have a hedge of Iboia privet on one place and one of Berberis Thunbergii on another. When should I trim them, in order to use the cuttings for rooting? M. E. F.—Ill.

Ligustrum Iboia propagates freely in summer in an ordinary propagating bench or frame; the latter is preferable. Use sand placed over manure and loam, and spray the cuttings freely, keeping them close and warm until rooted; then gradually harden them off and leave them exposed as fall advances. Carry the young stock over winter in the frames and line them out in nursery rows in spring, as soon as the ground has dried and planting is possible. Allow ample space between the rows for cultivation by hand or horse.

Iboia privet roots more easily from soft and half-ripe wood than from mature wood. If you want to try the latter, allow the plants to become well ripened; then cut off the shoots and remove all the foliage, if any remains. Tie the cuttings in bundles and pack them in damp earth in a cold cellar over winter. In spring line out the plants, burying them two-thirds of their depth and taking care to firm them well.

Berberis Thunbergii is best grown from seed, which should be collected in late fall, stratified in dry sand and sown in flats in a cold greenhouse in winter and in a coldframe or even outdoors in a bed before the ground freezes. The seeds will germinate during late spring or summer and can be transplanted the following spring. C. W.

SOMETHING NEW.

Dr. Walter H. Snell, of the department of botany at Brown University, Providence, R. I., has recently published an article in one of the scientific periodicals describing a new plant. This plant is a rare one of the group of fungi, having a peculiar manner of growth. Its existence has been known for several years, but, although searched for by all the leading mycologists of this country, has never been found in a condition which would allow it to be determined or given a name.

Dr. Snell made a persistent search for it in his travels over the northern tier of states in this country and in southern Canada during several years, and was rewarded a year ago by finding it in the mature condition so long sought for. Dr. Snell made a study of it, classified it and gave it its name, Septobasidium Pinicola.

The plant is an unusual one, found growing on the bark of the eastern white pine. It is inconspicuous and would appear to the casual observer as a moss or lichen. It appears to live entirely on the outside of the bark of the pine, but careful study under the microscope shows that the fungus begins its

THANK YOU, MR. MAJORS.

"He who serves best prospers most." It is axiomatic and for many years it has been the guiding principle in the publication of The Review. It is interesting to note how it looks from a little distance. Like this:

The Review, as usual, brought home the bacon, for we are nearly sold out. If all lines of business in this country had as efficient a trade journal as the florists have in The Review, times would always be soft.—C. E. Majors, Denison, Tex., May 1, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

HOW LONG CAN A SEED LIVE?

Since that time seeds have been exposed to the temperature of liquid hydrogen (-250° C.) without deleterious results. Some contend that this proves the seeds must necessarily be in a state of static equilibrium, since all chemical change must be in abeyance in such extreme cold. On the other hand, it is believed by many that any change would only be indefinitely retarded by the low temperature.

Seed Coats Impervious to Moisture.

Plants resort to various expedients to prevent their means of perpetuation through seeds being destroyed by heat, drought or excessive moisture. As a general rule, the thinner and more permeable the seed coat the shorter-lived the seed, although sometimes the seed coat may be relatively thin and yet impervious to moisture, as in the case of the garden pea. Again, the long life of the seed may be due to the excessively hard or the abnormally thickened seed coat, and germination may not take place for several years after the seed has been exposed to favorable conditions. At one time a machine was devised which, by means of an air blast, forced closer seeds against rough iron plates, and these, by scratching the seed coats, rendered them all equally permeable to moisture, and germination was more or less simultaneous. Still another method has been to submerge hard-coated seeds in strong acid, certain kinds being capable of standing this treatment for several hours without injury. Germination is thus secured within a reasonable length of time instead of requiring years.

An interesting instance of the adaptability of plants to meet special conditions is found in Nelumbium speciosum, the sacred lily of India, the seeds of which, if sown as soon as ripe, germinate under water in less than a month. Should the seeds once get hard by being removed from the water, it is almost impossible to break them, and years may pass without germination unless the coat has been scratched or filed. When this is done, however, and moisture admitted, they will germinate within twenty-four hours. The value to the plant of such a seed is that, should the pond in which it is growing dry up and the seed fail to fall into water, it can lie dormant awaiting a return to its natural aquatic habitat. It is interesting to note in this connection that seeds of nelumbium have retained their vitality for the longest period authentically determined thus far. Robert Brown, an English botanist of the early part of the nineteenth century, records that seeds of nelumbium were sent by Sloan to the botanical department of the British Museum. A hundred and fifty years afterwards he found them in the original boxes in which they had been transmitted. Brown himself succeeded in germinating these seeds, and there seems no reason to doubt the accuracy of his account. At the present time this stands as the record for the longevity of seeds, and, owing to the nature of the nelumbium seeds, it is reasonable to suppose that they might retain their viability for such a period. However, in the case of wheat and similar seeds supposed to have lived thousands of years, no credence is to be attached to the sensational assertions as to their longevity.

SEATTLE NOTES.

to secure good results on the sale of special boxes of ferns and spring potted plants, as well as on the single items in these classes. There has been a good increase seen in funeral work.

The City Flower Shop handled one of the largest fraternal floral pieces developed lately and has been enjoying a good run on this class of business of late.

Rosaia Bros. report a heavier cut of Premier roses at the greenhouses and also an increase in the supply of orchids. There have been some big lots of corsages ordered for recent dances, some of these being of unusual designs, but the larger orders are still slow in starting. A special showing of roses was made in the large window on Third avenue during the week, Japanese parasols and sweet peas being combined with these flowers.

There was a good attendance at the last meeting of the bowling committee of the Seattle Florists' Association, and members are training actively to try to wipe out the recent defeat when they visit Tacoma for the return match.

Bedding stock has been in heavy demand with the patrons of the Art Floral Co. This shop notes, as do most of the ones handling this stock, a larger sale on pansies this year than in previous seasons.

Despite the fact that he has been featuring dahlias for a number of weeks, Henry Morgan advises that there is a keen demand for them; also, for other planting stock.

While now equal to late weeks, the shipping is running considerably ahead of that for this time last year for the Seattle Fern & Moss Co.

Felix Rosaia has been featuring daffodils and other seasonable cut flowers, with good results. He reports a heavier sale of potted plants.

The showing of roses at McCoy's has been excellent of late, and an increased cut of carnations at the greenhouses is reported.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. reports an increased transient business, both on potted offerings and cut flowers. It has been making a special showing of the latter.

The Market.

Last week business changed considerably for the better; in fact, the demand for carnations far exceeded the supply and the majority of all good carnations sold for $6 to $8 per hundred, while Laddie sold at $10 to $12 per hundred. The supply of roses, however, seems just about sufficient to meet the demand; the varieties are White Killarney, White Ophelia, Premier, Columbia and Richmond. During the first part of the week there was a large supply of Easter lilies on hand, but the latter part of the week the supply was used up and the demand was quite brisk. Good callas were also in demand. American Beauty roses were in moderate supply, but the demand was limited. The cool weather during last week has improved considerably the stock of sweet peas. There have been some fine Darwin tulips received in the market during the last week, in various shades of red and yellow. The demand, however, was limited. Some fine yel-

PRIMULA OBCONICA IN DESIGN WORK.

PRIMULAS AS CUT FLOWERS

By using our December sown stock, you can have the Primula obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

The Illustration Shows a Corsage Bouquet.

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

The Strain that Leads has proven its quality; there are none better. Prompt shipment now from 2-inch pots, $7.50 per 100 in any quantity and any color of the grandiflora or gigantea.

Later sown stock, ready the middle of June, of the same strain, $6.00 per 100; $55.00 per 1000.

low daisies were in the market, with extra long stems, and they were cleaned up daily. Outdoor lilae is also seen in quantities, but the demand is limited. Southern gladioli are making their appearance and also some fine greenhouse-grown gladioli are to be had and are moving at fair prices. There have been plenty of greens, such as plumosus, coontie leaves, leucothoe and brown galax, to take care of the usual demand. Southern ferns are also on the market and will relieve the demand for fancy ferns, which the florists have been using during the winter months.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting Thursday evening, May 4, at the Hotel Chatham. There was a heavy rain storm just about the time the members were expected to arrive and, for this reason, the attendance was small. It is certainly hoped that the florists will keep these dates in mind—the first Thursday in each month—and arrange their affairs so that they can attend these meetings.

E. J. McCallum, president of the McCallum Co., is with the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce on its annual Golden Rule tour through the principal towns of Ohio and eastern Indiana. The party will be gone for about a week.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. moved into their new quarters May 1, and, after alterations are completed, the store will be one of the most up-to-date in this community.

Recent heavy frosts have injured early fruit and vegetation to a great extent in this section.

Charles S. Crall, of the I. S. Crall Co., Monongahela City, reports business exceptionally good. One of his specialties for Mothers' day will be Easter Greeting pelargoniums, of which he grows large quantities.

Recent visitors in the city were John Boeh, of Blairsville, Pa.; Mrs. M. E. Ready, of Donora, and Mrs. McQuire, of the A. Krut Floral Co., Butler, Pa.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING HOUSES AND LEAN-TO.

We have under consideration plans for the building of a greenhouse, 35x200 feet. The walls are to be eight feet to the gutter, four feet of which will be glass and the other four feet either concrete or boards. There will be a glass partition in the center of the house, one-half of the house to be heated to 60 degrees and the other to 50 degrees, with the outside temperature going as low as 40 degrees below zero. We expect to build in addition to this house a 50-foot lean-to and another house 12x200 feet. How large a boiler will be necessary to heat these houses if steam is used? How should the piping be arranged? The benches will be solid. Would it be a good policy to install a boiler just large enough for our needs or should we make it a trifle larger than that required by the above-mentioned range?

B. F. & S. Co.—Ore.

To heat the proposed range a horizontal, tubular boiler of about fifty horsepower will be required. Although not strictly accurate, it will be sufficient for all practical purposes if the boiler is considered to be twelve feet in length, has fifty 3-inch flues and a rating of fifty horsepower. If the flues are less than three inches in diameter, either the number of tubes in the boiler must be increased or the length of the boiler should be proportionately increased.

To heat the two 200-foot houses it would be advisable to run a 5-inch main along the partition in the center of the houses, and for the 35x200-foot house run three 2-inch feed pipes in each direction, placing one feed pipe on each side wall plate and the other under the ridge. In addition to these, supply in the west end of the house, if this is selected as the house to be kept at 60 degrees, seventeen 1¼-inch returns. Run twelve returns in the east end of the house for 50 degrees. Reduce the supply pipe to 2½-inch, and continue it into the house 12x200 feet. To heat this house run one 2-inch supply pipe to either end, and, with each pipe, feed six 1¼-inch returns for 60 degrees or four returns for 50 degrees.

For the propagating house, if six feet wide with two feet of glass in the side wall, use one 1½-inch flow pipe on the back wall and four 1¼-inch returns under the bench. For a greater width of house increase the number of returns proportionately.

If it will not be difficult to locate the boiler so that the water level will be four feet below the returns in the houses, it would be advisable to use a gravity system; otherwise install either a steam trap or an electric pump.

While it would be advisable to use a slightly larger boiler if the temperature ranged as low as 40 degrees below zero for a considerable portion of the time, in this case the boiler recommended will be found more economical than a larger boiler when the temperature is less than 10 degrees below zero.

HEATING A ROOT CELLAR.

We have a root cellar in which until recently were stored some canna bulbs. On one exceptionally cold night these bulbs were frozen, causing a loss of about $75. The walls of the cellar are made of concrete blocks, a concrete coating, tar paper, a 4-inch tile and two coats of plaster. The blocks are laid in cement mortar and keyed with cement. The ceiling consists of three layers of paper and three thicknesses of ear siding. The entrance is closed by a paneled inside door and a storm door, made of two thicknesses of flooring, with a thickness of rubberoid roofing between. There is a 4-inch ventilator in the ceiling, which was left open, and a drain in the floor. The doors and windows were closed, but there were small cracks in these. A 12-inch tile flue runs into the room from the boiler, but even this did not keep the frost out. Can you give me any information that will tend to clear up the mystery of how the frost could have possibly gotten into this cellar? C. E. H.—Ill.

It is impossible to see how the walls of the house could have been made much warmer without going to much greater expense. An air space between the concrete blocks and the tile would have been helpful. Some uncertainty exists as to whether the roof is directly above the cellar or whether there are one or more stories between the cellar and the roof. In the former case, it will certainly be advisable to provide an air space. On the other hand, however, if there is an unheated room over the cellar, the floor might be covered with a foot or more of straw or hay.

It is stated that the doors and windows were closed against the frames, leaving small cracks. Not only should all doors and windows fit tightly, but they should be double, using shutters to cover the windows. The temperature should be carefully noted and when it approaches the danger point, the ventilators should be closed. Some arrangement should be made to provide for the artificial heating of the cellar when necessary. Oil stoves answer this purpose, but we note that the boiler room is nearby. It should be an easy matter to run a steam pipe into the cellar, for use in severe weather.

Just why the cannas froze, when potatoes have been wintered safely in other years, it is hard to understand, without knowing the exact conditions. It is possible that a high wind caused the frost to penetrate. The cracks around the windows and doors may have been larger than in previous years and, with the open ventilator, so much heat escaped that the temperature dropped below the freezing point. The fact that there was no frost on the walls would indicate that there were strong air currents.

TORONTO, ONT.

There has been a steady demand for flowers, but business is by no means booming. Toronto florists have been doing considerable advertising, both individually and coöperatively, to stimulate trade, and with good effect. For several weeks the retailers advertised consistently in large space in the evening papers. For Mothers' day the growers have been asked to coöperate, with the result that advertisements appeared in quarter-page space in the Star Weekly and Sunday World of May 7, and the same advertisements are to appear in the four daily papers during the week preceding Mothers' day. The public has been advised through these advertisements that flowers are particularly beautiful and plentiful at this time of the year and that flowers can be delivered to a mother anywhere in the world. The advice is given: "Step into the nearest flower store."

Some beautiful Mothers' day windows are being prepared, all the florists entering into the spirit of the day. They expect to supply flowers at the usual prices and expect the usual big demand, or even greater, with the lower price of flowers.

Bedding plants are selling freely and the florists dealing in them state that the demand is unusually heavy this year. Boxwoods and decorative shrubs are selling freely.

Mrs. Ellen Mary Miller, wife of the late F. C. Miller, founder of the florists' business of Miller & Sons, died last week. She was in her eightieth year. She leaves three sons: Fred Miller, B. W. Miller and E. T. Miller. J. J. H.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Slogan Widely Used.

It is noticeable that with the recent resumption of magazine advertising the outside use of our slogan is rejuvenated. In the rotogravure section of the big New York Times, May 7, a photograph of a society lady who took part in a function in aid of a charity appeared, in a setting, "Say It with Flowers," the slogan being prominently featured; the lady evidently took the slogan as a pleasing theme for a character part which she portrayed to excellent advantage. Even the stately Congressional Record, it is said, features the slogan in its report of a discussion. The Washington Times refers to the fact as follows:

"The difference between an 'alliance' and 'entente cordiale' is all in how you say it, according to Senator Reed (Dem.), of Missouri, one of the Senate's most formidable foes of foreign treaties. If you 'Say It with Flowers' it's an entente cordiale, according to Reed, while if you 'say it' with force, it's an alliance."

There is no doubt whatever that it pays handsomely to keep our slogan going. The more it is seen, the more use is made of it—just what is wanted. Who shall say that it cannot be made the most popular slogan of the times? Has anyone ever thought of the tremendous price the florists could obtain for it, were it possible to transfer it, with all its prestige, to a different line of trade?

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business has been a trifle better than for some time past and, with plenty of stock and prices easy, the demand has cleaned up the market each day.

One of the most noticeable features in connection with the florists' business in this city, at least as regards the retail end of it, is the growing tendency toward coöperative advertising in the daily newspapers. Already the trade has commenced a systematic announcement regarding Mothers' day. There is no denial that the coöperative and systematic advertisement of Easter contributed materially toward making it a banner holiday.

Various Notes.

F. Maeræ's Sons are preparing for a general overhauling and renovation of their greenhouses, on Smith street.

The budget for Providence for the next fiscal year includes $79,000 for Roger Williams park.

George A. Carmichael, of Shannoek, made an automobile trip through central Connecticut last week on business.

Samuel Resnick, of Bowers & Resnick, was a business visitor in Boston and vicinity last week.

Eugene McCarron, of Hope street, reports an unusually brisk business on small weddings since Easter.

The salary of Joseph Triggs as superintendent of parks, of Providence, has been advanced from $48 to $60 per week.

Charles W. Flagg has been elected a trustee of the Oak Hill Cemetery Corporation, at Woonsocket.

City Forester Alexander H. Johnson last week cut down the city's largest and, probably, its oldest tree, an elm about seventy-five feet high, with a spread of more than 100 feet, and believed to be more than 250 years old.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting of the club at the Hollenden hotel was well attended. There was something doing all the time. The president reported that the sending of flowers to all hospitals Easter Sunday went over in fine shape. It took over 4,000 flowers to see that everyone was taken care of. Several musicians went along and some of our best singers.

The club went on record again as telling the committee that the one per cent for advertising plan was to have been started May 1. If a few hold out, it will cut no figure. Cleveland florists are for it from now on. A 2-page advertisement used by St. Louis florists was exhibited, showing what a wonderful success St. Louis made. It cost the St. Louis florists $4,200 and no one felt it.

A special get-together dance was held May 9 at Conklin's hall. The entertainment consisted of a radio concert, refreshments, special stunts and cards for the older members. These monthly get-together meetings are doing a great deal of good. The growers and florists in and around Cleveland have a chance to meet each other here, which means better business coöperation.

Nearly all of the florists are in favor of a fall flower show. Why not? It would be good advertising. Over 255,000 people went to the building exposition held here recently. Business is coming back strongly and by fall we should be ready to have a real show.

Herman P. Knoble was missed at the May meeting of the club. He was at Detroit attending the F. T. D. meeting.

It was reported that we were just nine new members short of President McLaughlin's desired 100 new members for this year. Everyone be sure to come to the meeting to be held June 5, for then we are going over the top. It will be a jollification meeting.

One of our members has got the show habit right. He knows what the State theater flower show did. He is going to put on a real show in the lobby of the Homestead theater, May 11 to 13. A. J. Borges, manager of the Floral Service Co., will be in charge.

A. T. F.

ADVANCE CO.

What the name implies

MR. FLORIST or Grower, our constant aim is to supply you with materials that are of the most value to you at a reasonable cost. In doing this, our years of experience, combined with the suggestions of our customers, have brought about important changes in designs and added a number of entirely new Fittings to our supplies. These values cannot benefit you without your co-operation with us in letting us show you what we have, through our eight page circular. This year gives you a guaranteed, non-breakable, can't slip, truss constructed, sash arm, with automatic stop, at maximum opening, and the now widely known grooved split tee. These are the results of advanced ideas and are of interest to you regardless of whether you are building or not. We lead, others follow. Advance Sash Operating Devices and Greenhouse Fittings cost no more and their worth is double. A card brings complete information.

CYCLAMEN

OYOLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

In offering our block of 300,000 TRANSPLANTED OYOLAMEN SEEDLINGS to the trade, we can emphatically recommend them as a superior grade of plants, in as much as we have specialized on OYOLAMEN for years, and are constantly improving our strain and methods of growing.

Through the use of a specially prepared compost, we have produced wonderful root action and a fine foliage, in fact we have never had a finer lot of seedlings of the very best known varieties. We established a new record with our OYOLAMEN plants last fall when we shipped them in full carload lots to the East.

Remember—Our plants have no trace or sign of the mite or any other diseases OYOLAMEN are subject to.

Orders booked in rotation. Satisfaction guaranteed.
